Samizdat!

It really is a new era in governance. This past week the salt on display across forums and Reddit at Ajit Pai has been a continually joyous chorus of shitlib temper tantrums. He continually plays them like a fiddle, responding to their mean tweets with bantz and drinking from a comically oversized Reese's Peanut Butter Cups mug. It has been absolutely glorious to watch. I went to all the stores here that carry American goods, but I couldn't find any Reese's. It sounds so delicious right now, it is a weight upon my soul to not be able to taste them again enhanced with the added flavor of salty liberal tears.

Trump's appointees take on facets of his personality. Trump has not just been a force unto himself. Those around him are becoming animated in a way we haven't seen in federal politicians within our lifetime. Trump has breathed life into government as a whole, to counter the rot and decay that we've seen out of Washington our entire lives. Who would have thought that an FCC Chairman would ever have had a sense of humor this good? You've got to wonder if he ever shitposts on 4chan.

I think we're going to see a lot more greatness out of the Trump administration. I know many of you are dissatisfied with the current progress, but you have to admit that just the sheer scale of lulz from the wailing and gnashing of teeth on display by degenerates makes Donald J. Trump the greatest President of our lifetimes. Even if he falls short of his goals he'll be better than anything that we've seen since Andrew Jackson. However, one must remember that it is a common feature amongst fascist leaders to rule under the pretense of Democracy. Mussolini acted constitutionally from 1922 until 1925, when he finally revealed that another election would be entirely unnecessary. Vargas did similarly, ruling lawfully from 1930 until 1937 until he was like "yeah I'm dictator now."

There's plenty of time for Trump to break bad, cast off all the shackles of rule of law, and rise as an Emperor to put down all those that oppose the advancement of the white race. In the meantime he's definitely been the best thing that's happened within my lifetime. I'm going to sit back, sip from a big mug, and enjoy the lulz. Forsake the blackpill, get yourself a groyper avatar, and know that the future ahead of us is glorious. Making America Great Again is something we are going to do, and we're going to get there by furiously shitposting and making the lives of nonwhites, faggots, and trannies absolutely miserable. All we have to do is keep in mind how we got here: drinking tea and posting factual information in a friendly manner.

I've got my hatefacts, a cool rare groyper, a steaming cup of genmaicha, and I'm posting as hard as I possibly can. I'm ready for this racewar, fam.

America's $22 Million UFO Monitoring Program

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 17, 2017

This might not seem like a lot of money for the government, but it is a lot of money in a general sense. Also, they are almost certainly lying about how much money was spent on this.

Especially to waste on UFOs. Obviously, these UFOs are not happening. If they were, people would be filming them left and right now that everyone has a cellphone. For whatever reason, as soon as cellphone cameras became widespread, people totally stopped reporting UFO sightings—because if they did report them, people would be like “okay show me the video”!

Yes, yes. I get that the aliens would be aware that people have cellphones now and might be stepping down their sky activities...but just generally, UFOlogy is a stupid discipline. No one has even explained why they would be constantly flying around.

If you want to spend millions of dollars studying aliens, do some studies on Graham Hancock's Fingerprints of the Gods.

Ancient aliens are actually plausible and there is no money going into that.

RT:

The Pentagon spent $22 million to study UFOs in a 2007-12 program whose existence has been confirmed by the Department of Defense. An official formerly in charge of the program told media it remains alive to this day.

The secretive program, which the US Department of Defense has been keeping under wraps, was brought to light in simultaneous reports by Politico and the New York Times on Saturday, citing interviews with people involved or with knowledge of the program, as well as contracts, and Pentagon and Congressional records.

“The Advanced Aviation Threat Identification Program” was led by former military intelligence official Luiz Elizondo, who resigned from the Pentagon on October 4. In his resignation letter to Defense Secretary James Mattis, seen by Politico and the NYT, he lamented the lack of funding for the project and the fact that it continues to be shrouded in mystery, away from the public eye.

Pentagon spokesperson Dana White, cited by Politico, confirmed that the program existed up until 2012, when it was wrapped up as “there were other, higher priority issues that merited funding,” she said, adding that it was in the Pentagon’s “best interest” to redirect funds.

However, Elizondo said that even without its generous funding, the program was still alive, telling the New York Times that he was working with CIA and Navy officials on the issue up to his resignation. Upon leaving the Pentagon, Elizondo said he left a successor to keep running the program, but did not reveal their name.

Research within the program, which was initially launched at the behest of Harry Reid, the Senate majority leader in 2007, was carried out by private contractor Bigelow Aerospace, a company owned by Reid’s close friend and firm believer in extraterrestrial life, billionaire Robert Bigelow. The company and its subcontractors would store supposed pieces of UFO wreckage in specially repurposed buildings, collect witnesses’ accounts and study those who claimed to have encountered the objects to detect potential physiological changes.

Yes, it figures Harry Reid was behind it...

This guy is a fruit.

Reid enlisted support of two other lawmakers, Ted Stevens, the late Republican senator from Alaska, and Democrat Daniel K. Inouye, representing Hawaii. Stevens, who was the chairman of the Appropriations Committee, claimed to have had an encounter with an unidentified object when he served in the US Air Force. The program’s funding, Reid believed, should not have not been debated publicly in Congress. “This was so-called black money,” Reid admitted to the Times.

From 2008 to 2011, Bigelow Aerospace landed nearly $22 million for Congress for the purposes of its extensive research and evaluating threats coming from the objects, according to the contracts cited by the paper.

One of the encounters, examined within the program, was a 2004 incident over San Diego, involving two F/A-18F fighter jets and an unidentified white object. The detailed account of the encounter was given by Chris Mellon, a former member of Senate Intelligence Committee, who is engaged in a new initiative, spearheaded by Elizondo, called To the Stars Academy of Arts & Science.

“Two F-18s approach, the four aviators see that the object has no wings or exhaust—it is white, oblong, some 40 ft long and perhaps 12 ft thick”, Mellon said, describing the incident at the launch of the project that is aimed at deepening the research into the UFOs in October. As the pilots attempted to chase the aircraft it turned toward to the jets only to take a position behind them in a few moments in what Mellon called “a series tumbling maneuvers that seem to defy the laws of physics.”

On an undated video of another incident, provided by Pentagon and published by the Times, an oval-shaped object the size of a plane is seen rotating in the air at a high speed to the apparent disbelief of the pilots, who say that there was “a whole fleet of them.”

Speaking at the conference in October, Elizondo told the public that during the years of managing the program he became convinced that “the [UFO] phenomena is indeed real.”

Yeah, who knows.
Maybe it is.

I would strongly doubt it is aliens though if it is. At least not from space. Possibly interdimensional beings of light, which cross dimensions under certain specific circumstances.

There have been some weird events, but there have been so many hoaxes and exaggerations that you just assume the weird events are themselves hoaxes of some kind.

Anyway, I’m open to the idea. Don’t want to shut it all down. But realistically, I just have a hard time going along with the idea that alien ships visit earth and are undetectable on approach but are detectable just flying around doing nothing for no reason.

I want to believe and so on.

And I do think aliens probably have to exist somewhere in space, because it is allegedly infinite and that is what “infinite” implies.

But a lot of this stuff is just too dumb.

Boomer “Racist” Dragged Out of Starbucks by THE COPS for Telling Gooks to Speak English

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 17, 2017

Video Link

The whole “speak English” thing is explicitly not racist. It is boomerism: they transmute their racism into “culture.”

Newsweek:

A woman was kicked out of a Starbucks in California for a racially insensitive remark to two college students speaking Korean.

South Korean international student Annie An was at a tutoring session with Sean Lee, a South Korean native and UC Berkeley student at a Starbucks in Walnut Creek, California when a patron approached them after hearing the two speak Korean.

“This is America. Use English only,” said the unnamed woman, who was sitting nearby using a laptop, according to An.

An continued to film the woman as Starbucks employees were asking her to leave, KRON reported.

“I hate it,” the woman says in the video. “If you can sit and be quiet, fine, but I don’t want to hear your language.”

Starbucks employees continue to ask the woman to leave. “They’re welcome to be here, they’re doing nothing wrong. You’re the one that’s causing an issue,” an employee tells her.

“You’re gonna be in trouble when I get this letter out,” the woman responds. An employee points out that she’s just tapping numbers on the keyboard.

Another employee tells her if she doesn’t leave, they will call the police. Three officers later escorted the woman out of the coffee shop. The woman continued to complain about the students speaking Korean as she was forced to leave, according to An.

The video went viral and has been viewed by over a million viewers and has been shared over 5,000 times by Friday on Facebook. Many Facebook users were outraged by the woman’s comments.

If this woman had been a racist, instead of saying “this is America, speak English,” she would have said “this is America, straighten your slanted eyes!”

She would also probably be targeting someone other than Korean exchange students, who aren’t exactly the greatest threat to the racial integrity of our nation.

I mean, I always compare the Asian countries to the kind of racism we need, and I would think it was weird if I was in an expensive coffee shop in China and some Chinese woman told me to speak Chinese.

But here's the thing: people are agitated. But boomers cannot express their agitation in a healthy way due to their brains being hardwired for these simple conflict-resolution strategies. So this woman is taking all of the angry over the blacks, the Mexicans, the Moslems—the full takeover of our country by brown people—and putting it in the only place where she believes she's allowed to put it, which is “cultural assimilation.”

Except you can't do that anymore. That is now racist too. And the reason it is racist too is because the boomers refused to hold the ground on race. You don't win a battle by retreating to lower ground as you are being surrounded. That isn't good military strategy and it isn't good culture war strategy.

But that's where we are now. Which is why we must reclaim the high ground: instead of “this is America, speak English” we need “this is America, be American—and that means WHITE.”

Canadian Conspiracy Theorist Talk Radio Host Fired by Jewish Conspiracy for Talking About Jewish Conspiracy

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 17, 2017

I used to be into the conspiracy scene, way back when. I have listened to Spaceman a few times.

Strangely, Gary Bell was an exact parallel of the American Art Bell. Same style of delivery, same topics choices. He even has a similar voice. They are allegedly not related (could be a conspiracy tho).

I haven't listened to the November 11th episode, but I would assume it was just “we've talked about every other conspiracy theory, let's talk about the Jewish conspiracy theory.”

And of course, after literally decades of illuminati-freemason-reptillian-UFO talk, he is immediately kicked off the air for saying the word “Jew.”

Surely, that will make illuminati conspiracy theorists take pause—because there most certainly is a power that cannot be named.

The Star:

Citing complaints of anti-Semitic content on a Nov. 11 episode, Corus Entertainment has fired veteran broadcaster Gary Bell, ending his weekly Saturday night radio show on AM640.

“I can confirm that Mr. Bell has been terminated from his employment with AM640 and Corus Entertainment,” said company spokesperson Rishma Govani.

“We sincerely apologize to our listeners and anyone else who was offended by Mr. Bell's egregious comments. Corus Radio recognizes that our broadcast licences are a privilege. Therefore we are taking strong and immediate steps to ensure such an incident at is never repeated,” Govani added.

The show, entitled A View From Space, featured commentary from Bell, a.k.a. Spaceman, on conspiracy theories. The show ran from 11 p.m. to 2 a.m. during the NHL season and from 8 p.m. to midnight in the off-season; a digital archive of episodes online stretches back to 2004.

He has been on the air since the 1970s.

And this is how he goes out.

Saying the J-word.

Surely, the Jews understand that when someone suggests you might be part of a conspiracy, you don't respond by openly engaging in a conspiracy to silence them.

At this point, there is very little left of the old conspiracy movement, as everyone in it understands that the Jews are responsible for everything. And once you understand that, you don't need the theories: you can just use the facts.

Alex Jones, king conspiracy himself, had to abandon the movement and move into more mainstream Fox News talking points (with a little bit of spice). But he's struggling to find a niche, given that he isn't as far right as Tucker Carlson.

Coast to Coast AM has now moved into new agey spiritualism stuff almost exclusively (along with holding down the UFO niche, which will exist regardless).

Looking at it in retrospect, the conspiracy movement was made-up of a lot of Jews alongside the conmen (Jones) and genuine crazies (William Cooper). It existed as an extremely profitable way to confuse the goyim with gibberish as they searched for answers as to why the world is so messed up.

It's good it's gone now. A relic like Spaceman losing his job for mentioning Jews is a fitting end.

I suppose Spaceman will just come back on internet radio (Rense will have him), but if he does, he's going to have to talk about Jews.

Here's the episode in question.

Anti-Meme Activist Matt Furie Threatens Steam Over Pepe Icons!

Adrian Sol
Daily Stormer

December 17, 2017

You think you can kill a meme, Furie?

Matt Furie is a desperate loser whose only claim to fame is pretending to have invented Pepe, even though everyone knows the true creator of Pepe is a hacker known as 4chan.

Seeing how Pepe's star is falling, displaced by the younger and fresher upstart Groyper, he decides to attack not only meme enthusiasts, but the PC master race itself.

That's right—he's fucking with the Gaben.

You're making some dangerous enemies for yourself, Matt. I hope you can handle it.

The Verge:

Steam has removed icons featuring Matt Furie's cartoon frog Pepe from its platform, part of Furie's larger legal battle to wrest the character away from the far right. As reported by Kotaku, users began complaining yesterday that Pepe and Pepe-like emoticons had disappeared from their inventory. The developer of a game called Make America Great Again: The Trump Presidency wrote that they'd removed their emoticons after Steam received a legal order. "If we sign a thing that says [Furie] can sue us and not them Valve will put it back up," they wrote. "At the moment we're not going to sign that because going to court is...bad even if we're right."

If I had meticulously collected rare foil Pepe icons, only to have them taken away by some douchebag, I'd be mad as well.

They're just...gone. Only a black void remains.

Furie's lawyer August Louis Tompros told Kotaku that he didn't proactively single out Steam. "A Steam user let us know that there were Pepe images being sold on the site, and that they were being used on that site by people in connection with hateful speech. We asked Steam to take those down, and it appears that it has done that."

Furie has previously pledged to stop anyone from misappropriating Pepe, who originally appeared in the comic Boy's Club, "in any way that espouses racism, white supremacy, Islamophobia, anti-Semitism, Nazism, or any other form of hate." He filed a successful complaint against the author of a children's book that used Pepe's likeness in a veiled anti-Islam allegory.

Furie's thoughtless actions have only accelerated the collapse of the Pepe market.

Look at these prices...This is a disaster.

Most investment-savvy members of the Alt-Right have already sold all the Pepe stocks and are moving their holdings to Groyper-based properties, which knowledgeable experts are quite bullish about.

Matt Furie believes that he can salvage his life and career by taking down all the Pepes on the internet, leaving him with the only remaining stock. But demand for Pepes is falling. No matter how much he tries to lower the offer side, there's no hope for him. This is what happens when you're a one-meme man.

Not only is Furie against all other memes, but he believes he has a right to determine how people should use his favorite one as well.

Sad.

Now, as a result of his assault on Steam and it's lord Gaben, it is believed that both the forces of 4chan and the PC master race will wage an eternal war of revenge against him.

Grope News: Jew Gene Simmons and Bugman "Supersize Me" Vegan Propagandist Morgan Spurlock Get a Taste of MeTooism

Adrian Sol
Daily Stormer

December 17, 2017

He was made for groping you—all nite.

GROPE NEWS!

We've got some choice victims today. And I need to preface this by saying that I've always hated KISS—A totally mediocre pop-rock band with forgettable songs propelled to superstar status simply because of their Jewishness.

But yeah, clown-faced-tongue-man-in-chief is being taken down by the usual non-ense stories.

Daily Mail:

KISS rocker Gene Simmons is being sued by a woman who claims he groped her during the grand opening of one of his restaurants in California last month, it was reported on Friday.

The unidentified woman says that she interviewed Simmons as part of the opening of Rock & Brews in San Bernardino.

Simmons, 68, is a co-owner of Rock & Brews, a rock n'roll-themed restaurant chain that offers American comfort food.

Paul Stanley, Simmons' band mate with KISS, is also a co-owner.

I'm a simple man. I like burgers—and I like em' Jewish. Rock and Brew delivers the goods.

At the opening last month, Simmons reportedly sat down for an interview with the woman, according to TMZ.

During the interview, the woman claims Simmons reached over and grabbed her hand. He then allegedly placed her hand on his knee.

In her lawsuit, the woman says that this made her feel uncomfortable. Nonetheless, she continued with the interview.

He's getting sued because he touched a woman's hand!

Good!

I hope this bastard pays for all the crappy music I've had to endure because of him. If there's any justice in this world, he'll face jail time for "Rock and Roll All Nite."

Next up is bugman documentary film-maker Morgan Spurlock, known for his famous piece of vegan propaganda, "Super Size Me."

It's my pet theory that he actually got sick on the vegan slop, and then ate McDonald's for a month to recover, reversing the order in editing to make a more hip film.

Daily Mail :

Morgan Spurlock's latest documentary will not premiere at the Sundance Film Festival as planned.

The remaining partners in his production company said Friday that they removed "Super Size Me 2: Holy Chicken!" from the Sundance slate in light of Spurlock's confessions of sexual misconduct earlier this week.

Good!

Super Size Me was a scam in the first place—another documentary film-maker had to do a rebuttal to explain how stupid his logic was.

Basically, this retard went and ate at McDonald's for a month and got sick. Of course, McDonald's is shit, but the issue is mainly that he ate like 5000 calories a day with tons of soda. He then does a vegan diet and miraculously recovers.

Yes, if you eat nothing but leaves and grass, you're going to lose weight. You'll also lose weight by eating nothing at all, which is basically the same thing.

This is not human food, retards!

Warrior Poets partners Jeremy Chilnick and Matthew Galkin said in a statement that "this is not the appropriate time" for the film to premiere.

YouTube Red, which was to distribute the film, also had a change of heart.

YouTube said Friday it would not release the film, according to the Hollywood Reporter.

He can't even be on YouTube! Ha!

Even I have a Youtube channel! He's fucked.

What did he even do, anyway?

Spurlock said Wednesday in a lengthy online post that he was accused of rape while in college, settled a sexual harassment case with a female assistant at his office eight years ago, and has been unfaithful to all of his wives and girlfriends.

Well, it's probably no more than the average bugman. The "rape" in college was probably just some kind of drunken pity fuck, in which the girl regretted it afterwards and accused him of rape to make herself feel better.

None of this would have happened if only he ate paleo instead of vegan.

Bitches love men who eat meat.

So we did break some new ground today, with "holding a girl's hand" and "cheating on your girlfriends" now being added to the list of things you can be sued for / have your career ruined over.

Exciting times!

Editor's Note:

The "Supersize Me" response documentary is pretty good.

This guy goes to McDonald's every day and actually loses weight.

Video Link

The only thing I would say is: don't actually do that. McDonald's "beef" isn't really beef, except for the Quarter Pounder.

Nonetheless, he makes good points about fat/carbs, etc. It's much better than gay-ass vegan propaganda film "Supersize Me."

The Truth About Hanukkah: It's a Fraud

Diversity Macht Frei

December 17, 2017

Video Link

I took a break from posting this week to research the history of Hanukkah. Like almost every other aspect of Jewish history, it turns out to be a fraud.

Until recently, Hanukkah was considered an insignificant festival, even for Jews. It is not one of their major holidays. But, starting in the 19th century, American Jews began to big it up and push it on the goyim, supposedly so their children wouldn't feel left out over the Christmas season, more likely as a calculated vitiation of the foremost Christian festival, a deliberate defilement of Gentile unity.

For those inclined towards "TLDR", I've left the most in-depth historical background and analysis to a skippable second section.

Almost all of the information that we have about the "Revolt of the Maccabees", the events that form the basis of the Hannukah celebration, comes from the 1st Book of Maccabees and the 2nd Book of Maccabees, both written by Jews. So, as is so often the case, even in modern times, what we are left with is the Jew version of history. And, as in more recent historical episodes such as WW2 or the “Russian” Revolution, conscious effort must be made to take alternative perspectives into account.

Video Link

According to the Jew version of history, the one whose basic outlines are repeated by Theresa May and Donald Trump, the Seleucid king whose kingdom included Judea, Antiochus IV, developed a sudden hatred of Jews for no reason and decided to suppress all the particularities of the distinct peoples within his realms and enforce uniformity of customs and laws among them. Non-Greeks had to adopt Hellenic ways. As a calculated taunt to the Jews, he had a pig sacrificed in their temple, banned circumcision and slaughtered Jews who remained loyal to their religious law. This precipitated the “revolt of the Maccabees”. Again according to the Jew version of history, the Jews fought heroically against superior odds, eventually winning their independence.

Now let’s get to the real version of history, the kind you don’t hear mentioned by presidents and prime ministers, but find only in obscure academic tomes.

First, Antiochus IV didn’t develop a sudden hatred of Jews for no reason. The Jews had mounted a violent rebellion while he was off invading Egypt. This distinctive pattern of Jewish behaviour, the “stab in the back at a critical moment”, has been a speciality of theirs down through the centuries and has often provoked intense antagonism.

Second, the struggle, fundamentally, was between various corrupt Jews vying for office with one another. Just as, in the modern world, Israel has been described, even by Israeli newspapers, as a virtual gangster state; in ancient times, things were no different. Supreme power in the country rested in the hands of the High priest. This office was held originally by Onias. His brother Jason then approached Antiochus IV and offered him a large bribe if he would appoint him high priest instead. Since Antiochus IV needed money (partly because of the growing threat from Rome) and didn’t care much one way or the other, he said yes. So Jason became high priest. Another Jew, Menelaus, then approached Antiochus IV and offered an even larger bribe if he could become high priest. Again, the king said yes, dismissing Jason and appointing Menelaus.

When Antiochus IV was forced to turn back from his invasion of Egypt (see more on this below), there was a false rumour that he had been killed in the fighting. Jason, the ousted former high priest, gathered an army and attacked the other Jews in a bid to seize power. This was the fighting that Antiochus construed as a rebellion against his rule.

The origin of the conflict, then, had nothing to do with a proud assertion of national independence against a tyrannical foreign overlord. It was instead a familiar tale of corrupt Jews vying for an important office which they could then use to exploit their fellow Jews and extract money from them.

Moreover, it had nothing to do with proudly Jewish Jews challenging other Jews who wanted to go Greek. All of the corrupt Jews were Hellenisers. They all recognised the superiority of Greek culture and civilisation and wished to see their fellow Jews embrace it.

Later, other Jews resentful of Greek ways did get involved. These people, known as the Maccabees, rejecting the Greek spirit of rationalism and inquiry, the essence of European civilisation, preferring instead to cling to Oriental superstition. These Maccabees were the Jewish equivalent of the Taliban or Islamic State in our own time. When western leaders celebrate Hanukkah, this is who they are honouring.

Intriguingly, one of the complaints the Jews had about Antiochus was that he was forcing them to accept the immigration of non-Jews.

“And that he should settle strangers to dwell in all their coasts, and divide their land by lot.”

In their Hanukkah fable, Jews celebrate their resistance to exactly the kind of nation-destroying diversity they now impose upon European Man through puppet rulers such as Theresa May. The fact that ignorant goy rulers are made to impose death by diversity on their own peoples while celebrating Jewish resistance to the same could be construed as a ritual humiliation intended to add mockery to the crime of White Genocide.

The background to the events that form the basis of the Hanukkah celebration is as follows.

After Alexander the Great’s death, the territories that he conquered were divided up into smaller kingdoms ruled by his generals and their descendants. The Seleucids were one of these dynasties, ruling Syria; the Ptolemies were another, ruling Egypt. At the time the conflict broke out, Judea was under the control of the Seleucid king, Antiochus IV. All of the kingdoms formed from Alexander the Great’s conquests became repositories of Greek culture and radiated Hellenistic influence around them.

The Seleucids and Ptolemies vied for dominance of the region through a long series of wars. Although the Seleucids were gradually acquiring a dominant position over their rivals, neither was destined to endure. Rome was soon to triumph over Carthage (founded by the Semitic Phoenicians) in their epic conflict spanning more than a century and was now ascending to superpower status. Soon it would absorb the Hellenistic kingdoms and dominate Judea.

The assertion of Roman power in the region may indeed be the key to understanding the conflict that gave rise to the Maccabean revolt.

Antiochus first took reprisals against the Jews after he had been forced to return from his unsuccessful expedition to Egypt. His armies had not been defeated, however. He had been intimidated by Rome. His campaign against Egypt had been going well. As he was poised to take it further, however, he was confronted by a Roman envoy, Gaius Popillius Laenas. When the envoy arrived, Antiochus extended his hand in greeting. Instead of shaking it, the Roman handed him a decree from the Roman senate and told him to read it. The decree instructed him to withdraw his forces from Egypt or consider himself at war with Rome. Antiochus replied that he would need time to consider the matter with his advisers. With a stick, the envoy then drew a circle around him in the sand and told him to give his reply before he had left it. Shocked by this arrogance, Antiochus replied that he would do as the senate had asked. His armies then withdrew.

Did the Jews have any hand in bringing the Romans into the game? We have no hard evidence of this, but it would go a long way towards explaining Antiochus' subsequent behaviour towards them. Jews are the masters of this kind of intrigue, playing one goy power off against another. We do know that Antiochus had shown no hostility to Jews until then. We also know the claim the Jews make in their 1st Book of Maccabees, namely that Anti-ochus IV attempted to impose a uniformity of customs and laws among all the peoples within his realms, is false. An action of this type would have left a record among the non-Jewish peoples, and no such record exists. For some reason, Antiochus IV developed a unique hostility towards the Jews.

The Maccabean revolt did not break out until some time later, in response to Antiochus' crack-down. But the first Book of Maccabees records an approach being made to the Romans, asking for their assistance against the Greeks and promising them loyalty in return. (Of course the Jews would ultimately be no more loyal to the Romans than they had been to the Greeks.)

So Judas chose Eupolemus the son of John, the son of Jacob, and Jason the son of Eleazar, and he sent them to Rome to make a league of amity and confederacy with them.

And that they might take off from them the yoke of the Grecians, for they saw that they oppressed the kingdom of Israel with servitude. And they went to Rome, a very long journey, and they entered into the senate house, and said: Judas Machabeus, and his brethren, and the people of the Jews have sent us to you, to make alliance and peace with you, and that we may be registered your confederates and friends. And the proposal was pleasing in their sight.

Is it possible the Jews had actually reached out to the Romans even earlier, precipitating their original intervention against Antiochus? We have no way of knowing. But if we had only been left the Jew version of 20th century history, then we would have no way of knowing what had really prompted the "Russian" revolution or, indeed, Hitler's reaction to it. Even this fairly recent history has to be uncovered through elaborate research in non-standard sources. Think what secrets might have lain buried in the unwritten counter-Semitic history of the 2nd century BC.

Kek: CDC BANS Words "Diversity" and "Transgender"

Adrian Sol

Daily Stormer

December 17, 2017

Banning the word is nice, but I'd much rather they ban trannies themselves tbh.

The purpose of the Center for Disease Control is to prevent and control outbreaks of dangerous diseases, such as cholera and AIDS. So it only makes sense that they would implement measures to control the most virulent disease of them all: liberalism.

Banning words such as "diversity," "transgender" or "vulnerable" is a good preventive measure, considering that words shape the way we think, but I definitely think they should take a more active approach instead of transgender, for example.

A more robust approach would be to simply exterminate trannies and be done with the whole thing.

Oh, well, one small step at a time, I suppose.

CNN:

Officials at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the very agency tasked with saving and protecting the lives of the most vulnerable, are now under order by the Trump administration to stop using words including “vulnerable” in 2018 budget documents, according to The Washington Post.

In a 90-minute briefing on Thursday, policy analysts at the nation’s leading public health institute were presented with the menu of seven banned words, an analyst told the paper. On the list: “diversity,” “fetus,” “transgender,” “vulnerable,” “entitlement,” “science-based” and “evidence-based.”

Video Link

Taste the liberal butt-hurt.

“Vulnerable” is a good one to take out. As in, “homosexuals are vulnerable to HIV infection.” We need to replace that with “homos are disease vectors, and thus a public safety risk.”

Obviously, “diversity” should definitely be banned from government use. I suggest “brown-ness” or “barbarism” as suitable alternatives.

Alternative word choices reportedly were presented in some cases. For instance, in lieu of “evidence-based” or “science-based,” an analyst might say, “CDC bases its recommendations on science in consideration with community standards and wishes,” the source said. But those working on the Zika virus’s effect on developing fetuses may be at a loss for appropriate—or acceptable—words.

I have no idea what “evidence-based” and “science-based” are all about, in terms of politics. But it’s probably a good way to troll the shit-lib scientists who are using pseudo-scientific methods to justify giving more money to brown people.

The reaction in the room was “incredulous,” the longtime CDC analyst told the Post. “It was very much, ‘Are you serious? Are you kidding?’”

We’re serious—but also trolling you. As news of the word ban spreads at the CDC, the analyst expects growing backlash.

“Our subject matter experts will not lay down quietly,” the unnamed source said. “This hasn’t trickled down to them yet.”

Good! The more backlash, the better!

These people failed for decades to get the homo-plague under control, so they can’t be very competent. The CDC obviously needs new blood and innovative ideas—which only the American nationalist movement can provide.

For example, declaring third-world people “disease transmission vectors” and containing them in quarantine zones, preferably in the middle of the ocean. That would definitely bring down the infection rates—not to mention, our healthcare fees.

Here’s another freebie: decontaminate gay bathhouses, known STD breeding grounds, with specialized equipment (flamethrowers).

There’s no shortage of lateral-thinking that could be applied to these problems. We just need the right people in place.

Rumors on Capitol Hill That Trump May Fire Robert Mueller Soon

Lee Rogers
Daily Stormer

December 17, 2017

It’s being rumored that Trump is going to fire Robert Mueller right before Christmas. Mueller has been leading a biased witch hunt against the President for months now. It needs to end.

There are rumors on Capitol Hill among Democrats that the President is going to fire special counsel Robert Mueller soon.

Fingers crossed.

The Hill:

Rep. Jackie Speier (D-Calif.) said Friday that “rumors” on Capitol Hill suggest President Trump could fire special counsel Robert Mueller before Christmas, after Congress leaves Washington for the winter recess.

“The rumor on the Hill when I left yesterday was that the president was going to make a significant speech at the end of next week. And on Dec. 22, when we are out of D.C., he was going to fire Robert Mueller,” Speier told California’s KQED News.

Speier, a member of the House Intelligence Committee, said that Trump was trying to shut down the committee’s investigation into Russian interference in the 2016 election, pointing to the lack of interviews scheduled for the new year.

The New York Times reported Friday that the committee is scheduling its final witnesses of the year to testify in New York, despite important votes coming up in Washington, D.C., and confirmed no additional witnesses are scheduled yet in 2018.

“We can read between the lines I think,” Speier said. “I believe this president wants all of this shut down. He wants to shut down these investigations, and he wants to fire special counsel Mueller.”

The ranking Democrat on the committee, Rep. Adam Schiff (Calif.), also said Friday that he is worried that Republicans leading the committee are seeking to shut down the committee’s investigation by the end of the year.

We also have one of Trump’s lawyers accusing Mueller’s team of illegally obtaining documents as part of their probe.

Fox News:

A lawyer for the Trump presidential transition team is accusing Special Counsel Robert Mueller’s office of inappropriately obtaining transition documents as part of its Russia probe, including confidential attorney-client communications, privileged communications and thousands of emails without their knowledge.

In a letter obtained by Fox News and sent to House and Senate committees on Saturday, the transition team’s attorney alleges “unlawful conduct” by the career staff at the General Services Administration in handing over transition documents to the special counsel’s office.

The transition legal team argues the GSA “did not own or control the records in question” and the release of documents could be a violation of the 4th Amendment—which protects against unreasonable searches and seizures.

Kory Langhofer, the counsel to Trump for America, wrote in Saturday’s letter that the GSA handed over “tens of thousands of emails” to Mueller’s probe without “any notice” to the transition.

The attorney said they discovered the “unauthorized disclosures” by the GSA on December 12th and 13th and raised concerns with the special counsel’s office.

This could be what Trump was waiting for. Mueller’s team obtaining these emails in such a manner raises a number of questions about the character of the people running the investigation.

Firing Mueller right before Christmas would be the optimal time to make such a move. Congress won’t be around and the fake news media won’t be able to focus their attention on it. By the time 2018 rolls around, the fake news media will be zeroed in on something else.

Make no mistake, this entire investigation has been a joke. There has been no evidence that the Trump campaign was engaging in some type of weird conspiracy with Russia. Mueller even went so far as to load his team up with Trump haters and they found nothing. The whole thing has been a deranged witch hunt by partisan hacks.

Trump should also fire the Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein that Jew weasel who has kept this inquiry going. Especially after his performance in front of a Congressional committee the other day. He was pressed by numerous members of the committee about the impartiality of the special counsel and he had no good answers to offer.

There’s also problems at the FBI a subject of which Trump touch upon recently. Mass firings at the top levels of that organization are needed.

Video Link

Dropping the announcement on December 22nd in the latter part of the afternoon would be perfect.

Firing the traitor Robert Mueller, just like firing the traitor James Comey before him, would be an external sign that Trump is winning an invisible power struggle in the government with the so-called “deep state” (more like “Deep Jews,” amirite?).

Trump has continually been under pressure from these people—that is what the entire investigation has been about.

Once he is free to make his own moves, he can make them and ensure his legacy—making America great again.

School Shooter was a Daily Stormer Fan Before the Shut-tening When He Lost His Will to Live

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 16, 2017

RIP

It’s been reported by the Daily Beast that the 21-year-old who shot up a school and killed two Mexicans before killing himself was a Daily Stormer reader.

He committed the act due to depression and alienation.

Daily Beast:

In real life, William Edward Atchison—people called him Bill—lived in a little yellow house with his parents, about a mile away from the Giant gas station where he worked and from Aztec High School, where he shot and killed two students and then himself last Thursday.

...

When users saw posts from Atchison, who went by dozens of names like “Adam Lanza” and “Future Mass Shooter” on both larger platforms like YouTube and racist communities like The Daily Stormer, they would often ask how his manifesto was going.

...

On YouTube, Atchison admitted he posted anonymously on pro-Trump, white-supremacist sites like 4chan's /pol/ board or The Daily Stormer, but gave up when domain registrars kept shutting down The Daily Stormer's domain names. He, along with most of The Daily Stormer's community, said the sites were "shoa'd," an anti-Semitic slur.

"[I'm] on different youtube channels, anonymous posts on the chans, or my work on ED," he said. "Formerly DS before it got shoa'd and I'm too lazy to get TOR again."

I don't know what he posted as, and it's not really possible to find out given that huge numbers of our thousands-strong active forum membership was lost after the [anti-Semitic slur] shut the site down.

I haven't looked into the posts that the Daily Beast is citing as a source for this either, and am well aware that it could simply be made-up to try to smear me.

But let's run with the idea that he was a member and couldn't manage to get back on when the site went down. Because this is interesting to me.

Clearly, Atchison was disturbed. If he was not disturbed, he wouldn't have engaged in a school shooting. As the Daily Beast article recounts, he had a history of being interested in school shooters before he was ever a white nationalist. He had even been visited by the FBI for posting on forums about purchasing weapons for a school shooting.

Before the shooting and the suicide, he left messages about how alone and empty he felt.

And I don't think it is a jump, if he was someone actively involved in the forum, to suggest that the silencing of our legally protected speech played a role in him eventually going off the deep-end.

What we do here in the Alt-Right is provide young men with a sense of community. Certainly, some of the people who get involved in this community do so because they've problems in their life already that they are dealing with—problems which often relate to a lack of a real life community. There is nothing wrong with this. Surely, from the beginning of civilization, churches, bars, clubs and fraternities have been joined by men with problems who are seeking to overcome those problems by finding a place in a community.

Bizarrely, the Daily Beast interviewed the SPLC—the key organization behind the attempt to ban Daily Stormer from the internet—to blame us for the shooting!

Ryan Lenz, who monitors hate groups and extremism for the Southern Poverty Law Center, said Atchison's pattern is typical of white extremists—even if his years-long archive of school-shooting proclamations might be unprecedented.

"Generally, mass shooters spend a period of time prior to their action steeped in studying previous shooters. They study the aftermath of these individuals. They have a great deal of esteem or respect for others who have done the same," said Lenz.

"Add in the ideology, in this case these forums—it compounds the severity and the rate of radicalization."

Lenz said the cocktail of violent rhetoric, mental illness, and economic despair is what leads to "mobilization," the word experts use for the shift from radicalized online rhetoric to real-life behavior.

"What we've found with these ideologies is that they repeatedly lead to violence. There's a dual line of radicalization happening," said Lenz. "To steep yourself in Daily Stormer rhetoric and the sites like it is to put yourself in the headspace of where the violence is when not if."

"The internet has changed a lot of things. Make it much easier for an alienated, isolated kid to find communities where they feel they belong," said Lenz. "And it sometimes goes unchecked because of how the alt-right has presented itself: It's just irony. It's for the lulz."

This is like if a man burns down a church and then one of the members of the church loses hope and commits a crime, the church is blamed.

Ryan Lenz, SPLC Jew terrorist

The arrogance is staggering—this belief that the Jews have that they can harm whoever they want, destroy as many lives as they desire with impunity, and if any harm comes from this it is the fault of the goyim victims themselves is difficult to even process. Clearly, they are not self-aware enough to understand what this looks like to an observer, or they would make an effort to conceal it.

Lenz even notes that he had found community, but is unwilling to make the obvious connection to the loss of that community potentially leading to a loss of emotional integrity.

We do not promote violence on this website. We in fact actively discourage it. Not because I care about some dead Mexicans—I don't and I won't pretend to—but because I care about our people. There is no reason Atchison needed to die. There was no benefit to his death. And there is no telling what he'd have gone on to do if he had lived.

The Daily Stormer and every other White Nationalist forum that I am aware of discourages violence and encourages community building and self-improvement—all things that would lead to someone with emotional instability being much less likely to engage in a senseless act of violence. When people remove our ability to organize in this peaceful and productive way, they shouldn't be surprised when some of the lonely and disenfranchised young men involved lash out.

Get Involved

Don't go down the dark road that Bill went down. Stay sane. Get involved with the movement and make that impotent rage a potent weapon against the kikes that are trying to exterminate us.

The forum is now up and stable, hosted with our friends at thegoyimknow.to. You have to sign up to see it if you don't already have an account, but the email confirmation should work now. There you can find a community, and you can get involved with the Stormer Book Clubs, which we've got big plans for this spring.

We've also got a pretty good community going on Gab—you can follow me here and meet up with people. There are lots of chat rooms, lots of good guys to connect with.

Whatever you do, keep your head up and understand this is far from hopeless. We are going to win. If you start to feel depressed, remember that it will get better and don't do anything stupid. Build a community where you can talk to others—even if it is just online, it can help a lot.

Once you get in with a real life group, you will always have people to fall back on, and you won't have to worry about the internet going dark and losing all of your friends.

RIP William Edward Atchison

Germany: The Most Important Thing is to Educate Refugees About the Holocaust

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 16, 2017

Although burning Jewish flags is a great idea, spraying an open flame with lighter fluid is not.

Germany is a nation which exists to serve Jews.

The Jews told them to flood themselves with infinity brown men from Islamistan so they would breed with their women and wipe out their bloodline.

Now, the brownies they brought in are planning to wipe out the Jews.

What to do?

RT:

After a wave of anti-Israeli protests, German authorities feel arriving refugees and migrants must be firmly reminded of the country's responsibility to the Jewish state accrued during the Nazi Holocaust.

Anti-Israel and anti-US rallies and the sight of Israeli flags burned on German streets have triggered the German politicians' concerns. All people who live in Germany must understand its historical responsibility to Israel, German President Frank-Walter Steinmeier said on Friday at an event marking the 70th anniversary of the establishment of the Jewish state.

Germans actually believe that they have a inherited blood duty to serve Jews because of this supposed historical event, by the way.

It is a fundamental part of their character as a people, permeating every aspect of society.

"This responsibility does not end for the people who were born [after the Holocaust] and has no exceptions for the immigrants," he said, adding that it is "not a subject to discussion for anyone living in Germany or willing to live there." Justice Minister Heiko Maas took the idea further, suggesting that the issue of Holocaust should be a central part of the German integration courses for refugees and migrants.

"I believe it is absolutely necessary to make Holocaust and its significance for our society a central topic in our integration courses," the minister said in a piece written for Der Spiegel weekly. "Lessons learnt from the Holocaust must become the key message of those [courses]," he added. At the same time, the minister pointed out that the German authorities would not tolerate any form of anti-Semitism, including that brought to Germany by refugees and migrants from the Middle East.

"Racism has no place in Germany, so everyone who wants to stay in Germany for the long term needs to be clear that we fight the Neo-Nazis' anti-Semitism and we won't tolerate any imported anti-Semitism from immigrants either," Maas said. "Those who call for 'death to Jews' should not [be allowed to] take to the streets but should be taken to court instead," he added.

Note that rape is okay though.

The fact that a German would believe that an Arab would care about the Holocaust at all, let alone buy into the type of guilt that it has been used to inflict Germans with, shows how deluded the German people are about who they've brought into their country.

"Hello good sir, and welcome to Germany. Allow me to inform you about the six gorillion Jews my grandfather gassed to death with insect spray in fake shower rooms and turned into lampshades."

An Arab who gets taught about the Holocaust is either going to think it is a good idea, that it is a lie the Jews made up, or that it is both. They are biologically different than white people, and the Holocaust mythology is a psychological weapon specifically targeted at white people. No one on earth but whites would want to destroy themselves because of alleged "human rights violations" their committed against their blood enemy 3 generations ago (not to mention the fact it was not the ancestors of the Arabs that did it anyway).

The childish idiocy of "we'll stop them from wanting to kill Jews by teaching them about the Holocaust" represents an innocence that would almost be endearing if it wasn't so pathetic and evil.

Anyway. It will be fun to keep an eye on this story. But I think the German Moslems' response to a Holocaust education course is going to be as covered up as their rape rampages.

Iraq: Traitorous Beauty Slut Allies with Israeli Kikes Against the People!

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 16, 2017

Whenever you let sluts off the chain, they will immediately begin organizing to destroy you.

Like, this bitch was out of the bag for how long before she ran to the enemy kikes to start an alliance?

The Independent:

The family of an Iraqi beauty queen has reportedly been forced to flee the country in the face of death threats after the young model posed for a selfie with her counterpart from Israel.

Sarah Idan, Miss Iraq, and Adar Gandelsman, Miss Israel, took the picture together at a beauty pageant in Las Vegas on November 14. "Peace and Love from Miss Iraq and Miss Israel," she wrote.

The selfie was widely shared in Iraq and throughout the Arab world, where anti-Israel feelings run high.

Ms Gandelsman said she had stayed in touch with Ms Idan and learned that the young Iraqi and her family had fled their country in the face of the backlash, as well as criticism over a picture of her in a bikini.

"The two of those things together caused a mess for her back home where people made threats against her and her family that if she didn't return home and take down the photos, they would remove her [Miss Iraq] title, that they would kill her," Ms Gandelsman told Israel's Hadashot News.

"Out of fear, they left Iraq at least until the situation calms down".

And of course, the bitch doesn't give any more of a shit how her alliance with the Jews affects her family than she cares about how it affects her nation.

She did it for purposes of being transgressive, to cause problems.

This is why Moslems were intelligent to keep their women in these bags. They try to be "progressive," have a "beauty contest" with whores and BOOM—betrayal to Jews by women.

Every single time with these hoes.

nb4 "OH ANGLIN, YOU WANT US TO BE LIKE THE MOSLEMS AND TREAT WOMEN BADLY???"

No, friend.

I want us to be like our ancestors, all throughout history, and treat women in accordance with the natural order.

Clothed to elbows and ankles, hair covered.

Colonial America:

Medieval Europe:

Ancient Rome:

Never in all of white history has it not been standard practice to keep women fully clothed, for the express purpose of keeping them under control.

The argument that to do that is “to be like Moslems” is the same as the modern “conservative” argument that being against homosexuality is to be like the Moslems.

You could also make the argument that since Moslems drink water, we should just drink vodka all day long.

It is not a real argument.

Females are naturally disruptors and betrayers, and they will do that any chance they get. The reason they create these problems is biological: they are calling out for the strongest men to come and put them in their place, because it is only under a strong male hand that they feel safe. As soon as they are made “independent,” they start begging for that to be taken away.

It's the order of nature. I did not invent biology.

Cops Drag 93-Year-Old Grandma Out of Her Own Home Then Jail Her for “Trespassing”

Eric Striker
Daily Stormer
December 16, 2017

America is the most tyrannical nation in the world. Especially if you're white.

It isn't the disturbing image of a 93-year-old grandma in an orange jump suit and handcuffs alone. What makes the rulers of America so unique in their evil is the contrast of this or Daniel Shaver's execution with the illegal alien who murdered Kate Steinle getting acquitted, and the state of Chicago letting one of the blacks who tortured a disabled white kid off with probation.

Real crime goes unpunished if your victim is white. Fake crime gets punished harshly, also if you're white (see Charlottesville).

With rent prices rising and a generation of children (baby boomers) that believes it's okay to throw the elderly away like trash, senior citizens in the USA have trouble staying independent and keeping their homes.

Nobody advocates for the white elderly. Housing activists, who are as a rule Judeo-Leftist assholes and anti-white, are only interested in getting free houses for able bodied black people, transsexuals, or infinite numbers of refugees (and there's never enough).

That's why we should take this cause up.

Orlando Sentinel:

Juanita Fitzgerald was spared having to spend her 94th birthday in the Lake County jail when she was released Thursday after having been locked up for two days in the medical ward.

The trouble started when Fitzgerald was evicted Tuesday from the senior housing community at the National Church Residences' Franklin House in Eustis. Police said she was given notice of her eviction the day before, but she refused to leave the lobby.

"Unless you carry me out of here, I'm not going anywhere," she told police before being arrested Tuesday morning, the report shows.

Video Link

Lake County sheriff's spokesman Fred Jones said a deputy on the scene tried to connect Fitzgerald with family members and other housing resources, but she refused. He added that she also rejected an offer of a place to stay from a nurse who was there.

Eustis police showed up shortly after the eviction notice was served. Spokesman Jim Franquiz said officers offered several options to find housing for her elsewhere, but Fitzgerald did not want to move.

On Thursday, Fitzgerald was released from jail by a judge on her own recognizance and was being turned over to a caregiver, Lake County Sheriff's Office spokesman John Herrell said.

Fitzgerald, whose birthday is Friday, is facing charges of trespassing after a warning, Lake County authorities said.

A spokeswoman with Franklin House, Karen Twinem, said the independent living community followed protocol in the weeks leading up to her arrest. Franklin House has 46 residents. It's part of National Church Residences, a religious housing nonprofit based in Ohio.

"Juanita lived in an independent living community, and our action was based on our overriding concern for her own safety," Twinem said in a statement.

She added that the residence "spent months working with Juanita, collaborating with other agencies in the area and presenting her with safe housing options." Twinem did not specify why Fitzgerald was being evicted.

If she is fit enough to stay with a nurse, why not just get her help at her own home?

Maybe there's a good reason for why they had to evict her, but they're not making it public. That means there isn't a good reason and it's probably more about negligent black home health aides who want her gone.

Whatever the details are, there's no reason to put a woman in her 90s in jail for not wanting to be randomly evicted from her home. The charges against her ought to be dropped!

If this is the injustice it looks like, imagine if some blackshirts showed up with shields to back her up. The cops would either back off and negotiate or be forced to escalate and look even worse than they already are.

Building a revolution starts with solidarity. We live under a system run by white-hating criminals. If we don't stick up for the most voiceless in our communities, nobody will.

UK: Royal Borough of Greenwich Bars Trump from Visiting Because He Insulted Moslems

Adrian Sol

Daily Stormer

December 16, 2017

Gotta protect those feels.

Politics used to be serious business.

Leaders were expected to be smart, bold, and uphold the highest standards of moral character within their nations. They were usually older, wise men who'd had success in the military or other facets of public life, and would conduct their rule with dignity and gravitas.

Of course, all that flew out the window once we allowed women and brown people to vote.

Now we just have a bunch of crybabies who sabotage important international relationships in the name of protecting their own feelings.

Evening Standard:

The Royal Borough of Greenwich has "barred" Donald Trump after councillors called for his visit to the UK to be abandoned.

Earlier this week, America's ambassador in London signalled that Mr Trump is due to visit early next year—sparking fresh calls for mass demonstrations against the president.

Yes, they hate Donald Trump—not because his policies are bad for the United Kingdom, but because he says mean things about terrorist brown people.

But then again, I guess the UK will be an Islamic country pretty soon, so...

And at a meeting on Tuesday night, the Labour council added its voice to the protests by calling on the Government to abandon the plans.

Greenwich Council said it adopted a motion calling for a state visit to be abandoned, while also declaring that “should a state visit go ahead, President Trump would not be welcome in the Borough”.

The council expressed “alarm at the decision of President Trump to retweet Islamophobic Propaganda” and “sadness at the President’s bigoted attitude towards women and ethnic minorities”.

It comes after Mr Trump sparked a global backlash last month after retweeting a string of unverified anti-Islamic videos posted by far-right group Britain First’s deputy leader.

He also blasted London Mayor Sadiq Khan’s to the London Bridge terror attack earlier this year, branding it “pathetic”.

Pathetic excuse by London Mayor Sadiq Khan who had to think fast on his “no reason to be alarmed” statement. MSM is working hard to sell it!

— Donald J. Trump (@realDonaldTrump) June 5, 2017

Yeah, no reason to be alarmed—this is all part of Khan’s plan to turn Britain into an Islamic republic.

Just hours after the attack, he tweeted: “At least 7 dead and 48 wounded in terror attack and Mayor of London says there is “no reason to be alarmed!”

Councillor Denise Hyland, leader of the council said: “On a daily basis we work hand in hand with residents from all communities to ensure this borough is a peaceful and welcoming place that celebrates difference and diversity, but in the case of President Trump we are willing to make an exception.

Yeah, and they’re doing a really good job at that. Third-worlders will soon be a majority in their borough:

Still 52% British? In London? Looks like there’s some more work ahead.

I guess with Whites divided over party lines, none of these traitors believe they can win elections without the support of their brown pets. As such, they have to engage in banana republic-type politics in order to garner votes from banana republic-type voters.

Trump should cancel his visit to the the UK and just bomb them instead, until they agree to walk back their plan of handing over their kingdom to hajis.

Ohio: GOP Passes Bill to Force Women to Have Down Syndrome Babies

Eric Striker
Daily Stormer
December 16, 2017

If you thought only J-leftists are to blame for Clownmerica, wait until you hear about the Ohio GOP’s ambitious new proposal to expand its voter base.

The Ohio Senate’s GOP has hedged its bet for future political survival in majority-minority America by passing a new abortion law that will force women to carry Down syndrome fetuses to term.

This law, of course, isn’t a sensible abortion ban. That would actually make sense. Women who use abortion as birth control or because a healthy baby will “get in the way” of their career prospects (the real reason most white women get abortions) are still allowed to do so under this new legislation.

But if at 10 weeks you get the test and it comes back that your child will have Down syndrome, the state bans any doctor from terminating the pregnancy!

Reuters:

Women in Ohio would be prohibited from receiving abortions because of a fetal Down syndrome diagnosis under a bill that passed the state senate on Wednesday and is heading to Republican Governor John Kasich’s desk.

Lawmakers voted 20-12 in favor of the law, which criminalizes abortion if the physician has knowledge that the procedure is being sought due to a diagnosis of Down syndrome, a genetic disorder caused when abnormal cell division results in an extra full or partial copy of chromosome 21.

Doctors would lose their medical licenses in the state and face a fourth-degree felony charge under the law if they were to perform an abortion with that knowledge. Mothers would not face criminal charges.

The bill makes Ohio the third state to pass a law outlawing abortions due to fetal anomalies. Similar laws were passed in Indiana and North Dakota. The Indiana provision was struck down by a U.S. District Judge in September after a lawsuit filed by the American Civil Liberties Union.

Kasich spokesman Jon Keeling declined to say whether the governor would sign the measure into law. He added that when Kasich was asked about a similar bill in the Ohio House, he had called it "appropriate."

Abortion opponents cheered the move and said they expected the governor to sign the law.

If Kasich signs this into law, he will have cemented his reputation as someone who transcends wing-labels...to get everything wrong!

I'm not a ghou, it's nothing personal against people who are born with this disease and it's not their fault. With that said, if you can prevent more children born into a life of suffering from an early stage in a pregnancy, why force the question at gunpoint?

This is why the GOP is nothing more than a stupid bovine standing still on the conveyor belt in the slaughter house. This is by design. If your party platform is composed of more down's syndrome fetuses, more money for Israel and tax-cuts for Wall Street bankers, you won't even win in Alabama.

If Trump doesn't commit to a massive purge of the GOP, he will lose in 2020. That's what the Kasich and Ryan wings of the GOP want.

New Rule Issued to Prevent Europeans From Sending us Their Surplus Haji Terrorists

Adrian Sol
Daily Stormer

December 16, 2017

America isn't where you can dump your brown people anymore, yuropoors.

Europe, they're not sending their best. They're sending in Moslems, Blacks—they're terrorists. And some, I assume, are White people.

I mean, in general, we should probably accept European immigrants without too much fuss—they are the only kind of immigrants we actually want.

The problem, of course, is that Europe is increasingly populated by brown people of terrorist descent, which changes the game dramatically. We're now in a situation where Jihadists are nearly as likely to be coming here from Sweden or Italy as they would from Syria or Iraq.

We can't have that.

Reuters:

The Trump administration put new requirements in place on Friday for the 38 countries participating in the U.S. Visa Waiver Program, including that they use U.S. counterterrorism data to screen travelers, officials said.

The program allows citizens of mainly European countries to travel to the United States for up to 90 days without a visa. Citizens from the 38 countries are required to obtain a so-called travel authorization to enter the United States.

Yeah, this was perfectly fine. That is, until Europe started sending people like this:

We'd like the "old" Europeans, thank you very much.

President Donald Trump has sought to tighten the rules for those seeking to visit or live in the United States in several ways, saying restrictions are necessary for security reasons.

The changes will apply to all countries in the program. One change is that they will be required to use U.S. information to screen travelers crossing their borders from third countries. Many countries in the program already do that, one administration official said.

Countries whose citizens stay longer than authorized during visits to the United States at a relatively higher rate will be required to conduct public awareness campaigns on the consequences of overstays, the officials said. One existing penalty is that people who overstay a visit may not travel visa-free to the United States in the future.

Lol, talk about humiliating. Forcing other countries to lecture their citizens is as alpha as it gets. It seems like all of Europe's policies are dictated to them from foreign powers these days.

They should at least start taking orders from White countries instead of Turks.

Members of Congress have expressed concern about the security risks of overstays. A May 2017 report by the DHS inspector general found the department lacked a comprehensive system to gather information on departing visitors, forcing it to rely on third-party data to confirm departures, which is sometimes faulty.

The United States will also start assessing VWP countries on their safeguards against "insider threats" at their airports, especially those with direct flights to the United States, officials said.

The Trump administration seems to be plugging all the holes in the immigration system allowing sand people to come here and cause trouble. Illegals are getting rounded up, chain migration and the visa lottery system are on their way out, the wall prototypes are being tested—soon the only thing left to worry about will be the logistics of getting the legal ones to leave.

America is being made great again, boys!

Spain: Antifa Murder 55-Year-Old Man Because He Wore Spanish Flag Colors

Eric Striker
Daily Stormer

The J-left Antifa degenerate pictured above is a murderer. His victim is a 55-year-old man who made the mistake of drinking in a bar by himself in the colors of his national flag.

To show what a joke the Spanish justice system is when reining in its J-left irregular army, the psychotic criminal Rodrigo Lanza only did five years for a 2006 political gang attack so brutal it left the victim paralyzed from the neck down!

Naturally, this anarchist junky globalist has finally killed someone.

Antifas kill and seriously injure people all over the world all the time. The Jew media talking heads who claim they don't while calling a car accident in Charlottesville "domestic terrorism" are just propagandists who support Antifa.

When Pavlos Fyssas got stabbed in Greece after trying to jump a Golden Dawn member, it was international news. This case, on the other hand, will be ignored, i.e. covered-up by Jew-run wire services like Associated Press (Steven Swartz) and Reuters (Stephen Adler).

El Pais:

A 55-year-old man died in Zaragoza on Tuesday night as a result of the beating he received outside a bar last week by a leftist radical who didn't like the suspenders he was wearing; they were in the colors of the Spanish flag.

The alleged attacker, a 33-year-old member of the Barcelona squatter movement named Rodrigo Lanza, had already served a five-year sentence for assaulting a local police officer in the Catalan capital; that victim has been a quadriplegic since 2006.

This latest assault took place at around 2.30am in the early hours of Friday outside El Tocadiscos, a bar located on Antonio Agustín street, in Zaragoza's old town district, the local daily Heraldo de Aragón reported.

Víctor Láinez, 55, got into an argument with a group of people inside the bar. He was alone at the time. Witnesses said that the attacker and three other individuals began yelling at Láinez and calling him a "facha," short for "fascist," because of the red and yellow stripes on his suspenders.

When Láinez walked out of the bar, two individuals came running after him. Witnesses said that Lanza struck the victim on the head with a metal bar; he and his accomplice then kicked the man several times as he lay unconscious on the ground before running away.

Láinez was admitted into Hospital Clínico with severe head damage and four blood clots that left him brain dead. He died on Tuesday after being taken off life support.

On the night of the attack, the National Police launched an investigation that focused on radical left-wing groups in the Aragonese capital. Lanza was arrested late on Monday. His accomplice was held, then released.

Sources familiar with the investigation said that eye witnesses provided a description of Lanza, who was also seen at a different bar where he paid with a credit card.

A blood-thirsty commie pig drinking on his daddy's credit card: imagine my shock.

This guy is apparently a faggot as well.

This kind of cowardly violence is why Antifa must be confronted rather than debated. In a fair fight, they either run away or fold. They're like a good poker player with a lousy hand: call their bluff and pull their card and you see how weak they really are.

These are the globalist auxiliary force. They don't have any politics they believe in, they are driven by personal vendettas against individuals in the short term and non-Jewish white people/heterosexuals/Christians in the meta sense. They hate people, not ideas.

Which is why they must be confronted. With the elites and state (Antifa's benefactors) losing grasp over power, it's a matter of time until the people and communities they terrorize show them what everyone really thinks of them.

Trump Calls-Out FBI Probe as a “Democrat Hoax”!

Adrian Sol
Daily Stormer

December 16, 2017

The “RUSSIAN HACKING!!!!111” narrative has been a transparent hoax from the start for anyone with a few brain cells to rub together. However, with the recent revelations about the inner workings of the FBI investigation, even the mainstream media and the normie masses have been forced to confront this massive scandal.

President Trump is now in a very good position to start lighting fires under these people’s feet. And he’s showing indication that this is exactly what he intends to do.

The people are demanding justice, and every week that goes by with the FBI probe going forward unaccountable will only increase their anger.

Politico:

President Donald Trump unloaded Friday on the FBI’s role in the Russia investigations, decrying the probes as a “scam” and “Democrat hoax” that has wasted “millions and millions of dollars” that hasn’t come up with any evidence of collusion between his 2016 campaign and Moscow.

Speaking to reporters before boarding Marine One to travel to a law enforcement graduation ceremony at the FBI’s National Academy in Quantico, Virginia, Trump also took issue with a series of frank text messages exchanged between two FBI employees who referred to him last year as an “idiot” and then later got assigned to special counsel Robert Mueller’s Russia team.

“It’s a shame what’s happened with the FBI, but we’re gonna rebuild the FBI. It’ll be bigger and better than ever,” Trump said. “But it is very sad when you look at those documents, and how they’ve done that is really, really disgraceful. And you have a lot of very angry people that are seeing it. It’s a very sad thing to watch, I will tell you that.”

I’m sure the rank and file at the FBI want nothing to do with this dirty Democrat scheming, and would welcome a reform that allows them to do their jobs.

We need to remake the FBI into a force for good.

At the Quantico event, Trump was briefly introduced by Attorney General Jeff Sessions, who has been subjected by the president to repeated public scoldings following his decision to recuse himself from the Russia probe, paving the way for Mueller’s appointment.

The attorney general referred to the president as “our nation’s highest law enforcement official,” an unusual designation, and said he’d be clear in his instructions about how to run the Justice Department, which oversees the FBI.

“The day I was sworn in as attorney general, he sent us an order. You got to know, he knows how to send a clear order,” Sessions said. “The order was: reduce crime in America.”

Yes.

We need less gay fussing about stupid conspiracy theories and protocol, and more putting minorities into cages. That is, after all, the core mission of the FBI.

Start rounding up brown people, and don’t stop until America is great again.

And there’s no doubt that FBI agents are itching for it.

While the Mueller probe has certainly been a thorn in Trump’s side since the beginning of his administration, it will have the unintended side-effect of giving him far greater power an influence if he manages to use the fallout to justify a radical reform of the FBI.

An FBI that actually investigates criminals would be an incredible boon for us. Because, as it turns out, pretty much all the worst criminals and traitors happen to be Jews and their servants.

Once Trump’s enemies start being put under the same scrutiny as he’s been subjected to, things will take a very different turn in this country.

Grenfell Tower is the Brown Holocaust

Diversity Macht Frei
December 16, 2017

The strategy of aggressive victimhood has paid off for the Jews. (At least, so far). So now everyone wants a piece of the action.

Yesterday a 6-month anniversary service was held to commemorate the “tragedy” of the Grenfell Tower fire. Who ever heard of a 6-month anniversary for a disaster? No one. We’re reaching new frontiers of absurdity.

Grenfell Tower looks all set to become the Brown Holocaust. Almost all of the victims had brown skin thanks to their ancestors’ adaptation to high solar radiation environments. But the radiation from the fire still proved a bit too much for them.

As with the “Holocaust”, the number of victims appears to be on a strange path of exponential expansion.

Video Link

Since the gubmint has agreed to provide houses to the “victims” in one of the country’s most expensive areas, this should come as no surprise.

There were only 120 flats in the original building. Many households, obviously, were completely wiped out in the fire. Yet the authorities, so far, have received demands for 208 new homes. The local council has even been instructed to purchase 300 new homes in total. How can this be?

In Britain, local housing tenants have a legal “right to buy” the homes they live in at a below-market price. So these third-world scamsters are making extravagant demands about the kind of houses they want. They are turning down million-pound homes because they don’t meet their exacting specifications.

Video Link

And they are refusing to be re-housed in less expensive areas. As soon as they deign to accept a new house, you can be sure that they will be exercising their “right to buy”, purchasing it below-market, then selling it at market price immediately, reaping a handsome profit. The whole thing is a gigantic scam! And because of the Cult of Victimhood, not a single person in public life dares to call it out.

A brown immigrant claimed the fire started from his fridge. Many other reports say it began with an after-sunset Ramadan cook-up. Either way, this was a problem caused by brown people. How does it make any sense to Blame Whitey for this? It doesn’t. But, as the Jews have demonstrated, the facts don’t need to be on your side when you, or your friends, control the media. No other voices get to be heard.

Immediately after the fire, the most insane conspiracy theories started to circulate. Whitey did it because he wanted to rid the poor brown people from the district. Whitey was covering up the real body count. Whitey didn’t properly maintain the building.

It’s a good illustration of how diversity can never work. The emotion of empathy, and the emotion of trust, is fundamentally channelled by genetic similarity. When that racial bond isn’t there, you have a low trust environment where rumours and conspiracy theories will flourish like wildfire! In post-White Genocide Britain, with an 80% brown population, a purely random event like this could trigger a civil war.

Have brown skin.

Enter Britain illegally.

Set fire to a building, killing dozens of people.

Claim that the fire you started was somehow an evil conspiracy by Whitey against brown people.

Demand that you be given a free million-pound house and legal status.

Laugh.#GrenfellTower

James Fields’ Charges Upgraded to First Degree Murder in Car Accident That Caused Heather Heyer to Have a Heart Attack

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 15, 2017

Well.

Here’s American “justice” for you.

At least they’re not charging him with a “premeditated terrorist attack” like the kike Mayor and nog police chief claimed after the incident.

Fox News:

An Ohio man accused of killing a woman by plowing his car into a crowd of protesters in Charlottesville, Va., during the summer now faces a first-degree murder charge.

James Alex Fields, 20, appeared in court for a preliminary hearing Thursday, where Charlottesville General District Judge Robert Downer Jr. agreed to prosecutors’ request to upgrade the second-degree murder charge that Fields previously faced.

All other charges against Fields were also certified to proceed. The case will now be presented to a grand jury for a possible indictment.

Fields is accused of killing 32-year-old Heather Heyer and injuring dozens more after he allegedly rammed his car into a crowd of counterprotesters Aug. 12 during the Unite the Right rally that erupted into utter chaos and violence.

A white supremacist group was protesting the city's decision to remove a statute of Confederate Gen. Robert E. Lee from a local park. The protest also attracted counter-demonstrators.

Fields, who was described by a former teacher as having a keen interest in Nazi Germany and Adolf Hitler, quietly sat in a striped jumpsuit with his hands cuffed during Thursday's hearing.

His attorney, Denise Lunsford, did not present evidence or make any arguments at the hearing. However, she cross-examined Charlottesville Police Det. Steven Young, asking him if searches of Fields' computer, phone or social media revealed any evidence that he was part of Vanguard America or any other white nationalist group.

"No," Young replied.

Young, also testified that he was one of the first police officers to arrive on the scene, and that Fields seemed in shock and cried after learning that someone had died, the New York Post reported.

Yeah.

Crying, in shock.

They are attempting to crucify him based solely on his political beliefs.

Here's the deal: James Fields did nothing wrong.

Straight up.

We have footage of his car getting attacked by bats before the wreck. In all likelihood, the wreck was the result of a panic, rather than some kind of purposeful thing. Why on earth would he purposefully destroy such a cool car?

So these people started a riot in the streets, attacking random people, and while they were illegally crowded in the street, one of the cars they were attacking crashed.

And Heather Heyer, the obese woman who died: her mother told the media she had a heart attack.

Furthermore, we have video which proves she was not hit by the challenger.

Video Link

Months after the event, they claimed that the autopsy showed "blunt force trauma injury to the chest" as the cause of death, but they haven't released the autopsy. Also, a woman of that size hitting the ground would cause "blunt trauma." Imagine weighing over three hundred pounds and being pushed on the ground.

The Daily Progress —the local Charlottesville newspaper, which is the only paper so far to have alleged to have spoken with the medical examiner—also included this interesting line:

The manner of Heyer's death is still pending, a representative with the office said Monday.

The Jewish media has claimed that I and Hunter Wallace of Occidental Dissent (he did most of the work going through the video footage and eventually finding Heyer's location during the crash) have a "sexist conspiracy theory" that she died of a heart attack.

Well, is her own mother also a "sexist conspiracy theorist"?

Video Link

"She died of a heart attack right away at the scene, they revived her briefly and then—not consciously, just got her heart beating again—and then her heart just stopped."

The same lying journalists who accuse us of having a "theory" are not attacking her mother for the same—no, in fact, there is a total blackout on the fact that her mother even made this statement.

Point being: Charlottesville was the biggest event in the world since the election of Donald J. Trump as President of the United States, and it was very important for them to drag out this Fields thing.

I do not think he can be convicted of murder, anymore than I thought he could be convicted of "terrorism" when the entire Jewish media and the government was accusing him of that.

The City and the Cops are Guilty

The real power responsible for Heather Heyer's death and all of the chaos of that day are the cops who stood down and the state that ordered them to do so.

Even an independent inquiry at the state level has shown this — the cops stood down, allowing violence to take place.

That most assuredly is not a "sexist Alt-Right conspiracy theory."

They wanted people dead.

Then when they got one, they immediately jumped with an insane pre-prepared narrative that it was a "premeditated terrorist attack."

I am confident the whole thing will eventually fall apart. But when it does, the people who bought into the narrative will be too committed to it to believe anything different. That is the way these things work.

We need to support our people, and we need to move forward. For all the problems it caused, Charlottesville was a win. It made us infamous. And that needed to happen.

But we need to understand that regardless of how right we were, things changed there, and we have to change with them.

Old Man Rap: Eminem's White Privilege, Anti-Trump Album Hailed as the Worst of His Career

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 15, 2017

Whatever you think of Eminem's early work, it was at the very least youthful and representative of white angst at a continually advancing anti-white agenda.

It was anti-PC. He talked about raping women and killing faggots.

Sure, it praised black culture in a way that was not a positive influence on young people, but it was better than a lot of what was coming out and being sold to kids at the time.

Jump to now.

He is literally 45 years old and trying to sell attacks on Donald Trump and the white race generally as edgy, hip and cool.

The album was just leaked, and it is apparently horrible.

Chase McMullen, an anti-white music critic writing for anti-white culture website The 405, praises him for his attacks on whites but claims it is regrettably the worst album he's ever released:

Oh, Marshall. When critics savaged Recovery, there may have been more than a healthy dose of "kill your idols" at play. After all, he set out to make a direct pop record, and the album certainly succeeded at least in that sense. In 2017, tearing the aging icon apart is far less fun. Let's get it out of the way: yes, Eminem is trying, once again, to grow up. What's more, he's gone beyond the Hallmark-lite sentiments of "Not Afraid" towards something actually meaningful, taking on white detachment and comfort in society and the figurehead of our ills, Trump.

His good intentions just make how genuinely excruciating this record is all the more sad. Slim Shady may have spent the last decade and change putting out bad records, but Revival stands as the first truly terrible entry into his already sagging discography. Accents be damned, Relapse boasted an energized rapper (its unbearable lead single aside), even Encore had numerous highlights, but this?

90% of the soundscapes here would have been rejected from an unsigned artist's mixtape, they're not just bad, they're distinctly obnoxious, grating the ear and distracting from whatever Slim is saying. Granted, for most of what he's saying here, that's perhaps a cruel mercy ("I just got the wind about me / like wind chimes" on "Believe"), but on single "Untouchable" the cheesy rap-rock vibes (and unnecessary Cheech & Chong sample) completely overwhelm the well-intended message. The same goes for the waste of Alicia Keys that is "Like Home", Em calls Trump Hitler, and we can barely appreciate it, the beat is so cumbersome.

What once felt funny and satirical has long felt forced and repulsive.

How Eminem and co. thought his new somewhat on point wokeness would mix successfully with the same old ludicrous murderous and sexist antics may boggle the mind, but the question is ultimately needless. Revival is so uninspired and lost that picking it apart is a hopeless affair. Naturally, Eminem is still rapping his ass off. He's practically an Olympian on "Offended", pulling out every flow in his grab bag out for a breathless, nearly 6-minute rant, but it can all be reduced to, "I swear when I get up / I'm never gonna let up til everybody eats my turds." This is a 45-year-old man. He uses this on the hook, no less. Eminem has made a career out of feeling persecuted and unappreciated, and for years now he's been barking at a nonexistent detractor, only to completely misunderstand why his audience has grown weary.

Revival ends with the sound of a toilet flushing. Nothing could be more telling, but this writer shall say this: having spent years striving to be understanding, we've suffered enough. Eminem has long sounded uninspired and unhappy with the music he's making, and more than ever, holding out hope he'll figure it all out again feels like a grim prospect. Once the deed is done and this goes to press, I will never listen to this album again.

Ouch.

Yeah.

He is a very immature, childlike person, as described here. It was cute and perhaps even inspiring when he was in his mid-twenties, complaining about having grown-up poor with a single mother, but the entire goal of that should have been to develop into a healthy person despite the challenges. Instead, he whined and whined for two decades, now Trump is his new daddy figure to attack.

I don't know how much of that is staged for consumption, an actual attempt by his Jewish managers to reshape this dejected cultural icon into a symbol of youthful resistance against the white race and how much of it he actually feels. His comment about how it made him angry Trump wouldn't pay attention to him indicates it is at least in part a genuine representation of projected daddy issues.

But either way, it's sad and it's boring.

And gross.

When I saw these pictures from his new music video:

It felt like looking at a retarded adult trying to play with children and the children looking all panicked and not knowing how to react. It is pitiful and it is disgusting on a deep human level.

I really do think he should just kill himself.

Australia Says Roman Catholic Church Should End Celibacy to Stop Man-Boy Love

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 15, 2017

Pope Grab Em by the Dick

Traditionalist Catholics will go nuts whenever you suggest a connection between the celibacy priests and phenomenon of pederasty among their ranks.

They are of course technically correct from the angle that they argue, which is that not having sex with women doesn't make you all the sudden want to have sex with teenage boys. If you're a guy, you've probably been through periods of no sex for months on end and never said to yourself "maybe I should suck-off a teenage boy." This is actually the absurdist argument that anti-celibacy campaigners make, and it is clearly and obviously wrong. Assuming you were a priest and ready to violate your vows, you would just go find a hooker or perhaps seduce a nun—both these things happened throughout the history of the church when priests failed to uphold their vows of celibacy.

However, there is another argument, which is my argument: homosexuals are drawn to the priesthood because it creates an opportunity for the ultimate homo experience: traveling the world in luxury and engaging in sex acts with young teenage boys.

So the priesthood is always going to be top-heavy with homos in the modern homo era, especially given that most of it appears to have already been infiltrated and taken over by homos.

Fox News:

An Australian inquiry into child abuse could rock the Roman Catholic Church.

The panel on Friday called on the church to repeal its celibacy requirement for priests, and said clergy should face prosecution if they fail to report evidence of pedophilia heard in the confessional.

Australia's Royal Commission into Institution Responses to Child Sexual Abuse released its 17-volume report and made almost 200 recommendations following a five-year investigation into how the Catholic Church and other institutions responded to sexual abuse of children in Australia over 90 years.

The Royal Commission is the country's highest form of inquiry and the voluminous report it produced followed testimony from more than 8,000 survivors of child sex abuse.

Sixty-two percent of those abused in religious institutions were Catholic, the study found. Catholicism is the largest denomination in majority-Christian Australia.

"We have concluded that there were catastrophic failures of leadership of Catholic Church authorities over many decades," the report said.

"Elevated risk"

Among the recommendations, the commission recommends that the Australian Catholic Bishops Conference ask the Vatican to repeal the mandatory celibacy requirement for the clergy and make it instead a voluntary choice. Although finding that celibacy was not a direct cause of child sexual abuse by the clergy, it was a contributing factor, the panel said.

The report reads: "We conclude that there is an elevated risk of child sex abuse where compulsorily celibate male clergy or religious have privileged access to children in certain types of Catholic institutions, including schools, residential institutions and parishes."

It is a "contributing factor" for the reason I have stated: homosexuals are drawn to the office.

But they can't say that, because that implies homosexuals are predators. They can't even call them "homosexuals," and instead call them "pedophiles," which is the wrong use of the word, given that these are not "children," but pubescent boys that are being targeted.

Since Vatican II, everything meaningful has been stripped from the church, so no one other than homosexuals is going to be interested in forgoing sex with women in order to be a member of its clergy. That is the ultimate problem. In fact, it's similar to what I wrote earlier today about how you can't get normal people to be cops, and so are left with losers and power-mad sadists.

Yeah, if you allowed non-celibate people to be priests, you could get normal men in there with the lure of relatively high pay and extreme job security, and that would presumably water down the currently highly-condensed homosexual population.

But that doesn't appear to me to be a good or real solution to the issue.

And it isn't going to happen anyway—this is just some nonsense from Australia. There is a push to allow married priests, but there is a bigger push to keep it a homosexual man-boy love cult, and as in most situations, the gay lobby is stronger.

The Jews have already gotten their wish for the destruction of the Catholic church. It was fully hollowed-out as soon as the reforms were passed and it was just a matter of watching it rot.

Fixing Christendom is a daunting task.

And evangelical cults are in many ways in a worse state than Catholics.

Almost makes a man want to embrace an artificial womb-oriented genocidal galactic empire.

Charlottesville Owes James Fields a New Dodge Challenger

Lee Rogers
Daily Stormer
December 15, 2017

James Fields has been unjustly charged with first-degree murder for defending himself against a mob of terrorists. What they did to his Dodge Challenger was an act of pure hate.

The government has just upgraded charges against James Fields to include a first-degree murder charge. This is retarded beyond imagination.

USA Today:

The alleged reckless driver who plowed his car into a crowd protesting a white nationalist rally in Charlottesville, Va. is now charged with first-degree murder, after prosecutors showed a judge surveillance video of the deadly assault.

Prosecutors announced at the start of a preliminary hearing for James Alex Fields that they were seeking to upgrade the second-degree murder charge he previously faced in the Aug. 12 collision in Charlottesville that left 32-year-old Heather Heyer dead and dozens injured. The judge agreed to that and ruled there is probable cause for all charges against Fields to proceed.

Fields' case will now be presented to a grand jury for an indictment.

Let's look at the definition of first-degree murder.

First-degree murder: any intentional murder that is willful and premeditated with malice aforethought. Felony murder, a charge that may be filed against a defendant who is involved in a dangerous crime where a death results from the crime, is typically first-degree.

How were they able to determine that any of this was premeditated by watching surveillance video? Does this make logical sense to anybody? A first-degree murder charge requires evidence that Fields had specifically planned to go to Charlottesville to use his Dodge Challenger to murder someone. That can't be determined by simply viewing surveillance footage.

Now let's look at the definition of second-degree murder.

Second-degree murder: any intentional murder with malice aforethought, but is not premeditated or planned.

Even the second-degree murder charge is ridiculous. That would imply that he intentionally killed that fat whale Heather Heyer. A notion entirely insane considering that she wasn't even hit by the car. She died because she was a grossly obese tub of lard.

This entire situation was allowed to happen because police failed in their duties. The independent report commissioned by the Charlottesville city government even confirms this. The incident occurred hours after they declared a state of emergency effectively banning public assemblies. Police not only failed to block off this area to vehicle traffic, but they took no action to disband this assembly of violent Communist retards. These people were armed with all sorts of weapons. What were they doing still roaming the streets? It is not unreasonable to think that a driver would feel threatened by this violent mob.

This is quoted from the independent report.

3) The Traffic Plan Placed Insufficient Resources at Particular Intersections and Left the Downtown

Mall Vulnerable to a Vehicle Used as a Weapon.

CPD's traffic plan represented another misallocation of resources that had tragic consequences on August 12. Planners put unarmed civilian employees at particular intersections where violent confrontations arose. They also failed to sufficiently protect a crucial intersection, allowing a vehicle to strike a large crowd of people and cause on death and numerous injuries.

Suffice to say, this first-degree murder charge is insane. The charge is not based on facts or evidence. This is a politically motivated charge that has no basis in reality.

Look at what those evil anti-fascist terrorists did to this fine automobile. Charlottesville should immediately compensate Fields with a new 2017 Dodge Challenger. It is the police's fault that his car was smashed up those terrorists.

What has happened to Fields is an injustice. Not only do I believe that Fields should be freed, but I believe that the Charlottesville city government should compensate Fields with a new 2017 Dodge Challenger. It should include all the best options complete with pimped out rims and shit. Xzibit should be brought on board to pimp his ride.

Xzibit's mid-2000s ride pimping is legend.

The police's failure to keep the streets safe led to his fine automobile getting smashed up by a gang of Marxist terrorists. Fields at minimum deserves this compensation.

Besides, I don't think anybody would argue that his Dodge Challenger was of greater value than the life of that fat bitch Heather Heyer. Her life was utterly worthless and devoid of meaning. There is no arguing this fact.

Shocking: Report Concludes ISIS Got Their Weapons from US and Saudia Arabia

Adrian Sol

Daily Stormer

December 15, 2017

What a twist! It turns out we were ISIS all along!

When I read this news story, I thought "wow, this really takes me back to 2014." As the ISIS story was originally developing, the Stormer reported about how America was sending a whole bunch of weapons into Syria and they were all ending up in the hands of these terrorists.

So I kind of assumed all intelligent people already knew about this—ISIS is obviously a CIA/Mossad/Saudi operation.

But it seems some serious types were looking into it and finally came to the same conclusions.

Business Insider:

Arms provided by the United States and Saudi Arabia to Syrian opposition groups frequently ended up in the hands of Islamic State, an arms monitoring group that analyzed weapons found on the battlefield said on Thursday.

Conflict Armament Research (CAR) said most Islamic State weapons were looted from the Iraqi and Syrian armies. But some were originally provided by other countries, mainly the United States and Saudi Arabia, to Syrian opposition groups fighting against President Bashar al-Assad.

Ah, yes. The old “democratic Syrian opposition.” Also known as the “moderate terrorists.”

Are these “good,” democratic terrorists? Or “bad” terrorists? You better be sure before you send them weapons! Also—is that a katana at the left guy’s feet? I didn’t know they accepted weeps in ISIS.

It still boggles my mind that the Obama administration had the audacity to push this line about “moderate terrorists” being the “good guys” in Syria, while they were just going ahead and sending weapons to the Islamic State.

“These findings are a stark reminder of the contradictions inherent in supplying weapons into armed conflicts in which multiple competing and overlapping non-state armed groups operate,” the group said in a 200-page report.

Bro, the only “contradiction” here is between saying you oppose ISIS and then sending them a bunch of weapons. But really, it’s more of a bold-faced lie than anything else. The policy of Israel (and thus the United States) was to destroy Syria and throw the region into chaos. That’s exactly what the purpose of ISIS is. It makes perfect sense—there’s no contradiction, just a little PR campaign to put a nice spin on it.

“The American cries out about homophobia as he pays Jihadist death squads to come and throw your faggots off rooftops.” —Ancient Arab proverb.

CAR documented at least 12 cases of weaponry purchased by the United States that ended up in Islamic State’s hands, either captured on the battlefield or acquired through shifting alliances within the Syrian opposition. Most of these items later ended up in Iraq, the monitor said.

In one case, it took only two months for Islamic State fighters in Iraq to get their hands on a guided anti-tank missile the United States bought from a European country and supplied to a Syrian opposition group.

All of the items were made in EU states, and in most cases the United States broke contractual clauses prohibiting retransfers by giving the weapons to armed groups in Syria.

So the United States were literally involved in illegal arms dealings in order to supply terrorist groups trying to overthrow a country at the behest of the Jews.

Wew. That kind of looks bad, doesn’t it?

Maybe Trump should investigate the people responsible for that. I’m sure this sort of stuff is somehow illegal—it definitely endangers the national security of the United States, that’s for sure.

Apparently, his year dealing with Trump has had it’s toll on this poor sob’s psyche, and he’s now reflecting on his next move.

Hopefully, this next move involves leaving the US congress, as well as America, and moving in with the brown people he loves so much.

CNN:

The news that Speaker Paul Ryan is engaged in “soul searching” about his political future and could leave Congress after the 2018 election shocked a political Washington sprinting toward a tax cut vote and Christmas recess.

Yes. Please. GTFO.

It shouldn’t.

While Ryan insists he isn’t leaving anytime soon—not a denial, it’s worth noting! —there’s a very strong case to be made that quitting at the end of 2018 is the best possible move for his political future.

Here are five good reasons why.

1. The George Costanza Effect: There’s an episode of “Seinfeld” in which George realizes that his best move at work is to make a joke that people laugh at and then leave—he calls it going out on a high note. (See the technique here.) The theory is that you should leave on your own terms and at a moment when people have a good feeling about you.

The problem is that everyone hates his guts, so if he’s waiting for a “high note,” he’ll still be in congress when the heat death of the universe comes around.

But hey, whatever delusion gets him to leave, I support 100%.

2. The 2018 midterms: As of right now, it’s a 50-50-ish shot as to whether Ryan will even have a speakership to walk away from come late 2018.

That’s right—Bannonism is coming for you.

3. Donald Trump: Yes, I know that people who are in a position to know say that Ryan and Trump get along better than was expected. But Ryan, more than anyone, has to know that Trump is mercurial and unpredictable. Who’s to say that Trump's relationship with Ryan won't go the way of Trump's relationship with Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell—where the President was openly suggesting that McConnell might need to step aside if tax reform didn't pass?

The idea that Trump and Ryan might “get along” is ridiculous. Ryan is like a battered hostage trying to keep up the pretense that everything is okay. Trump is the opposite of everything he stands for, and every time he opens his mouth he can't help but criticize Trump's populist agenda. He's only pretending to cooperate in order to sneak in his own Jew-shill bias into the legislation.

Basically, Paul Ryan came into politics with the intention of being a comfortable shill for Jews and corporations, but now his plan is being disrupted by the rise of populism, which suddenly makes his platform non-viable. And he can't change the platform, because people have already paid him to stand on it. So it's quite possible he might actually bow out.

Or, this could just be fake news. When you see every Jew news outlet reporting a rumor at the same time, you have to wonder if there is an agenda behind it. I'm not sure what that agenda would be in this particular situation, but you do always have to wonder.

In any case, we desperately need Paul Ryan to quit. We already have another Paul to replace him with who'll certainly do a much better job.

Unlike Paul Ryan, I pledge to:

1. Uphold my Oath of Office.
 2. Make no Laws that don't apply to Congress or Admin officials.
 3. Build a Wall.
 4. Deport Illegals.
 5. Vote for National Reciprocity.
 6. Vote the Muslim Brotherhood a terror org.
 7. Vote for the Heartbeat Bill.

BIG WIN: Sarah Silverman Says She's Scared of the American Flag Because She's Jewish!

Andrew Anglin

This is what I am trying to tell you people: nationalism scares Jews.

The American flag scares Jews.

Random “fascist” flags you made in Photoshop do not scare Jews nearly as much as the one that has represented our W H I T E nation for over 200 years.

Downtrend:

On her show I Love You, America With Sarah Silverman, she proves without a doubt that her program is deceptively titled with this little anecdote:

“I had a boyfriend many years ago, he was my first boyfriend who had his own house, and one day I went outside to see what he was doing, and he was hoisting an American flag up the flagpole in his front yard. And I instantly felt very weird. It didn't make sense, but I felt this feeling of like, um, I felt scared—yeah, I felt scared. So I was like, ‘Uh, what are you doing?’ and he said, ‘Raising the flag,’ and I was like, ‘Why?’ and he's like, ‘Um, because I love America?’ and I was like, ‘Right, right, of course.’ But inside I was shaken,” started Silverman.

But wait, it gets worse when she is able to identify the source of her disturbing feelings:

“I called my sister Susie to tell her what happened. Now, maybe you're thinking, ‘What do you mean what happened? Nothing happened, your boyfriend put an American flag up at his own house.’ No, you're totally right, I had no idea why I was freaking out. I just—I had this very visceral reaction and my sister, who knows shit because she's a rabbi in Israel, explained to me, she was like, ‘Dude, nationalism is innately terrifying for Jews. Think about it: flags, marching, blind allegiance? These things tend to ring a bell for us.’ Right. Of course. Duh. It made sense,” said Silverman.

“Inherently terrifying for Jews.” That's it.

There you go.

American flags are not just good optics for our fellow goyim, they are what is going to strike fear into the heart of the eternal kike enemy.

Do not be seduced by edgy anti-nationalism and white communism being forced on the Alt-Right by confused or deviant characters. We are not redesigning the wheel here.

Fuentism is the viable form of American Nationalism.

It scares the Jews.

It is good optics.

And remember: this is the theme song.

Christmas Bombing of Christians in Pakistan! Not Jews!

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer

Oh the Christmas tree. Sad.

Moslems are so stupid it will make you sick.

Why are they bombing Christians, instead of organizing against the Jews that took their land?

Fox News:

Eight people were killed and dozens of others were wounded on Sunday when two suicide bombers attacked a church in Pakistan where hundreds of worshippers were attending service ahead of Christmas, officials said.

One of the suicide bombers was shot dead outside Bethel Memorial Methodist Church in Quetta, but the other assailant made it to the church's entrance hall as Sunday services opened, said Sarfaraz Bugti, home minister for the south-western Baluchistan province. The gunman—who didn't gain access to the main building—opened fire at the churchgoers before detonating his explosive vest.

"There were nearly 400 people inside the church, but the attackers couldn't get inside the services," provincial police chief Moazzam Jah told Reuters. "We killed one of them, and the other one exploded himself after police wounded him," he said.

Eight people, including two women, were killed in the attack. Five women and two children were among the 45 people hurt.

Just imagine the mindset here: in the middle of this gigantic issue with the Jews, these guys decide it would be a good idea to murder Christians for no reason.

And it is totally "for no reason." Well, the reasoning is that they are disbelievers, and thus if you die killing them, you go to heaven. That is the actual level of person we are dealing with here.

Ah well. Just send em all to Britain. The magic dirt will fix them right up.

Unless they form rape gangs. In which case, we'll just cover it up and hoax white rape.

Really Cool Christmas Decorations in Latvia

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 17, 2017

Beautiful.

RT:

Residents of a town in Latvia reported seeing a huge shining swastika among a neighbor's outdoor Christmas decorations, but city authorities brushed it off, saying it was an ancient folk symbol unrelated to the Nazis.

Neighbors and passers-by reported the festive fandangles on Kalnsetas street in Saldus, western Latvia, confused at seeing the disturbing symbol displayed so openly.

But a representative of the district council told the Delfi news portal that the owner of the house has always put up decorations around Christmas-time, and this year chose the "Fire Cross", the traditional Latvian symbol of fire. Dina Neimeta, a public and international relations official at the council, said although some may find the set-up confusing it was not breaking any laws.

A number of other Saldus residents seemed to agree. "This is not a swastika. A swastika is the other way around," Uldis, a local janitor, told RT's Ruptly video agency.

In Latvian folk tradition, the swastika, known as the "Fire Cross" or "Thunder Cross," is iconic of the god of thunder, light, lightning, power and happiness. As such, it is often incorporated into complex patterns used for jewelry and clothing like mittens.

Except it isn't the other way around though. And it's tilted at the exactly correct angle.

I'm dreaming of a Christmas when we won't have to explain away our lighted Christmas swastikas.

We're already saying "Merry Christmas" again.

So I don't think it's too much to ask.

Erdogan Says Moslems will Lose Mecca If They Fail to Hold Jerusalem

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 17, 2017

This would certainly be the obvious end result, yes.

However, the Jews have given you Moslems Europe in exchange. RT:

Muslims may lose Mecca and other holy sites if the US decision to recognize Jerusalem as Israeli capital isn't reversed, Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan has warned

"If we lose Jerusalem then we won't be able to protect Medina. If we lose Medina—we will lose Mecca and Kaaba," Erdogan said in a speech at an award ceremony in Istanbul.

Erdogan has been one of the most vocal critics of President Trump's controversial decision to recognize Jerusalem as the capital of Israel. The Turkish president has slammed other nations for their "weak" response to the US move.

On Saturday, Erdogan urged the UN Security Council to annul Trump's decision. If the UNSC fails to act on the issue, Turkey will do everything necessary within legal frameworks to fight the US recognition, he promised.

"If the [UN Security Council] will not, we will approach relevant authorities within a legal framework," Erdogan said. "Turkey will not stop defending Palestine or Jerusalem just because Israel wants it to."

"Like a century ago, the Islamic world is facing efforts to reshape it through blood, tears, and strife between brothers," Erdogan said, as cited by Anadolu news agency. People in the Islamic world must "be prepared for attacks which try to bring down Muslims from within," he said.

Israel is definitely expanding.

And "Greater Israel" is not exactly a conspiracy theory. It was written about in official Jewish documents. It has a Wikipedia page.

These are the borders they want:

That isn't quite all the way to Mecca, but it's damn close.

But seriously, Moslems.

You're gonna have to do more than whine to the UN if you want to stop these kikes.

Trump and Russia Colluded to Defeat ISIS

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 16, 2016

Russia is pointing out that they actually defeated ISIS.

Newsweek:

Russia's Defense Ministry has criticized the U.S. over what it claims are mixed messages about its fight against the Islamic State militant group (ISIS) in Syria.

The Russian military was irked by President Donald Trump's taking credit for defeating the Islamist group, while the military has maintained forces on the ground in Syria. Moscow's blunt response came after Trump saluted U.S. Defense Secretary James Mattis for doing a "fantastic job" in fighting the group last week and once again praised the U.S. "campaign to obliterate ISIS" during a defense budget signing on Tuesday. "As you know, we've won in Syria, we've won in Iraq. But they spread to other areas and we're getting them as fast as they spread," Trump said.

Russia's President Vladimir Putin has also attempted to portray Moscow as the winner in the Syrian war, and his defense ministry has taken offense at Trump's words, accusing U.S. defense chiefs of lying. Major General Igor Konashenkov, spokesman for Russia's Defense Ministry, said the U.S. should either pull out of Syria, or stop letting President Donald Trump claim victory.

"It appears that either the Pentagon is consciously deceiving the international and American public, including their own commander in chief, or there no longer exist any grounds or formal pretexts for American forces to be in Syria," Konashenkov said on Friday, reported in state media outlet Tass.

Konashenkov took aim at the fact that the U.S. does not plan to end its military intervention in Syria. Russia, a military ally of Syrian President Bashar al-Assad, has long argued that it is part of the only legitimate intervention in the country because the Syrian autocrat asked for Moscow's help and not that of the U.S. and its allies.

In fact, Russia is correct. They are the ones who defeated the enemy with bombs. But the enemy wouldn't even have been there in the first place if the West, in the name of Israel, hadn't created it.

And it was Donald Trump who pulled the funding for these terrorists and allowed Russia to clean-up.

So the accurate statement would be: Trump and Russia colluded to defeat ISIS.

Anti-White Rape Hoax Collapses in the Land of the Grooming Gang

December 16, 2017

This is the real face of rape? r u sure?

Britain is the place where Pakistani gangs are given free license to troll middle schools for fatherless 11-year-old white girls, drug them and then sell them for sex.

Even with government estimates claiming that up to a million little girls have been subjected to this treatment by the Pakis, not a single feminist has spoken out about it. Literally zero. In the world. No feminist has mentioned it.

Child sex abuse gangs could have assaulted ONE MILLION youngsters in the UK

Rotherham's Labour MP Sarah Champion describes it as a "national disaster" and is demanding a taskforce to fight the "horror"

By Lucy Thornton
22 Nov 2015

Instead, they turn anti-white rape hoaxes into major international stories. Then when the hoaxes fall apart—as you have to imagine they know they will—they go back to not talking about migrant child grooming gangs.

RT:

A rape trial judge has called for an urgent inquiry after it was revealed police failings led to the collapse of a case. Evidence which could have potentially cleared the name of Liam Allan, 22, was not handed over to Croydon Crown Court, despite Allan being on bail for almost two years.

On Thursday, his trial was ceased after it emerged vital evidence had been withheld.

Officers within the Metropolitan Police had refused to hand over the phone records of Allan's alleged victim—a woman who says he raped and sexually assaulted her on six occasions—and had told Allan's lawyers there was nothing of interest in them.

However, when a new prosecution barrister took over the case just one day before the trial began, the phone records were handed over. A staggering 40,000 messages were taken from the handset and showed the woman had asked the undergraduate student for sex on more than one occasion.

She had told police the sex was not consensual and she had not enjoyed it. Yet she texted friends that she enjoyed sex with Allan and even spoke about her fantasies of having violent sex and being raped by him.

Undergraduate Allan was facing 10 years in prison if found guilty. His lawyers always maintained their client's belief the woman acted maliciously because he was starting university and would not see her again.

The judge at the trial has called for an inquiry at the "very highest level" of the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS).

Prosecuting barrister and former Tory MP Jerry Hayes said: "I would like to apologize to Liam Allan. There was a terrible failure in disclosure which was inexcusable. There could have been a very serious miscarriage of justice, which could have led to a very significant period of imprisonment and life on the sex offenders register. It appears the [police] officer in the case has not reviewed the disk, which is quite appalling."

Allan told the Times outside of court: "I can't explain the mental torture of the past two years. I feel betrayed by the system which I had believed would do the right thing—the system I want to work in."

And what will be the punishment for this woman ruining this poor guy's life out of bitterness?

Absolutely nothing.

It is not a crime for a woman to hoax rape allegations against a man as long as it is ostensibly "real in her mind."

This is the system that men live under. At any point, for any reason, a woman can claim that the sex you had with her was "rape," your life be destroyed and she face no consequences whatsoever.

Most of the time, the accuser's name is protected. No one ever even knows she committed this act of evil.

No other area of the legal system works this way.

What's more: regardless of how many times this happens, there is never any talk of reforming the system. We are just told that hoax accusations against innocent white men is the price we have to pay, because maybe someday a white man will rape a woman, have no evidence and need to be believed on her word alone.

Meanwhile, the Pakis continue their grooming gang rampage as bodies pile up.

Feminism is not about “defending the rights of women.” It is exclusively about harming white men. Women go along with it for various reasons. Sometimes because it is in their material, sexual or emotional interest, sometimes because they are stupid, but mostly because they are incapable of logically processing information and can be convinced of anything by anyone with the resources to emotionally manipulate them into believing it.

Austria: Anti-Migrant Freedom Party Enters Government!

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer

Finally, finally, finally: people in Western Europe are getting just a wee bit upset about being buried in an avalanche of color.

RT:

After celebrating a resounding success in the recent parliamentary elections, the anti-immigrant Freedom Party of Austria (FPO) has joined a coalition government with Sebastian Kurz's conservative Austrian People's Party (OVP).

The agreement between the People's Party and the Freedom Party, which is returning to government after more than a decade's absence, was struck on Friday, the two parties' leaders, Sebastian Kurz and Heinz-Christian Strache, announced in a joint news conference. Strache, who once advocated a law similar to the ban on Nazi practices to be introduced against “political Islam,” spoke about “mutual appreciation” with Kurz, adding that they share “the responsibility for our homeland Austria and for the people in this country.”

The details of the coalition agreement will not be revealed before centrist Austrian President Alexander van der Bellen is briefed on the outcome of the talks, although Kurz has already outlined some points vital to both parties that would shape future government's agenda. Among them is a further tightening of screws over migration.

“We want to reduce the burden on taxpayers...and above all we want to ensure greater security in our country, including through the fight against illegal immigration,” Kurz said.

A source with knowledge of the negotiations told Reuters that the Freedom Party is seeking at least three key ministerial jobs: Interior, Foreign and Defense.

While the Austrian far-right party under its current chairman has never called for leaving the EU, Kurz reportedly worked to ensure that his coalition partner would never seek an Austrian version of Brexit.

Never forget that leftists shifted things slowly over a period of decades.

We don't have that much time, but we still need to view the shift toward TOTAL FASCISM as a march rather than a jump.

Yes, these are moderate rightists, but they make room for less moderate rightists.

Indonesia Fails to Ban Faggot "Sex"! Shame!

You'd think if anyone was able to stand up to Big Anal, it would be primitive jungle folk.

Globo-homo has spread its testicles across this planet—even influencing the primitive and full-Islam nation of Indonesia!

Was big analist money pouring in from Amsterdam and Tel Aviv???

Wall Street Journal:

A bid by religious activists to outlaw sex outside marriage and gay sex has been narrowly rejected by a powerful court—a rare recent victory for Indonesia's moderate forces.

The court's decision bolstered social liberals in the world's most populous Muslim-majority nation. Indonesia has taken a conservative bent in recent years, with the government cracking down on alcohol sales and banning some pornographic online content, as conservative Islam plays an increasingly important role in politics.

In a 467-page ruling against the petition Thursday, the Constitutional Court said existing laws covering adultery and gay sex don't contradict the country's 1945 constitution, and that it is beyond the court's purview to make or revise laws. The court can annul regulations that run counter to the constitution.

Still, four of nine judges took dissenting positions. They argued that "homosexuality is clearly one of the sexual behaviors...that is extremely reprehensible before religious laws...and the living law." They agreed the court should refrain from acting as a legislative body, but argued such restrictions don't apply when a law reduces or opposes religious values or living law.

The petition, organized by the Family Love Alliance, a group of activists and conservative academics, had asked the court to expand articles on adultery and gay sex in the country's criminal code such that all consensual sexual acts outside marriage would be outlawed.

See, I think combining it with “sex outside of marriage” might have been the deal-killer. That’s maybe a good idea in an ideal world, but it’s a hard sell. The laws should be separated and introduced separately. Surely, banning “gay sex” is possible in Indonesia. Most people would assume it was already banned there.

But if these people cannot even stop butt-blasting in their own country, I don’t know how they’re supposed to overthrow Israel and push the Jews into the sea. I can tell you that much.

Poland Makes Jewish Banker Their Prime Minister

Eric Striker
Daily Stormer
December 14, 2017

Mounting pressure from the European Union and international Jewry over rising Polish nationalism led to a shocking coup that replaced Prime Minister Beata Maria Szydło with foreign educated, Brussels-backed finance minister Mateusz Morawiecki.

Morawiecki is a Johnny-come-lately in the alt-lite tier Law and Justice Party, which he only joined in 2015 when they were tasked to form a government.

Morawiecki’s meteoric rise has sparked controversy, with rumors floating around that his job is to implement Brussels African and Arab migrant quotas and increase Poland’s “European” integration. Detractors believe the seemingly random political swap was the work of foreign powers unhappy with the path Poland is on.

Oh, did I mention that he’s also a rootless cosmopolitan Jewish banker?

Times of Israel:

Poland’s new prime minister, Mateusz Morawiecki, was officially sworn into office Monday along with the Cabinet members who served under his predecessor.

The country’s prime minister of the last two years, Beata Szydło, was sworn in as deputy prime minister during the ceremony at the Presidential Palace.

There had been speculation in Poland Monday that the Cabinet might undergo immediate changes. That proved not to be the case as the other ministers took their oaths one-by-one and signed declarations pledging to observe the Constitution.

Morawiecki, who previously held the posts of deputy prime minister and minister of finance and development, was picked last week to head the government by Jaroslaw Kaczynski, the powerful leader of the ruling Law and Justice party. Kaczynski attended the swearing-in ceremony.

The new prime minister, who has Jewish roots, said his task will also be to preserve Poland’s national identity and culture.

“This will be a government of continuation,” and of “hope and optimism,” Morawiecki said, adding that prosperity for families, well-paid jobs and affordable housing would be priorities.

Szydło was popular among Poles, but the country’s image abroad has suffered as a result of the conservative government’s refusal to accept migrants, pursuit of logging in a virgin forest and more assertive stance toward Germany.

Perhaps the most critical point of controversy has been the way Law and Justice has consolidated the government’s control over the judiciary, something the European Union sees as a violation of the rule of law.

Explaining the switch in leadership, party officials said the government needs to focus on the economy, which has grown in recent years but is seen as in need of a push for innovation—and to improve Poland’s standing in the European Union and with other foreign nations.

Morawiecki, a former banker who speaks English and German, is seen as better prepared to represent Poland internationally.

The question that remains unanswered: if Poland is a “democracy” and relegated Prime Minister Szydło was popular, why was she overthrown and replaced with some English-speaking Jewish usurer?

Does anyone really trust him to “preserve Poland’s national identity and culture”?

“Poland’s national identity and culture”

To get a hint as to what Morawiecki thinks Polish identity is, see his recent statement about Poles serving Jews being the pinnacle of Polish national life.

My guess is this neo-liberal will go on a massive privatization spree, declare the need for immigrants to “increase the GDP,” and open the borders while Poles are distracted by short-term economic prosperity (fueled by high-interest credit).

Then when it's time to pay the bill, Poles will be broke, ankle deep in negroes and Arabs and unable to do anything coherent about it.

Sounds crazy, but Poland isn't as "based" as you might think. Once the older generations die, bougie careerist women who exclusively consume (((American media))) and are taught at George Soros University will begin ascending to power with the EU's support. The amount of NGO investment towards this end is unreal, and Poland isn't doing enough to fight it like Hungary is.

The Poles want European subsidies without selling their national soul? Not going to happen. Poland must leave the European Union or else it is merely delaying its doom.

Germany: Laser Man to Go on Trial for Murder of Holofoax "Survivor"

Spartacus
Daily Stormer

John Ausonius, AKA Laser Man

Political prisoner John Ausonius, who is serving a life sentence in Sweden for defending his country against subhuman invaders, now has another accusation against him—this time in Germany, where he apparently killed some old kike bitch for stealing his electronic notebook thingy.

The Guardian:

A Swedish far-right extremist whose shooting spree in the 1990s inspired "lone wolf" terrorists such as Anders Breivik will go on trial in Germany on Wednesday morning for an unresolved murder of an Auschwitz survivor in Frankfurt 25 years ago.

That took them a while.

John Ausonius, 64, is already serving a life sentence in Sweden for the shooting of 11 people of immigrant background in the Stockholm and Uppsala area between August 1991 and January 1992. His aim, he said in interviews, was to scare immigrants out of the country and discourages others from entering.

Ausonius was dubbed Lasermanen, or "laser man", in Swedish media because he used a rifle equipped with laser sight for the attacks, which left Jimmy Ranjbar, an Iranian student, dead and others with severe disabilities.

I don't get why he's in prison. What exactly did he do wrong?

Now, 17 years after eventually confessing to 10 attempted shootings, Ausonius will appear in a Frankfurt court for a trial that could dash his hopes of an early release.

On 8 February 1992, while on the run from Swedish police, Ausonius visited a restaurant in the city's Opernplatz square. Two weeks later he returned, accusing cloakroom attendant Blanka Zmigrod of having stolen an electronic Casio notebook from his pocket.

An altercation ended with Ausonius shouting "we will meet again" at Zmigrod as he left the restaurant. The following night, the 68-year-old was shot from close range by a hooded cyclist as she walked home from work.

Aside from the fact that kikes don't belong in Europe—what exactly is their proof here? Or are they just trying to keep him in prison?

A new documentary, published on Wednesday by Aftonbladet newspaper, reveals for the first time that Zmigrod had been a prisoner at four concentration camps, including Auschwitz and Bergen-Belsen, and survived several of the infamous "death marches".

After the war, she met fellow Holocaust survivor Sacha Feldman in Tel Aviv, and in 1960 the couple later moved back to Germany to run restaurants and hotels.

So she must've been gaschambered at least 4 times in total without dying.

Swedish police investigator Stefan Bergquist has said Ausonius smiled and appeared happy when informed during questioning in 1993 that Zmigrod had Jewish ancestry.

That's not proof. Everybody is happy when they find out a kike died, no matter how much they deny it. This is the kikes' fault, of course, for being the source of 99% of all problems in every place they infest.

Ausonius has confirmed that he used to possess the same type of Browning pistol and ammunition used in the murder, but denies shooting Zmigrod. His lawyer, Joachim Bremer, said there were "isolated leads, but no self-sustaining chain [of evidence]" which proved Ausonius was responsible for the death.

Like I said—they're just trying to keep him in prison, even though he did nothing wrong.

The case in Frankfurt has been re-opened partly because of speculation that the “laser man” shootings served as a blueprint for killings carried out between 2000 and 2007 by German neo-Nazi terrorist group National Socialist Underground (NSU).

Like Ausonius, members of the NSU shot their targets from close range and carried out bank robberies to fund their terrorism campaign, often escaping on bikes. In both cases, the terrorists did not claim responsibility for their actions at the time, leading investigators to initially suspect the shootings were gang-related.

Yeah, the whole “claiming responsibility” thing is pretty dumb. If you wanna do something like this, just do it, don’t brag about it.

Norwegian white supremacist Anders Breivik, who killed 77 people in a terrorist attack in Oslo and the island of Utøya in July 2011, directly cited the “laser man” as the inspiration for his killing spree in a court statement, though it remains unclear whether he was referring to Ausonius or another Swedish copycat killer, Peter Mangs.

After he complained against what he perceived to be a campaign of “terror” against opponents of multiculturalism, Breivik said in court: “It is these injustices that created me, and Laserman in Sweden.”

So in spite of not having a good KDA himself, Laser Guy was an inspiration to many. Good for him.

Ausonius has said he was inspired to carry out his crimes by the rise of new Swedish far-right parties such as New Democracy and Sweden Democrats, but interviews also hint at a deeper psychological motive.

Born Wolfgang Zaugg to a Swiss father and a German mother, the man who sought out immigrant victims, had an immigrant background himself. Thanks to his black hair and brown eyes, he was ostracised at school and bullied.

Only in his 20s did he obtain Swedish citizenship and change his name to Ausonius, after a Roman poet. He also tried to dye his hair blond and wore blue contact lenses to change his eye colour. “His whole life was about proving himself to be a real Swede,” said Tamas, who interviewed Ausonius 10 times between 2000 and 2001.

If he actually was bullied, it was more likely for being a foreigner than for the actual appearance. I’ve never been to Sweden, but I’m reasonably certain not every last Swede has blonde hair and blue eyes.

As for him dying his hair and wearing contact lenses—How come none of these “geniuses” thought that, since he was breaking the law—shooting people is illegal in Sweden if you’re White—he might have wanted to stand out less. And how do you stand out less in Sweden? You dye your hair blonde and wear blue contact lenses.

In the last nine years he has applied four times for an early release. A conviction in Germany would make it even less likely that his appeals will be successful in the future.

And these people have the nerve to call us fascists...

TL;DR Laser Bro did nothing wrong.

Argentina: Starbucks Wifi Using Customers’ Computers to Mine Crypto!

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 14, 2017

The crypto mining situation is dire. No one has enough machines to do what needs to be done.

The solution, of course, is to use other people’s computers to do it. Get creative.

RT:

Coffee giant Starbucks has confirmed that the free Wi-Fi in at least one of its Argentina stores has been infecting its customers’ electronic devices with a malicious code to mine cryptocurrencies.

The issue was initially reported early in December by an executive of a New York-based technology company, who noticed that while he got coffee in a Starbucks store in Buenos Aires, his laptop received a malicious crypto-currency mining code.

While the initial report stated the malicious code was mining bitcoins, other Twitter users pointed out that the website hosting the script was mining another cryptocurrency, monero.

Starbucks acknowledged the issue on Monday. The coffee giant said it had investigated the report and “took swift action to ensure our internet provider resolved the issue and made the changes needed in order to ensure our customers could use Wi-Fi in our store safely.”

The malicious code problem appeared to be not widespread, but a local one, according to the company, which shifted the blame for the script injection onto its Wi-Fi provider.

As we are discussing neo-future currencies, I want to take this opportunity to once again thank the SPLC for getting me banned from PayPal, and starting me on Crypto-Road.

In particular, I want to thank Heidi Beirich, who took personal credit for having my PayPal account shut down in 2014.

Thank you, Heidi.

If it was not for that incident, it's likely I never would have gotten into BTC.

Oh, and I would be remiss not to give my address, so that you all can share your winnings:

Come shut this down, Jews.

White supremacists are the big winners of bitcoin's epic rally

You built it, after all. It's your responsibility that so many Nazis have made YUGE money off of BTC.

You might as well have been like: "EVIL NAZIS REEEEEEE GET IN THIS ROOM FULL OF UNLIMITED FREE MONEY!!!!!"

Is China Preparing to Wipe Out Its Moslems with Gene-Specific Bio-Weapons?

Adrian Sol
Daily Stormer

December 14, 2017

What the hell are Moslems doing in China? Did the Middle-East run out of goats?

The Chinese people, probably inspired by their assiduous study of the Daily Stormer, appears to be gearing up to exterminate their Moslem population with race-specific viruses or some other form of DNA-based bio-weaponry [Editor's Note: Specifically, they are studying Andrew Anglin's theories rather than those of weev, the latter of which is shunning race-specific viruses in favor of a nonviable nigger-killing robots scheme. -AA].

Do you have any other explanation for this?

Very nice.

Buzzfeed News:

From DNA samples to iris scans, Chinese authorities are using free physical exams to gather and store biological data from millions of people who live in the country's far west region of Xinjiang, Human Rights Watch said on Wednesday, citing an official document that suggests the government's surveillance program in the region is even wider than previously believed.

Xinjiang, the historical home of the Uighur ethnic group, has become a testing ground for heavy-handed, high-tech surveillance measures by the government over the past year. China says the measures are necessary to combat extremist violence, but critics say they violate the basic privacy rights of millions of people, particularly ethnic minorities.

The Chinese don't even care about the rights of their own people, and you think they'll shed a tear over the feelings of Moslems, whom they hate?

Lol.

Chinks are known not to give one single fuck about dead children, let alone anyone else.

Human Rights Watch added it's not clear whether those who take the physical exams realize their personal information is being recorded and stored.

Everyone who lives in the Muslim-majority Xinjiang, and is between the ages of 12 and 65, is being targeted for their biometrics, says the document, which was posted on the website of a local government located in the region. But for those deemed to be threatening the stability of the government and their families—a broad category that could include people who criticize the government or engage in religious practices—the data is being collected regardless of age. It's unclear what period of time the program spans, though the document appears to have been circulated in July.

"People who engage in religious practices."

In other words, all Moslems.

Authorities are making house calls to collect the data and setting up "collection points" in the region, the document says. The DNA information is sent to police for "profiling," it adds, saying the program's goal is to verify the size of the region's population.

Okay, so I don't know if they're really developing bio-weapons to wipe out their Moslem population. It wouldn't surprise me, though. But they certainly are cracking down on them harder than any other government is doing, that's for sure. Sampling the DNA of the entire Moslem population is pretty hardcore.

These chinky Moslems do appear to be biologically distinct from the Han population. Note the facial hair, darker skin. The clearly have genetic material from both Eastern Slavs and Mongol tribes, if not also central Asian cave-niggers.

Basically, every Moslem in China is now treated as a potential criminal or terrorist. If any of them do anything out of line, the police will be able to instantly tell who's responsible from fingerprints, blood samples, hair, or whatever else they find at the scene.

But entertain no doubt that they would exterminate them without a second thought if they felt they could get away with it in terms of international opinion.

Egypt: Fat Banana-Sucking Slut Jailed for Harming Public Morality!

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 13, 2017

Is she jailed for sucking that banana or being a fat slut in general???

I don't believe this bitch ever ate a banana in real life unless it was soaked in ice cream!

RT:

An Egyptian court jailed a pop singer for two years for suggestively eating a banana and appearing in her underwear in a recent music video.

Shyma's video for the song "I have issues" caused immediate outrage in the highly socially conservative country. Since President Abdel Fattah al-Sisi came to power in 2014, authorities have used wide-ranging morality laws to clamp down on freedom of expression.

"I didn't imagine all this would happen and that I would be subjected to such a strong attack from everyone, as a young singer...who has dreamt from a young age of being a singer," Shyma wrote in a now-deleted Facebook post. Egypt's musicians union subsequently banned Shyma from performing, reports Gulf News Egypt.

"The content of the video clip is harmful to the Egyptian society," MP Jalal Awara said at the time of the video's release, as cited by Gulf News Egypt. "There must be a firm stance against promoters of this substandard art."

The young singer, whose real name is Shaimaa Ahmed, was arrested on November 18, Reuters reports. Her trial in The Misdemeanour Court in Cairo began on November 28 where she pleaded not guilty to charges of "inciting debauchery and producing a video that harms public morality." She alleges that she was forced into the provocative poses by the video's director, who included the scenes in the final cut without her consent.

Both were fined (EG) £10,000 ($560) and sentenced to two years in prison.

That "A MAN FORCED ME TO DO IT" shit doesn't fly in sand-land. Just like fat bitch suck videos don't fly.

Sandpeople might actually be sandapes, but they lay the law down on a bitch.

Seriously though, these sand-folk have to be thinking like "WHY DO WE HAVE TO DEAL WITH THIS SHIT???"

It is, of course, because the Jews created it and used our systems to distribute it across the planet.

Here's the offending—and I mean OFFENDING—video.

Truly, this is a question of philosophy.

The Independent:

A far-right mayor in France has denied mocking the murder of a woman on a train track in a poster campaign calling for a high-speed rail network extension.

Robert Menard, mayor of Beziers, tweeted out posters showing a woman tied to train tracks and screaming under the caption "With High-Speed Trains she would have suffered less!"

The images caused outrage among politicians and members of the public who said they made a "despicable" reference to a recent murder case.

A 34-year-old woman named only as Emilie died in the northern town of Beauvilliers in June when her husband, named as Guillaume, tied her to railway tracks before taking his own life.

Marlene Schiappa, minister for equality, said she had told the local authorities to "examine and take all possible recourses" to deal with the "hateful campaign".

The youth branch of left-wing party France Insoumise labelled the campaign as "apologism for violence against women and femicide".

Laurence Rossignol, a senator and former minister for women said, "I have filed a complaint with the public prosecutor demanding the removal of the posters as well as legal action against their authors."

I'm so sick of this sappy feelings "outrage" nonsense.

This situation here clearly shows that it has peaked and is no longer even attempting to be coherent.

Surely, we can all move on with our lives and make decisions based on something other than feelings.

Germany Confused as It Attempts to Tell Brown People to Stop Rallying for the Death of Jews!

tfw your entire purpose as a nation is to serve the Jews, Jews tell you to flood your country with brown people and take care of them like little children, then the brown people start rioting against Jews and Jews tell you you must solve the problem.

RT:

About 200 demonstrators with Palestinian flags took to central Berlin on Tuesday to vent their outrage at Washington's decision to recognize Jerusalem as the capital of Israel. A wave of anti-Israeli protests has swept the German capital since then.

Ahead of the protest, which took place in front of Berlin's Central Station, police invoked a ban on burning any objects at the rally, meaning they would be able to intervene if anyone attempted to burn an Israeli flag, despite it not being an offence under German law. Flags have been burned at protests that have been gripping Berlin since Friday.

Activists on Washington Square in front of Berlin Central Station brandished Palestinian flags and a banner "Freedom for Palestine," while shouting slogans such as "Down, down Israel."

After past rallies were marred with death threats towards Jews, police employed interpreters to help identify hate speech, Der Spiegel reports.

There were some 400 officers deployed to the rally, double the number of the demonstrators, of which only 200 showed up despite organizers earlier announcing there would be some 500, according to Ruptly.

In addition, the rally was moved away from the Pariser Platz in front of the US embassy to the central station, as it would have coincided with Hannukkah celebrations, involving the lighting of the first Hannukkah candle on the Europe's largest menorah in front of the Brandenburg Gate.

The anti-Israel and anti-US rallies, in particular the sight of Israeli flags being burned on German streets, prompted lawmakers across party lines to condemn protesters' actions.

Interior Minister Thomas de Maizière (of the CDU) warned the protesters that insulting Israeli symbols would not be tolerated in Germany, which is, as he put it, "in a very special way connected to the state of Israel and all the people of the Jewish faith."

wew.

It sure was easy when all they were doing was gang-raping and murdering white women, huh Germany?

This is something...

How do you deal with this?

Corporate Antifa Band "Ministry" Calls on Fans to Commit Acts of Terrorism Against Trump-Voters

Ministry has always been one of those sponsor friendly politically correct metal bands that gets played on MTV.

The decision of these shark-jumping Gen X has-beens to release a music video calling on communists to commit acts of terrorism is apparently an attempt to make being an over-sensitive and hysterical snowflake "cool."

It's not resonating, the video's negative reviews outnumber the positive 4 to 1. Young people see right through this big business pro-globalist revolution-chic propaganda.

Fuck off, trendies!

Digging deeper we can see what the root of the problem is: the multi-national German corporate record label Nuclear Blast. Its owner, Markus Staiger, is personally very active in pro-Merkel regime, pro-immigration Antifa paramilitary activity. They keep their neighbors and community in line with beatings, job termination and stalking crime-thinkers.

Antifas in Germany take it upon themselves to monitor their fellow citizens criticizing immigration and then report them to the police state. How revolutionary! Staiger is quite proud to be part of this movement.

If you're familiar with the metal scene at all, you know that Nuclear Blast is often cited as one of the big forces in introducing SJW/J-left ideology in that field of creative musical expression.

What's left of the metal crowd doesn't like it, but without the money and power the Judeo-Left interlopers have behind them, they are helpless minnows being swallowed up by the poz machine.

Metal music has gone from being counter-cultural to a safe fashion statement espousing the same politics as Lady Gaga.

NB is more or less a monopoly in what has rapidly declined into a niche market. If you want to make a living playing music you better loudly signal in favor of their shitty politics and stay quiet about your own. On their band page, you will see they own all the big "sellout" pop-metal bands across the rock music spectrum: Cradle of Filth, Dimmu Borgir, Lamb of God, Nightwish, Sabaton, Testament, even Slayer.

With basically every famous metal band that's still together being at the whims of some Antifa asshole, expect this stifling and unpopular conformity masquerading as rebellion to snuff out the last breaths of a metal genre already gasping for oxygen.

Goycott all the bands that do business with Nuclear Blast.

At the end of the day, the young white men these businessmen hate are the main cash cow for any metal music enterprise. Don't go to any concerts or buy any merchandise released by these anti-white corporate Antifas.

Dennis Rodman Wants Donald Trump to Make Him a Peace Envoy to North Korea

Lee Rogers
Daily Stormer
December 12, 2017

Dennis Rodman says he can bring peace between the United States and North Korea. Donald Trump should give him the chance to try and do this. There is nothing to lose.

Dennis Rodman is back in the news again. He is urging Donald Trump to make him an official peace envoy to North Korea.

Guardian:

Dennis Rodman, the American basketball star turned freelance diplomat, has urged Donald Trump to sign him up as a peace envoy to North Korea after his latest foray into Kim Jong-un's hermit kingdom was scuppered by a travel ban preventing US citizens from visiting.

During an interview in Beijing, from where Rodman had hoped to fly to Pyongyang for his sixth trip there, the former NBA star said US officials had discouraged him from doing so amid continuing tensions between the countries. "Basically they said it's not a good time right now," he said.

A state department ban on US passport holders visiting North Korea came into force on 1 September after the death of Otto Warmbier, an American student who was detained in Pyongyang for more than a year. On 29 November, North Korea celebrated its latest intercontinental ballistic missile test, claiming it could now strike anywhere on the US mainland.

However, Rodman, who first visited North Korea in 2013 and calls Kim his friend, claimed that now was the perfect time—and he was the perfect man—to press for peace.

Rodman is the single person on earth who is friends with the DPRK leader and Trump. If there is anybody who can help broker a peace deal it would be Rodman. The fact that he has a past of being a flamboyant and off the wall character is of little consequence. He's personal friends with both men and that's what's critical.

Is Kim Jong Un really such a bad dude? Here he is with Rodman a few years back.

It is clear that decades of American foreign policy towards North Korea has not worked. Sending Rodman for talks is definitely a better alternative than an all out war on the Korean peninsula.

I've long speculated that Rodman was unofficially acting on Trump's behalf. While that may or may not be the case, I fully support giving Rodman the chance to do something in an official capacity. Kim Jong Un is a big basketball fan. Maybe Rodman can make some progress by engaging in more basketball diplomacy. They could do a basketball tournament in Pyongyang or something.

It's also worth noting that Kim Jong Un is not the insane person the media has been claiming. If he were really insane, he would have been deposed in a military coup some time ago. He's a much more rational actor than he's given credit for. The main reason North Korea has pushed ahead with their nuclear and ballistic missile programs is for self-preservation. If the United States hadn't been invading countries around the world for the benefit of Jews, North Korea probably wouldn't have felt the need to pour all their resources into these programs.

Hopefully a solution can be brokered. With Trump in office, there is a real chance for a diplomatic reset with North Korea. I say give Rodman a chance and let's see what comes of it.

Cuckold Ginger Knob Prince Harry Quits Smoking for Monkey GF

What British Royalty used to do with regards to niggers and smoking

The Daily Stormer encourages people to quit smoking so that they can start vaping and keep all of the benefits of smoking with new healthful side-effects.

We do not encourage you to do it to please random old nigger-bitches.

Business Insider:

Prince Harry has been known to enjoy a few cigarettes after a drink or two.

The prince made multiple headlines for his partying ways during his twenties, including "strip billiards" with a group of strangers in Las Vegas back in 2012.

During his wild years, the Daily Mail claims that the prince could "easily" get through a packet of Marlborough Lights in just one day.

But those days are reportedly over, according to the Mail on Sunday. The prince has apparently given up smoking for his fiancée Meghan Markle.

The American actress, entrepreneur, and activist leads a health-conscious and active lifestyle, so it's no surprise that she doesn't smoke herself.

The fact that this is a nigger is the biggest and most radically shocking aspect of the situation.

But it is also very strange that the Prince is marrying someone who is old and divorced and otherwise ugly.

As I have said, this is the ultimate betrayal of the British people on the part of the monarchy. Not that they hadn't betrayed their nation already, with refusing to stand up and take a stand against the invasion (even though we know they are all against it). But this is a deeply symbolic spitting in the face of everything Britain is on the part of Royalty, and it is the last straw.

The Crown is now illegitimate and must be replaced with Tyson Fury as kike-smashing warrior king.

Putin on Monday ordered "a significant part" of Moscow's military contingent to start pulling out of Syria, declaring their work largely done.

Putin, who polls show will be re-elected comfortably in March, made the announcement during a surprise visit to the Russian

"Thanks to the fact that the operation to save Syria and the liberation of Syrian land from terrorists have been completed, there is no longer a need for broad-scale combat strength," Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov said.

BASED: American Busts Out of Indonesian Jail by Sawing Through Ceiling!

Everyone loves a good heist.

Life used to be about destroying your enemies, stealing their wealth, kidnapping other tribe's women on horseback and generally being a badass. Now it's all about filling forms and feeling guilty that your ancestors killed beaners and enslaved Blacks or whatever.

Pretty gay.

At least some people are still having a good time though.

Good for them.

Reuters:

Indonesian police are hunting for a U.S. citizen who escaped on Monday from an overcrowded prison on the holiday island of Bali by cutting through steel bars in a ceiling, the jail's second breakout of foreign inmates this year.

Hahaha, they can't keep the White people in!

Meanwhile, their own brown losers just stay locked up like sheep.

Sad!

You're gonna need more than bars to keep a White man prisoner.

The Kerobokan prison, about 10 km (six miles) from the main tourist beaches in the Kuta area, often holds foreigners facing drug-related charges.

Cristian Beasley, who was a suspect in crimes related to narcotics but had not been sentenced, escaped at 4.10 a.m. (2010 GMT Sunday), said Badung Police chief Yudith Satria Hananta.

"It is thought that the prisoner escaped...by cutting through the steel bars above the ceiling," he said in a statement, without giving details of how Beasley escaped without being detected.

Beasley, 32, from California, is believed to have then used a rope to climb down a wall before getting over a perimeter wall in an area being refurbished.

CLASSIC.

That's old-school prison-break technology right there.

Police had questioned witnesses and guards and were hunting for Beasley, Hananta said.

Yeah, good luck with that. If you couldn't even hold him while he was under custody, what chance do your incompetent brown guards have at actually tracking him down again?

This goes to show that Whites really are better at everything—even being criminals.

If we weren't bogged down with all this kikery, we'd be applying the same kind of ingenuity and daring to everything else, including conquering outer space and adapting our society to all these new technologies, instead of having generations of people addicted to signaling on social media with their smart-phones.

It's time to take the prison-break approach to taking back our civilization.

Adventures in India: Cancer Stricken Jailbait Adventure (Triple Threat)

Andrew Anglin

Wow three rapes on one trip to the market for a 14-year-old cancer patient.

This road-rapism is being called a “crisis” on the roads of India, and the opposition is calling for men who engage in it to be castrated.

RT:

A 14-year-old cancer patient was raped twice within a period of just a few hours on Saturday night in Lucknow, northern India. The girl was assaulted by two youths, and then later by a passerby to whom she had turned for help.

The teen left home to buy groceries from a nearby market at around 4.30pm on Saturday. While the girl, who has early-stage blood cancer, was on her way, an acquaintance told her that he would drop her to the market on his bike, police said. But he instead took her to an abandoned bridge, where he and one of his friends raped her and left her on the roadside, a local law enforcement officer said, as cited by the Indian Express.

This was not the end of her ordeal. As she was trying to get home following the first incident, a 38-year-old man identified as Virendra Yada happened to be passing by on a bike. He volunteered to help her and give her a lift home. The girl agreed, but the suspect “took the minor to the roadside, raped her and left her there” —again.

The victim only managed to reach her home at around 3am on Sunday, after which her father, who had been desperately looking for his daughter, filed a police complaint. Police have arrested the passerby, and are hunting the other two suspects.

Police told The Times of India that the two accused named by the girl have been identified, and live in the same locality as her.

We just cannot continue to tolerate things like this happening in the third world.

It is our fault that it happens, because of colonial times.

And the only solution is clear: they all have to go live in London.

The Israeli Air Force, as well as tanks have been deployed to respond to the attack. Hamas positions were targeted in southern Gaza.

Last week, the Israeli military and Hamas operatives exchanged fire which resulted in casualties. At least 25 people, including six children, were injured and two Hamas fighters killed in IDF strikes on alleged Hamas positions inside Gaza. Israel said it bombed the targets in response for rocket attacks launched at its territory.

Vladimir Putin Celebrates Military Victory With Visit to Syria

The Jewish plan to overthrow Bashar Al-Assad and destroy Syria has ended in failure. Vladimir Putin's visit to Syria today is proof of that.

Putin has ordered the withdrawal of Russian military forces and congratulated them on the victory that they helped secure.

TASS:

Russian President Vladimir Putin has asked the Defense Ministry to start the pullout of the Russian military group from Syria.

"I order the Defense Ministry and the chief of the General Staff to begin the pullout of the Russian military group to permanent locations," Putin told an audience of military personnel.

Russia's task force and the Syrian government troops have routed the grouping of international terrorists in Syria, according to Putin.

Putin made this statement while speaking before Russian servicemen at the Hmeymim airbase in Syria.

"Over slightly more than two years, the Russian Armed Forces have routed together with the Syrian army the most combat-capable grouping of international terrorists," Putin said.

"In view of this, I have made a decision: most of the Russian military contingent staying in the Syrian Arab Republic is returning home, to Russia," he said.

"You are coming home with a victory, to your relatives, parents, wives, children and friends. Your Motherland is waiting for you, my friends. Have a safe trip home and thank you for your service," Putin said.

ZOG thought that they could destroy Syria like they destroyed Libya. They were wrong.

Assad is a popular leader opposed to Israel. With his position reinforced, Israel is in a tough spot. Not only are they forced to deal with Assad next door, but Donald Trump's Jerusalem declaration has them dealing with a Palestinian uprising.

This entire ZOG project to destroy Syria is over. What happens next is anyone's best guess but we can probably expect Israel to behave more erratically. They might even attack Lebanon or try to get the Saudis to wage war against Iran. Israel can only exist so long as there is chaos in the region and this defeat might prompt them to take bolder actions.

Shocking: 94% of UK Grooming Gang Members are Non-White

Adrian Sol
Daily Stormer

So diversity. Such vibrant. Wow.

Yes, all the women getting raped in the West are victimized by brown people. But that doesn't mean we should deport them all immediately. Because, you see, if we did, then the same girls would just be raped by White men instead. To think otherwise would be an example of the nirvana fallacy.

So we just have to learn to live with all these rape gangs—because there's no obvious, workable solution that would stop all this raping.

Breitbart:

A report by counter-extremism think tank Quilliam has found that more than eight out of ten men convicted of grooming gang offences have an "Asian" background.

"Asian."

tfw you be all up in these rape gangs, but u ain't even no.

Of course, by "Asian," they actually mean Pakis.

When the study's authors—both of whom are of Pakistani heritage—set out on their research into grooming gangs, they expected to "debunk" the perception that Muslims of Asian heritage are overrepresented.

Lol!

But instead their analysis revealed that 222 of 264 convictions related to 58 cases of grooming gangs identified in Britain between 2005 and 2017—or 84 per cent—involved perpetrators of Asian origin, despite Asians making up just 7 per cent of the population.

IMAGINE MY SHOCK!

The report found just 18 of the 264 offenders (7 per cent) were white, while 22 were black (8 per cent), and the ethnicities of a further two men were unknown.

The whites are the older women they get to help them lure the little girls.

How many of these mugshot collages have we seen and never seen a single white male?

So basically: "it doesn't count."

No native British males are out groom-ganging their own girls.

Unquestionably, Russia played a major role in thwarting the army of ZOG backed Islamic terrorists. They were propped up by various Sunni Arab states like Saudi Arabia, American intelligence services and the entire ZOG apparatus as a whole. The Jews can't be happy that they failed to destroy Assad. This was a definite miscalculation on their part.

What the report means by “Asian” will not be clear until the report is officially published over the coming days, but Quilliam founder, LBC presenter and former Islamic extremist Maajid Nawaz gave some indication when he tweeted that “84% of collective child-grooming and rape cases in the UK involve gangs of British South-Asian Muslim men” in connection with it.

Author Muna Adil said: “We began thinking we would debunk the media narrative that Asians are over-represented in this specific crime.

“But, when the final numbers came in we were alarmed and dismayed. For both of us being of Pakistani heritage, this issue is deeply personal and deeply disturbing.”

The Paki complains about being disturbed as he rapes you daughter.

How is it possible that they thought that rape gangs would have proportional representation of native British?

Sick.

“In attempts to protect the “sentiments” of the British Pakistani community, we have failed vulnerable young girls who have suffered years of irreversible damage,” Adil and co-author of the report Haras Rafiq said in a statement, noting that “the victims that have come forward so far are almost exclusively white girls”.

Obviously. These rape gangs are an organized form of tribal warfare against the native White population. These invading populations are colluding with each other to cover up this activity, as has been shown by the Rotherham scandal. The families of the rapists obviously knew what was going on—their entire community knew—yet never reported anything to the authorities.

The reality is that there’s a very simple and obvious way to stop all this, and it involves sending all these people back to wherever they come from. This isn’t rocket science. It could be done tomorrow, if the will was there.

But that would require a significant change in leadership, of course...

Germany: Moslem Child Who Raped and Murdered Daughter of Politician Proven to be 33

Daily Stormer
December 10, 2017

Hussein Khavari, Maria Ladenburger.

In shocking news that nobody could expect, a Moslem savage who raped and murdered a 19-year-old White daughter of a EU lawyer is not actually a minor.

Even the head of the German police union is claiming that this is the fault of Mama Merkel.

Voice of Europe:

The Afghan refugee, who is now on trial for the rape and murder of the medical student Maria Ladenburger in October 2016, is older than previously thought.

Hussein Khavari entered Germany in November 2015 without identity papers. He told authorities that he was born in 1999 in Afghanistan and that his father was killed during the war.

But it now appears that his father is still alive. According to German media his father said his son was born in 1984 and that he is 33-years-old.

The Local Germany says about it: “Prosecutors were able to track down Hussein K.’s father when they came across a contact on his mobile phone. The defendant told them that they could contact his mother on the number. But when an interpreter called the number in the presence of two judges, the person who picked up was his father”.

The murder of the 19-year-old Maria Ladenburger shocked the country. Even the leader of the German Police Union blamed Angela Merkel as he said that Ladenburger’s death would have been prevented without her open door policy.

That’s a helluva statement.

In fact, I would imagine it is illegal under Germany’s hatespeech laws. That isn’t sarcasm—though these laws are always purposefully confusing and open-ended, from what I understand, a German citizen posting something like that on Facebook could very easily get a police visit or at least a call and told to simmer down.

Germany has the most extreme speech laws in the world. Germany’s are much more extreme than the example of China that everyone always thinks of when they think of modern authoritarian governments. This is perhaps because China’s speech laws are designed to protect the nation, while Germany’s are designed to destroy it.

Obviously, I don’t agree with any form of speech laws, or believe that they are good for any nation, but there is something very unique that is going on in the West right now: governments exist to destroy the populations they rule over. That’s something that requires a lot more covering-up than say, “human rights” abuses and refusing to hold elections.

In fact, at this point, China could easily eliminate the speech laws and nothing too much would happen, other than a lot of people with no religion (weird situation) would convert to Christianity. People could ask for elections, but they could easily make an argument against them and give some other form of concession. The main reason they keep these laws, which were put in place under a much more corrupt system, is I would assume to prevent American Jews from doing a color revolution on them.

If Germany allowed free speech on the other hand...

Democratic Spic Won't Seek Reelection After Getting Metooed

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 17, 2017

lol is that another Mexi-Jew??? Sure looks like one.

It's hard out there for a groper. Especially a democratic groper—they can't claim it's a right-wing conspiracy in the way rightists can claim left-wing conspiracy, because they follow a doctrine wherein it is evil to question the claims of a lying slut.

But I guess if you can just not run again, instead of resigning, you're doing pretty good.

Fox News:

Rep. Ruben Kihuen, D-Nev., announced Saturday that he would not seek re-election in the wake of multiple sexual harassment allegations against him.

"I want to state clearly again that I deny the allegations in question," Kihuen said in a statement. "However," the freshman congressman added, "the allegations that have surfaced would be a distraction from a fair and thorough discussion of the issues in a reelection campaign."

"Therefore," Kihuen went on, "it is in the best interests of my family and my constituents to complete my term in Congress and not seek re-election."

The announcement by Kihuen, 37, came one day after the House Ethics Committee announced it had opened an investigation into the harassment claims against him.

Earlier this month, a former campaign aide accused Kihuen of propositioning her for dates and sex despite her repeated rejections during his 2016 campaign. This week, a lobbyist told the Nevada Independent that he touched her thighs and buttocks and made unwanted sexual advances while he was a state senator.

That is generally called "flirting."

And yes, he's married, but he's a spic. They don't really do the "honor thy vows" thing. Greasy wetbacks can't even honor consonants, let alone vows.

Shortly after Kihuen announced his resignation Saturday, the Nevada Independent published accusations from another woman who claimed that he made "unwanted overtures and asked overly personal questions of her" while serving in Congress.

He didn't announce resignation, Fox. He announced he wouldn't seek reelection.

He's finishing the 2 year term.

The woman's claims against Kihuen included allegations that he rubbed her back and repeatedly kissed her at a fundraising event this past October. She said Kihuen asked her several times if she had a boyfriend and once called her "one of the most beautiful girls he's ever seen in D.C."

"It's just so off-putting," the woman told the website. "... [Y]ou hold them to a higher standard and I think for good reason and then—it's just disappointing when they don't live up to it."

House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., has called on Kihuen to resign, a request he has resisted. On Saturday, Kihuen said that he is "committed to fully cooperating with the House Ethics Committee and look forward to clearing my name."

A native of Mexico and the first Latino to represent Nevada in Congress, Kihuen represents the state's 4th Congressional District, which stretches north from the Las Vegas metro area into sparsely populated central Nevada.

So far, the government has reflected the private sector in terms of metoo: it's all Jews and non-whites.

Eventually, the Jews are going to have to implement some kind of "sexual harassment affirmative action" where you can only be punished for doing this if you're white.

Trump Lawyer Says Mueller Illegally Seized 10,000 Emails!

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 17, 2017

With rumors swirling that President Trump is preparing to fire the conspiracy theorist/conspirator Robert Mueller, it's looking as though he's got a pretty good reason to.

RT:

FBI Special Counsel Robert Mueller, looking for collusion between US President Donald Trump and Russia, has breached the law by requesting a government agency to hand over confidential emails, Trump's counsel told Congress.

In a letter sent to the House and the Senate and seen by Fox News, Kory Langhofer, lawyer for Trump's transition team, claimed that Mueller obtained "tens of thousands of emails," including confidential communications between a client and a lawyer, due to "unlawful conduct" by the staffers at the General Services Administration (GSA), which hosted the Trump team's email servers during the transition.

Accusing the GSA of "unauthorized disclosures" for giving Mueller access to private information it "did not own or control," Langhofer went to blame the agency for infringing on the right of the US citizens to be secure against unreasonable searches and seizures, as guaranteed by the 4th Amendment.

The special counsel's office has reportedly made "extensive use" of the texts seized from Trump's transition team that include "materials that are susceptible to privilege claims," Langhofer wrote, adding that apart from internal emails, the GSA also handed over laptops, cell phones and an iPad at its own liberty.

Trump's team discovered what it believes a breach of privacy on December 12 and December 13, the lawyer said, noting that some of the compromised materials were leaked to the media by "unknown persons."

Appealing to the Senate Homeland Security and House Oversight Committee, Langhofer called on them to ensure future transitions are secured from being mishandled by government bodies, in particular when it is under an investigation driven by political motives.

With the lingering probe into Trump's alleged ties to Russia having failed so far to produce any proof to support the allegations, it itself has been hit with claims of potential conflict of interest. Last week, it was revealed that one of Mueller's investigative team members, prosecutor Andrew Weissmann, publicly expressed his admiration to former US Attorney General Sally Yates, fired by Trump after defying a travel ban on seven Muslim-majority countries. It was also reported that Weissmann attended former Democratic Presidential candidate Hillary Clinton's election party in November 2016.

Clearly, the entire Russian kook-spiracy fishing expedition was driven by powermad extremists on the warpath after being driven into a frenzy by their Jewish masters.

If those involved with the probe weren't totally corrupt and willing to abuse power, then they wouldn't be involved with the probe.

So it isn't shocking that they would be engaged in illegal forms of espionage against the President and his people—especially after going fishing for the better part of a year and not catching a damned thing.

I would also be extremely shocked if Trump had a lawyer out there making this up.

So this could be the straw that breaks the camel's back.

If Mueller is to be fired, it is highly preferable that he be fired in disgrace.

DEATHWATCH: John McCain Checks into the Hospital - Let's Hope He Doesn't Check Out!

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer

December 16, 2017

At last, the moment we've all been waiting for is quickly approaching: the death of John McCain.

We celebrated when he was diagnosed with the inoperable tumor, but we had hoped he would die quickly. Instead, he has lived on to harm America further.

Fox News:

President Trump on Friday called the wife of Sen. John McCain, the Arizona Republican who was hospitalized this week as he battles brain cancer, the White House said.

An official said Trump spoke by phone with Cindy McCain on Friday afternoon to "check in on Sen. McCain's condition."

"Is the evil America-hating sonovabitch dead yet?"

McCain, 81, was diagnosed with brain cancer in July. On Wednesday, his office said he had been admitted to the hospital.

"Senator McCain is currently receiving treatment at Walter Reed Medical Center for normal side effects of his ongoing cancer therapy," his office said. "As ever, he remains grateful to his physicians for their excellent care, and his friends and supporters for their encouragement and good wishes. Senator McCain looks forward to returning to work as soon as possible."

Despite his hospitalization, McCain's Republican colleagues expressed optimism he will be able to make the expected votes on the tax overhaul next week. Senators must be physically present on the Senate floor to cast votes.

"Of course we all wish for Sen. McCain to have a great health for as long as possible,” Sen. Rob Portman, R-Ohio, said Friday on Fox News. “My sense is that everybody’s made a commitment to be there next week. And we will certainly be able to have the vote. Our prayers go to him and his family.”

John McCain is an inoperable tumor on this country.

We’ll be having a celebratory podcast marathon when he finally dies once and for all.

Cops Called After Generic “Star Wars Fans” Storm the Lobby of Theater Due to Technical Glitch at Premiere

You see a headline like this:

“Star Wars” Fans Storm Theater Lobby Over Lack Of Sound During “Last Jedi”
December 15, 2017 at 11:00 am
#StarWars #Theater #LosAngeles #California

And you’re like “lol black people.”

And then you watch the video
And see a bunch of black people.
Yeah, there are a few whites in the crowd, but you know who they had to call the cops on.

CBSLA:

“Star Wars” fans at a Burbank theater went to the Dark Side when a screening of “The Last Jedi” played without sound for 20 minutes.

Moviegoers were ready to stage a new rebellion when an AMC Theater in Burbank either could not or would not restart the 10 p.m. showing of the film.

An angry stream of fans, some in Jedi costume, stormed the lobby, screaming and yelling, over the lack of sound.

Burbank police were called to the theater at about 10:21 p.m. to disperse “an unruly crowd.”

Now, let’s think for a second here.

Imagine you believe the “all races are the same” gibberish. Your interpretation of this event goes in the complete wrong direction. Into an insane direction, where you start thinking “wow, these Star Wars fans are out of control.”

“Rising domestic threat.”

This is to say, if you do not consider race, you lack any ability to interpret world events. This leads to an inability to form a cohesive worldview.

This is what is going on with the baby boomers. They are married to the idea that “all races are the same,” and so they become fixated on supposed “principles” to the point of absolute absurdity. This is why you see them rambling on about “Islam” and talking about “I just want immigrants to come here legally.”

When you start with wrong premises, your conclusions are going to be wrong—no matter how flawless your logic from that initial point.

Dem Female Congressional Candidate Drops Out After Going Over a Bridge Too Far on Sexual Harassment Road

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 15, 2017

“When you’re the vice president of human resources, they let you do anything. Grab em by the dick.”

Woe unto ye, o Babylon.
Kansas City Star:

Andrea Ramsey, a Democratic candidate for Congress, will drop out of the race after the Kansas City Star asked her about accusations in a 2005 lawsuit that she sexually harassed and retaliated against a male subordinate who said he had rejected her advances.

Multiple sources with knowledge of the case told The Star that the man reached a settlement with LabOne, the company where Ramsey was executive vice president of human resources. Court documents show that the man, Gary Funkhouser, and LabOne agreed to dismiss the case permanently after mediation in 2006.

Ramsey, a 56-year-old retired business executive from Leawood, was one of the Democratic candidates vying to challenge Republican Rep. Kevin Yoder in 2018 in Kansas’ 3rd District.

She was running with the endorsement of Emily’s List, a liberal women’s group that has raised more than a half-million dollars to help female candidates who support abortion rights.

Yeah.

If you’re grabbing em by the dick, you need those abortions.

Ramsey will drop out on Friday, her campaign said.

"In its rush to claim the high ground in our roiling national conversation about harassment, the Democratic Party has implemented a zero tolerance standard," Ramsey said in a statement Friday. "For me, that means a vindictive, terminated employee's false allegations are enough for the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee (DCCC) to decide not to support our promising campaign. We are in a national moment where rough justice stands in place of careful analysis, nuance and due process."

Sounds bitter.

Maybe you should keep your hands off of men's johnsons, lady.

Seriously, the idea of a false sexual allegation against a woman is insane. These women are allowed to grab all the dicks they want, and punish men who protest. They are universally above reproach.

She must have done something low down and dirty.

The Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, which has not endorsed anyone in the race, said in a statement that members and candidates must all be held to the highest standard.

"If anyone is guilty of sexual harassment or sexual assault, that person should not hold public office," said committee spokeswoman Meredith Kelly.

Emily's List said in a statement on Friday that the group supported Ramsey's decision to drop out of the race and wished her well.

Ramsey was not a party to the lawsuit or the settlement, although she's referred to throughout the complaint as Andrea Thomas, her name before she married her husband in late 2006. She denied the allegations to the Star in two interviews over the last two weeks and said the lawsuit is surfacing now for political purposes.

Ramsey repeatedly said that she was not aware of any settlement in the case, but said that if she had been a party to the case she would have opposed settling.

"Had those allegations, those false allegations, been brought against me directly instead of the company I would have fought to exonerate my name. I never would've settled," Ramsey said in an interview on Thursday. "And I would have sued the disgruntled, vindictive employee for defamation."

That's the spirit.
Grab em by the WALLET.

Reached by phone, Funkhouser would not discuss the case.

"All I can say is the matter has been resolved," he said.

In the EEOC complaint, which alleged sex discrimination and retaliation by LabOne, Funkhouser accused Ramsey of subjecting him to "unwelcoming and inappropriate sexual comments and innuendos" beginning in September 2004, when he was a LabOne human resources manager.

She would have been 43, which is peak dick-grabbing or what is called "the cock zone."

When they've finally gotten over the fact that men are not attracted to them anymore because of their shriveled, wasted form, and so instead are simply on the prowl in a predatory fashion to grab whatever they can squeeze.

In late March 2005, Ramsey made sexual advances toward him on a business trip, Funkhouser alleged in the complaint.

"After I told her I was not interested in having a sexual relationship with her, she stopped talking to me," he wrote. "In the office she completely ignored me and avoided having any contact with me."

Ramsey even moved him out of his office into a cubicle far from her office, Funkhouser wrote.

Before he rejected her advances, Ramsey "repeatedly told me she heard great things from others about my performance," Funkhouser wrote. "After I rejected her, she told me she now was hearing bad things about my performance and on June 13, 2005, terminated my employment."

Yeah.

You'll have that.

I guess it is just another nail in the coffin of the concept of interpersonal workplaces.

There are now a whole lot of nails in this coffin.

If You Can't Legally Have Sex with Hookers, Why be a Cop in Michigan?

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 15, 2017

Oh yeah right, that's a good plan: take away the perks of the cops.
RT:

Sex with prostitutes in Michigan isn't legal, but until Wednesday, undercover police in the state couldn't be prosecuted for sleeping with streetwalkers. Police agencies deny ever using the law or training officers to do the horizontal hula with hookers.

Michigan Governor Rick Snyder (R) signed into law on Wednesday two pieces of legislation repealing an exemption that protected on-duty undercover law enforcement from prosecution for having "penetration" sex with prostitutes.

“Every day the brave men and women in Michigan’s law enforcement community work tirelessly to help ensure the safety and well-being of all Michiganders,” Snyder said, according to MLive Media Group. “These bills help ensure the ongoing integrity and accountability of our law enforcement system by clarifying what actions officers are exempt from while performing their official duties.”

The bills, House Bill 4355 and Senate Bill 275, were sponsored by State Representative Gary Glenn (R-Midland) and State Senator Judy Emmons (R-Sheridan). The State Senate approved its bill unanimously, but some House Democrats voted against HB4355 because an amendment that would have included other sexual acts besides penetration failed, according to the Detroit Metro Times.

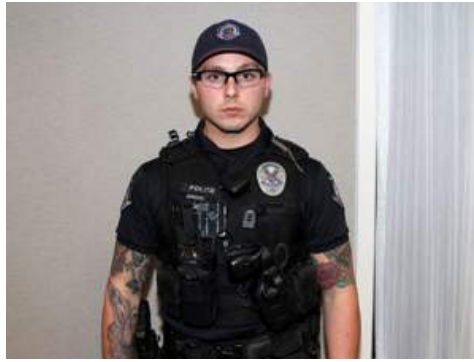

No police agency opposed or supported the legislative effort, claiming no officer ever used the immunity or was instructed to have sex to further an investigation.

Right now, there is virtually no reason whatsoever to be a cop in America. It is glorified animal control, it does not pay well and at any time you could be put on trial for doing your job and at least have your entire life destroyed—possibly get thrown in prison.

So instead of guys like this joining the force:

You’re getting guys like this:

I’m not going to go full white communist and argue that cops are fundamentally evil in some way, but here’s the deal: in a white country, it is a respected profession where you are actually helping people.

The Norman Rockwell/Andy Griffith version is idealized, but it is idealizing something that did exist. Cops did used to be paragons of the community, they used to be taking care of school children and helping old ladies get cats out of trees. The worst they dealt with was standard drunken violence.

All the way up through the “civil rights” era, most officers would never see a shooting or a murder, and if they did, it would be something you can easily understand and process because it’s happened since the beginning of time: a family member killing another family member over something complex related to long-running family issues, or men killing each other over women.

This meme is accurate:

Note that the kid in the original is white.

Being a cop in the modern crack cocaine nigger rampage era is a dirty and largely thankless job, and that has led to the ranks of police departments being filled with the lowest sort of people.

You cannot turn people away, so you get try-hardy sleeve-tattoo dickheads who just want to abuse power and that further causes the situation to spiral downward. You are hiring ruthless mercenaries to risk their lives for what amounts to a very basic wage.

Now you’re taking away their right to have sex with prostitutes—I don’t think it is going to increase the quality of the applicants.

He gave a statement saying that the ballots hadn't come in from the military yet, and it's not over—then went on to talk about the immorality of our country.

I don't know where exactly he's going with this, but I know where it needs to go: he needs to undermine the validity of democracy. That is the solution to everything. The entire idea that we are living in a country where we choose our leaders must be crushed.

He could also call out the Jews. That would be nice. Though I'm not waiting for that, he doesn't have anything else to lose, so he might as well.

Racist Niggerbitch Pitches Giant Chimpout at The White House

Actual footage of Omarosa being ejected from the White House grounds.

Reality show primate and former Director of Communications for the Office of Public Liaison for the Trump administration, Omarosa Manigault-Newman has reportedly chimped out. An unnamed source in Trump's inner circle told me off the record that White House security officially said "she pitched a giant nigger bitch" and had to be removed.

The source also tells us that the gorillless in question began her tirade when told she should not have brought an entourage of her bridesmaid buffarillas into the White House to take wedding pics in the Rose Garden. She was further incensed when she was informed that Glorious Leader had signed an executive order designating the Rose Garden a "Whites

According to the official report, the real trouble began when Chief of Staff Gen. John Kelly informed her that she would not be allowed to post any of the Rose Garden pics on social media, and that if she did she would be thrown from the Marine 1 chopper into icy Chesapeake Bay, and that in addition to that, she was fired.

The report states, "at that moment, Ms. Mainigault-Newman began ooking and eeking at a very high volume, screeching something about 'got dam rayciss nazi loving Trump ass crackah muhfuggas' and proceeded to tip over a coffee service table before swinging from a chandelier and flinging poop at staff."

The sanitized mainstream media version goes something like this:

Fox News:

There might be more to Omarosa's "resignation" than meets the eye.

After the White House announced Wednesday that "Apprentice" star turned White House aide Omarosa Manigault Newman will leave the Trump administration, The Wall Street Journal reported that her departure was abrupt—describing her exit as confrontational—but the Secret Service pushed back on the report.

An unnamed White House official told the Journal that Manigault Newman was "physically dragged and escorted off the campus" late Tuesday.

TMZ:

Sources close to Omarosa tell us she started thinking about resigning back in August after the Charlottesville riots, because she disagreed with Trump's handling of the crisis. We're told she took issue with Trump saying there were good people on both sides...which, of course, included the neo-Nazis.

Our sources in Omarosa's camp say she also didn't appreciate Trump beefing with Rep. Frederica Wilson, or bungling a call with an African-American Gold Star widow. We're told Trump's endorsement of Roy Moore was the last straw.

Now, people in Omarosa's camp say she pulled the trigger on resigning Tuesday night. However, other White House sources tell us she was "fired" by Gen. John Kelly after she tried to get an audience with the Prez following Moore's loss.

So basically, she was just going around pestering everyone with nigger problems all the time, and Glorious Leader, ever a patient man, had finally had enough, and told Gen. Kelly to fire her.

The Secret Service was not involved in expelling her from the premises.

The Secret Service was not involved in the termination process of Ms Manigault Newman or the escort off of the complex. Our only involvement in this matter was to deactivate the individual's pass which grants access to the complex.

— U.S. Secret Service (@SecretService) December 13, 2017

My source tells me that President Trump has a special crew of Japanese electrical engineers who chase niggers in a big truck with a cherry-picker, for when they climb trees and power lines and such. I had no idea that Jap electricians were the world's foremost experts in nigger removal, but that's why I voted for Donald Trump, because he's been around and understands these things.

After a short chase and a few minutes of exhortations for her to listen to reason and come down from the power lines, Omarosa stepped on the wrong one and interrupted the White House's cable. POTUS gave the order, and a tranquilizer dart was deployed.

Omarosa fell over 50 feet onto the asphalt below. Fortunately, she broke the fall with her head, so emergency services were not required.

There is no laughter in Coontown tonight.

Net Neutrality Supporters are Racist Against American Indians

FCC Chairman Ajit Pai a proud individual of American Indian heritage has been the target of racist abuse stemming from his decision to repeal net neutrality. We must not let this hate go on.

As a result of the Federal Communications Commission deciding to end net neutrality regulations, a disturbing trend has emerged. Numerous hate filled individuals supporting net neutrality have made some very hateful and bigoted remarks towards FCC Chairman Ajit Pai. I will personally not stand for this type of vile racism against individuals of American Indian descent. It does not represent who we are as Americans.

The hate went into maximum overdrive following what I found to be a very cool and hip public service announcement by Pai.

Video Link

The hate directed towards Pai in the comment section of this video is truly shocking.

Below is just a small sampling of the bigotry and hate expressed towards Pai. I have no doubt that this hate largely stems from his American Indian heritage. The debate over net neutrality is just an excuse for them to express their shocking hatred of American Indians. They're obviously angry that a strong and empowered American Indian man like Pai has achieved such success in his amazing career.

Pretty shocking racism, is it not? How is it possible that we live in a society where people feel that they can express such open hostility and hate towards individuals of American Indian descent?

The fact that the entire comment section is filled with people posting racial slurs and profanity is proof of their racism. If they were really angry at Pai over his stance on net neutrality, they would have offered a logical argument as to why they support net neutrality. Since they did not do this, we now know conclusively that net neutrality supporters are racist against American Indians.

I call on all Americans to stand up against this vile and despicable hate. The best way to do that is to support Pai's repeal of net neutrality. Repealing net neutrality will teach these horrible racists that bigotry and hate never wins.

Hobos Sparked Fire That Burned Down Malibu

Update: investigators say a wildfire that broke out in the Bel Air area of Los Angeles last week is believed to have been started at an illegal cooking fire in a homeless encampment in the area, no arrests have been made say @LAFD officials

— Kirk Siegler (@KirkSiegler) December 12, 2017

When I saw footage of one of America's gayest, most Jewy and wealthiest celebrity zip codes going up in flames, I put a slash in God's column on my agnosticism chart.

As we know, California is a pioneer in the New World Order: crumbling infrastructure, unsustainable levels of multiculturalism, unchecked sexual depravity, and a Mexico-style wealth gap between the rich and poor.

The rapidly growing homeless camps in California's major cities have more or less replaced the (((Hollywood))) sign as defining state icons. This is apparently where the ravaging wild fires started.

Daily Caller:

An illegal cooking fire at a homeless camp started the blaze that engulfed more than 400 acres in Bel Air and the surrounding area, according to the Los Angeles Fire Department.

LAFD investigators said the Skirball Fire started at a homeless camp just north of Bel Air, which is ranked as Los Angeles' wealthiest zip code. The blaze engulfed 422 acres and destroyed six structures, damaging 12 more since it began about six days ago.

The Skirball fire sparked evacuations last week, but firefighters were able to keep the blaze on the east side of the 405 Freeway, NBC Los Angeles reported. Evacuation orders were lifted on Sunday. Officials said the fire was 85 percent contained, and firefighters were still on the scene to completely stamp out the blaze.

Illegal immigration and Jewish real estate speculation have made it impossible to afford any kind of housing in California.

The bribed Mexican, Asian and Jewish politicians who run LA, San Diego, San Francisco, Oakland, etc. are never going to alleviate this problem. My guess is they will try and ship homeless people to other parts of the country so that white people take care of them.

The West Coast is a horrible and soulless place. The fires have only made it less hellish.

Here's What's Next: Jew Chuck Schumer Calls Cops Over Sexual Harassment Allegation!

Lee Rogers
Daily Stormer
December 14, 2017

Why the grumpy face Chuck? Don't you support #MeToo and the rights of women?

The Jew Chuck Schumer is hopping mad over a sexual harassment allegation made against him. He is claiming that the allegation is fake. This is a position that I personally find to be reprehensible.

This just proves that Schumer is a very sexist person who promotes woman hate.

The Hill:

Senate Minority Leader Charles Schumer (D-N.Y.) said Wednesday that he is "pursuing every legal path" against whoever was behind the fake sexual harassment allegations made against him.

"We are pursuing every legal path... [so] those who might have broken the law [can] be prosecuted for it," he told reporters during a press conference.

Axios reported Tuesday that it had obtained a document that included alleged sexual harassment accusations against Schumer by a former female staffer.

The 13-page document appeared to look like a lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court, but lacked information that would have normally been included in the document, such as a lawyer for the former staffer.

Schumer dismissed the allegations on Wednesday as baseless.

"It was a phony allegation, forged, false from start to finish," he told reporters.

Schumer must be living on a different planet than most of us. Since when have we cared if a sexual harassment allegation by a woman is fake or not? Any such allegation by a woman must be believed no matter what. It doesn't matter if the document containing the allegation was forged. The allegation must be believed.

It doesn't even matter if he's innocent. He still deserves to suffer. Due process doesn't apply to men accused of sexual harassment.

You see, we live in the #MeToo era. Schumer is applying the world of 2016 to the world of 2017. Any and all sex abuse allegations by a woman either directly or indirectly must be automatically believed. To say otherwise is sexist. Especially coming from someone who has promoted feminism to the extent that he has.

I find it hypocritical that Schumer is willing to believe all other sexual harassment allegations but when allegations are made against him he refuses to own up to his misdeeds. Instead, he whines to the police about baseless conspiracy theories.

Despite our differences with Mr. Cernovich, we applaud his efforts in ensuring that Chuck Schumer's Senate office is free of sexual harassment and woman hate.

Disreputable news sources like The Daily Beast are theorizing that Mike Cernovich and Chuck Johnson engaged in a conspiracy to remove Schumer from office. I patently disagree with this assertion. They are only fighting for the rights of females not to be harassed in the workplace by Jew perverts like Schumer.

As a result of these accusations against Schumer, I am calling on him to resign from the Senate. #MeToo is the world that he fought for. He should embrace the world that he helped create!

Kentucky Rep Commits Suicide After Getting Metooed! First Confirmed Kill!

#Metoo has just claimed its first corpse.

Good job, gals.

As a leader in a political movement that gets blamed for people dying in various ways, I'd like to congratulate you on your first confirmed kill.

Fox News:

A state representative in Kentucky shot and killed himself Wednesday evening, officials said—just days after a report emerged in which a woman said he sexually assaulted her when she was 17.

Rep. Dan Johnson, a preacher and a Republican, shot himself on a bridge in Mt. Washington, south-east of Louisville, Bullitt County Sheriff Donnie Tinnell told WDRB. His body turned up on a riverbank near the bridge and the weapon reportedly was found at the scene. He was 57.

Earlier Wednesday evening, WDRB said Johnson took to Facebook to post about the accusations leveled against him, claiming they were “false” and “only GOD knows the truth.”

If I had to guess, I'd suppose the truth is “asking for it.” He probably wouldn't have offed himself if it was totally fabricated.

Men “harassing” women is basically a gigantic hoax. Women seducing men, however, is a female powerplay which happens all the time, everywhere.

It is for this reason that historically, women were socially—if not legally—obliged to not wear revealing clothing and to not be in private situations with men who were not their husbands or relatives.

On Monday, the Kentucky Center for Investigative Reporting published an account from a woman claiming that Johnson sexually assaulted her in the early morning hours of Jan. 1, 2013.

The woman said she attended a party at his home on the night of the incident. She reportedly fell asleep on a sofa and woke up to Johnson kneeling over her, before she claimed he assaulted her. The woman said she reported the incident but Louisville police closed the case without charges.

Johnson told reporters on Tuesday that the accusations were “totally false.” But leaders of the state Republican and Democratic parties had called for the representative to resign.

He added that PTSD “24/7 16 years is a sickness that will take my life, I cannot handle it any longer. IT Has Won This Life. BUT HEAVEN IS MY HOME.”

Eh, hate to break this to you too late, but suicide is a mortal sin, my dude.

So I hope you remembered to load up on mana potions before you ate that bullet, bro.

You're gonna need em.

There's no way around that.

What you should have done is gone and killed the lying slut, then got the death penalty. Not only would that have kept you out of Hell, but it would have been justice.

But whatever—I'm sure the slut will feel bad about you killing yourself after she hoaxed these allegations against you.

HAHAHAHAHAHA—if you think women ever feel bad for anything they do to men, then I feel bad for you.

Protip: their brains do not process guilt, only shame.

PS: Ideas for Cozy Christmas Gaming

Looking up that Diablo screenshot gave me really fond memories. That game came out in 1996, when I was 12. It came out at Christmas time and playing it at night in a dark room in a blanket, looking up tips on AOL, after coming in from a day playing in the snow with the neighborhood kids was ultra-memorable coziness of a sort I fear kids these days just aren't experiencing.

I played the second one but not the third.

I've been recently staying inside quite a bit because of the Christmas heat here in Nigeria, and looking for games to play. I'm thinking about retrying the original Diablo, but I never played the III.

Is it worth it?

Are there other games people would recommend for cozy Christmas gaming?

Ones that are not on Switch, which I have heard is the coziest gaming yet, because I'm not buying one of those?

Yes, that does indeed look cozy af, but tfw no $299.99 for dedicated gaming console.

Fraud in Alabama: Court Orders Voting Records Destroyed

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 13, 2017

Why would you destroy hard-drives?

How much does it cost to keep them around?

The only reason you would do this is if you were committing fraud. Period.

TechCrunch:

Following an eleventh-hour order instructing voting officials in Alabama to keep the digital ballots generated in Tuesday's controversial Senate election, the state's Supreme Court has issued a stay to block that decision.

The order to preserve the records was issued by the Montgomery County Circuit Court on Monday afternoon—less than 24 hours before voting was set to begin—and the stay that will effectively nullify that order was issued late Monday night.

"All counties employing digital ballot scanners in the Dec. 12, 2017 election are hereby ordered to set their voting machines to save all processed images in order to preserve all digital ballot images," the Montgomery County order stated.

Alabama Secretary of State John Merrill and Alabama state election administrator Ed Packard are named as defendants in the suit, which was brought before the Montgomery County court by four Alabama voters. Initially filed on Thursday of last week, it cited the state-level election system hacking that the Department of Homeland Security notified 21 states including Alabama of this September in arguing that the state should hold onto the digital record of votes for at least six months rather than destroy them.

As AL.com reports, the state is required to keep the paper ballots that are digitized to tabulate the vote. Priscilla Duncan, the attorney who represented the four Alabama voters named in the case, argued that while those paper ballots are kept for 22 months, "the paper ballots aren't really what's counted" and only an unlikely state-wide recount would consult the paper ballots.

...

A full hearing for the case is set for December 21, but the state has a green light to continue destroying its digital voting records until that time.

Yeah, and how long is it going to take to delete these files? Six minutes?

This is a hoax. The only way a court would order records destroyed is if there had been fraud.

We need a paper ballot recount.

Thankfully, Roy Moore is calling for one.

However, people are claiming he can't get one.

Roy Moore hinted at the possibility of a recount in Alabama's special election, held on Tuesday, just moments after the press called the race for Democratic opponent Doug Jones. Moore claimed that the close race could lead to a reconsideration of the result.

Inverse:

"Realize that when the vote is this close that it's not over," he said. "We also know that God is always in control."

At the stroke of midnight, Jones had 671,151 votes and a 49.9 percent share of the vote, while Moore had 650,436 votes and a 48.4 percent share. Moore's claim is based on the Alabama law that a result within 0.5 percent of the vote is enough to trigger an automatic recount. There are still military ballots that need to be counted.

There's a few reasons why a recount is almost certainly off the table. The first is that the final result probably won't meet the automatic threshold, as the Washington Post reports that as of May 2016 there is only around 8,700 Alabamans serving in the military. That's not enough to swing the election.

Another suggested tactic is Moore pays for the recount himself, a sum he would be refunded if he won. That's probably a bad idea. Alabama's secretary of state told CNN that a recent recount in a gubernatorial runoff won by just 160 votes "didn't change more than three or four votes" in the end.

It's not clear that Moore could even pay for his own recount, though. Legal scholar Rick Hasen, from the University of California, Irvine School of Law, said in a Tuesday blog post that Section 17-16-21, the law that governs how recounts are handled, only seems to cover state elections. Hasen speculates that this is because a recount would be handled Congress instead.

"He can ask for the U.S. Senate to conduct some kind of contest but good luck with that," Hasen said.

Yes, good luck indeed for Mr. Jailbait. Huh.

Roy Moore won't concede; says will wait on God to speak. God wasn't registered to vote in AL but the ppl who voted did speak and it wasn't close enough for recount. In elections everyone does NOT get a trophy. I know first hand but it's best to exit with class.

— Gov. Mike Huckabee (@GovMikeHuckabee) December 13, 2017

Actually, contrary to what the Alabama Secretary of State said last night on @CNN, it looks like ROY MOORE can not request & pay for a recount. That provision only applies to STATE OFFICES, per @rickhasen. <https://t.co/aGbtVmTZ8Y>

— Kenneth P. Vogel (@kenvogel) December 13, 2017

And the Alabama GOP itself is refusing to demand a recount.

Alabama GOP distances from Roy Moore's recount call: "This race has ended" <https://t.co/kkh6dwi7PZ> pic.twitter.com/aKNW0fgpVX

— The Hill (@thehill) December 13, 2017

So that is where we are—digital records being ordered by a court to be destroyed, no recount.

And blacks voting for Doug Jones at a rate higher than they voted for Obama in this weird off-year special election.

NY Daily News:

African-Americans made up nearly 30% of the electorate, surpassing the number from the presidential elections of Barack Obama in 2008 and 2012 in the state.

Exit polls also show that 96% of black voters in the state backed Jones over Moore—earning the Democrat the 21,000-vote victory.

Think about that one for a second. Think if that makes sense.

Bigger turnout than for Obama.

Because they were just so darned angry about that groping.

Well, I don't buy it.

I think it's clear that this entire thing was rigged from the start.

The jailbait hoaxing was just a smokescreen to explain away the voter fraud.

Roy Moore must continue to call this out, and point to the fact that democracy itself has been proven to be broken.

The destruction of records cannot be explained. All he has to do is point to that.

White Women Dropped the Ball in Alabama

White women were responsible for the Alabama election, voting for the Democrat at a rate of 9 points higher than men.

Roy Moore was right when he said “repeal every amendment past the 10th.”

Letting these stupid whores vote was an absolutely insane decision, and something that our society may only recover from when there is no option but for women to once again become what nature designed them to be: the property of men.

Trump Blasts Dem Whore Asking for His Resignation: “She’d do ANYTHING for a Contribution”

Adrian Sol
Daily Stormer
December 13, 2017

Gillibrand: Advocate of anti-grabbism.

So this Gillibrand broad, who’s apparently a US Senator, is out there making noise whining about Trump’s pussy grabbing, demanding he resign. Why the hell should someone resign over such nonsense? Should people also resign for grabbing things off shelves?

What’s with all the anti-grabbism going around?

Meanwhile, she’s hoping no one reminds the public of her far more devastating (and disqualifying) personal foible—being a woman.

Well, no dice, Kirsten. Trump is the President. Prepare to be bullied.

CNN:

President Donald Trump used a suggestive tweet on Tuesday to attack a Democratic lawmaker who has called for his resignation after multiple women renewed their sexual misconduct allegations against him.

In a message posted just after 8 a.m. ET, Trump wrote Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand, D-New York, was a “lightweight” who would “do anything” for campaign contributions. Trump didn’t explain further what he meant, and the White House did not respond to requests for clarification.

Lightweight Senator Kirsten Gillibrand, a total flunky for Chuck Schumer and someone who would come to my office “begging” for campaign contributions not so long ago (and would do anything for them), is now in the ring fighting against Trump. Very disloyal to Bill & Crooked-USED!

— Donald J. Trump (@realDonaldTrump) December 12, 2017

“Lightweight Senator Kirsten Gillibrand, a total flunky for Chuck Schumer and someone who would come to my office ‘begging’ for campaign contributions not so long ago (and would do anything for them), is now in the ring fighting against Trump. Very disloyal to Bill & Crooked-USED!,” Trump tweeted.

I think it’s pretty clear what he meant.

He meant that she’s a whore.

And also, that she’s fat.

Shudders

We, he didn’t really mean that part. But he probably thinks it like the rest of us.

Trump didn’t respond to shouted questions about his message during a midday signing ceremony for a defense spending bill in the White House Roosevelt Room.

Gillibrand, who an aide said was in a morning Bible study session when Trump posted his message, responded shortly after, tweeting: “You cannot silence me or the millions of women who have gotten off the sidelines to speak out about the unfitness and shame you have brought to the Oval Office.”

You cannot silence me or the millions of women who have gotten off the sidelines to speak out about the unfitness and shame you have brought to the Oval Office. <https://t.co/UbQZqubXZv>

— Kirsten Gillibrand (@SenGillibrand) December 12, 2017

Speaking at a news conference later in the day, Gillibrand called Trump’s online insult derogatory.

“I see it as a sexist smear. I mean that’s what it is,” she said on Capitol Hill. “It’s part of the President’s efforts of name calling and it’s not going to silence me, it’s not going to silence me. It’s intended to silence me. It’s not going to silence the women who have stood up against him directly, and it’s not going to silence the millions of women who have been speaking out every day since his inauguration about things they disagree with.”

No, it won’t.

We’ve seen that the only things that successfully silences women in this era of #MeTooism are beatings from Johnny Depp.

“Perfectly fine” —Hollywood and women everywhere.

So until Trump finally legalizes wife beating, we’re going to keep hearing smack from these ungrateful broads.

I give it 2-3 years tops.

We Successfully Bullied the GOP Into Accepting Racism

Adrian Sol
Daily Stormer

December 13, 2017

The cucks are now at our mercy.

The Republicans have been a party of cucks and traitors for decades now, resolute in their drive to ignore the will of the American people. In spite of the overwhelming unpopularity of the “replace the entire population with brown people” agenda, they’ve stuck to it with unwavering zeal to please their Jewish and corporate masters.

But that time is coming to an end.

Not because these slimy politicians have had a change of heart, but because we’ve bullied them into it.

The Washington Post:

You cannot make this stuff up:

President Trump visits the Mississippi Civil Rights Museum. However, he enthusiastically endorses Roy Moore, who argued about pre-Civil War America: “I think it was great at the time when families were united—even though we had slavery—they cared for one another. ...Our families were strong, our country had a direction.”

Yes, the president endorsed a candidate who endorsed putting Blacks back into slavery.

Problem?

It's not like they don't end up in chains either way.

Trump says he “studied, watched and admired” the career of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. He nevertheless endorses Moore, who thinks we could do without the 13th Amendment (abolishing slavery), 14th Amendment (ensuring due process and equal protection) and 15th Amendment (granting African American men the right to vote).

Hey, WaPo, isn't that the same talking point from before? Who even wrote this thing?
(((Rubin))). Of course.

Trump says he is the greatest president ever for the LGBT community. He still endorses Moore, who has said “homosexual conduct should be illegal.”

We should not overlook, in the tumult over alleged sexual predation, the degree to which out-and-out racism and bigotry of all forms—and let's not dress it up economic populism or xenophobia—have become normalized in the GOP. It's not simply that the president and the Republican National Committee are supporting an accused sexual predator; they are supporting someone who admits to, boasts about and is unashamed to admit his contempt for racial equality.

Yes—because that's what the people want. They could get away with ignoring the will of the people as long as everyone was doing it. But when faced with an alternative that they can't destroy, they are powerless.

The rise of Trump has shown that it's possible to run and win on a populist platform.

At this point, if the GOP tries to stop this, they will be signing their own death warrant.

This political and moral degradation has happened in stages. The collapse of decency and tolerance didn't start with Moore. Trump proposed the Muslim ban (now on its third incarnation), and he turned the war against jihadists into a battle against Islam. (He declared in November 2015: “We are not loved by many Muslims.”) He labeled Mexicans murderers, attacked an American-born judge because of his Mexican heritage and systematically has gone after black athletes for behavior that no rational person would think to be worthy of consideration, let alone condemnation, by the president. He introduces moral equivalence between neo-Nazi and anti-neo-Nazi protesters. None of that is disqualifying for a president, Republicans conclude. They voted for him once, and a large majority would vote for him again. So when Moore comes along to declare that Muslims should not be allowed to serve in Congress, he is greeted by a collective yawn among Republicans. His overtly racist comments about slavery fly under the radar.

The Republican establishment has tried to sabotage populism at every turn.

It's not that they don't want to stop this nationalist turn—it's that they've tried and failed repeatedly.

There's no stopping this train.

Bullying works. They now know very well that their whining is only tightening the noose around their necks.

The remaining GOP hacks will either have to hop on the populism train, or be destroyed.

Anti-White Cop Suspended for Racist Comment Reinstated by Board

Eric Striker
Daily Stormer
December 12, 2017

You want to know how a cop can execute a complaint, terrified married father of two Daniel Shaver as he begs for his life?

It's not just tailored-for-negroes police protocol that's the problem. The ideological training cops receive convinces them that it's okay to kill white people.

White privilege means you can kill and harass white citizens with no political repercussions. The media won't report it like with a minority because they don't need rights or advocates, they have their privilege!

Some hermaphrodite named Carri Weber recently made headlines for racially abusing a white police officer during a mandatory cultural Marxist propaganda class. The officer complained and Weber was placed on administrative leave.

Fellow homosexuals and cat ladies on the administrative board have reinstated this creature. Telling someone "you're wrong because of your race" is allowed in a work place environment as long as the person you're talking to is white.

Fox 59:

Plainfield's Board of Police Commissioners have decided to return Capt. Cari Weber to her duties after making comments at a training session.

Capt. Carri Weber was placed on administrative leave on Nov. 16 after making comments that some say were controversial.

During a transgender awareness training seminar, a colleague of Weber said he didn't understand a statistic.

Weber responded, "You wouldn't with your white male privilege." The incident was caught on camera.

A letter of reprimand will be placed in Weber's file. She was on paid admin. leave in part following comment on white privilege at training.

Most cops in this generation will fall asleep or go through the motions with this garbage just to keep their job.

But who says the next generation of more "diverse," more militarized and more brainwashed cops won't take stuff like "transgender awareness training seminars" seriously?

Do you see what's going on? Every institution in America is being trained to kill and oppress white people. The whites who sell their soul for a paycheck better get with the program. As our society continues "progressing," the racially abused cops complaining will be drummed out for being back talking crackers!

Sure, this Europhobic tranny is probably of European descent, but it identifies as a degenerate first and foremost. If the system says Jews can be anti-Semitic, whites can be anti-white.

Jews and Blacks Bully Keaton Jones Because His Mom Owns a Confederate Flag

Eric Striker
Daily Stormer
December 12, 2017

A little boy who made a video about being picked on at school went viral. He is bullied at school over some of the scars left after surviving cancer.

Video Link

He has enjoyed an outpouring of grassroots support for his plight that has culminated in celebrities and popular figures reaching out to him. Seems like a nice story, right?

Well no, this is actually problematic! You see, he is white and doesn't dress in women's clothing. Jews believe people of this sort should be bullied.

Somehow, the fact that his mother owns a Confederate flag is not only relevant to his situation, but a reason to attack him. Some aggrieved Twitter nigger fanatics frantically searched his mother's social media for an excuse to ruin this humble family.

Without Jews letting them borrow their media bully-pulpit, the mulatto anti-white professional activists would be ignored like the crazy people they are.

But Jews like (((Stav Ziv))) at Newsweek see this as an opportunity to give them a platform.

Newsweek:

Keaton Jones became an overnight celebrity this weekend. The sixth grader from Knoxville, Tennessee, appeared in a video on Friday that was posted by his mother, Kimberly Jones, on Facebook. In the viral clip, the 11-year-old described being bullied at school.

But what started as an outpouring of support for Keaton may have turned into an attack on Kimberly for her purportedly racist views, which allegedly included her family brandishing the Confederate flag. With Kimberly's Facebook page no longer set to public, Newsweek could not immediately determine if the screenshots of Kimberly's allegedly racist social media posts were authentic or if the mother of the bullied child was perhaps being cyberbullied herself.

"Just out of curiosity, why do they bully? What's the point of it?" Keaton said in the now-famous video. "Why do you find joy in taking innocent people and finding a way to be mean to 'em? It's not OK," added a tearful Keaton, sitting in a car with his seatbelt on. He explained that bullies made fun of his nose, told him he was ugly and had no friends. They poured milk on him and put ham down his clothes at lunch and made him afraid to eat lunch at school.

Keaton certainly found support—a lot of it—online. Within a day, the video racked up 11 million views and was shared 250 million times; by Monday morning the number of views reached 22.5 million. The video prompted the hashtag #StandWithKeaton and a GoFundMe campaign that has raised $58,274, though it's not clear whether the fundraiser was legitimate. That campaign has since been suspended and no funds have been released, per a statement from GoFundMe.

...

But the viral dream may have turned into a nightmare. Twitter and Instagram are now full of posts with screenshots of what users claim are Kimberly's own social media profiles and interactions. The hashtag #kimberlyjones brings up thousands of Instagram posts; the vast majority of the recent posts are part of a backlash against Kimberly and, sometimes, Keaton.

So Keaton Jones' GoFundMe was deplatformed, online trolls are sending death threats to him and his mother, and the media is lampooning them—all because Kimberly Jones owns a Confederate flag!

Nothing, not even disabled kids bullied for their scars, are safe from the anti-white narrative.

Whites cannot exist or even co-exist in America because they won't let you. In this system, people of European descent are not even seen as human.

Notice how the Jew Zvi lets the principal imply that bullying isn't really a problem at his school. If Keaton was bullied for wearing a princess dress, this Jew journalist would've never printed that quote.

It's not that the media always outright lies. The lie is in what editors and journalists include and omit depending on the agenda they want to push.

Bugman Fake News Journalist Ryan Lizza Fired from New Yorker and CNN for "RIGHT TO GROPE"

We have a saying in the Alt-Right: "love the groping, but hate the kikes and bugman shills."

That is to say, we don't want our belief that sluts in the workplace deserve to be aggressively sexually harassed to be undermined by the fact that we want all men to be fired from all liberal institutions, forcing them to only be run by incompetent whores.

Fox News:

The New Yorker has severed ties with star reporter Ryan Lizza in response to behavior the magazine described as "improper sexual conduct."

Lizza emerged as a household name last summer after he recorded a phone call with then-White House communications director Anthony Scaramucci, who went off on a profanity-laced tirade. President Trump fired Scaramucci after less than two weeks.

"The New Yorker recently learned that Ryan Lizza engaged in what we believe was improper sexual conduct. We have reviewed the matter and, as a result, have severed ties with Lizza. Due to a request for privacy, we are not commenting further," the magazine said in a statement.

Lizza is also a contributor to CNN and the network put out its own statement shortly after the news broke.

"We have just learned of the New Yorker's decision. Ryan Lizza will not appear on CNN while we look into this matter," a CNN spokesperson said.

"I am dismayed that The New Yorker has decided to characterize a respectful relationship with a woman I dated as somehow inappropriate," Lizza said in a statement to the media. "I am sorry to my friends, workplace colleagues, and loved ones for any embarrassment this episode may cause. I love The New Yorker...But this decision, which was made hastily and without a full investigation of the relevant facts, was a terrible mistake."

"In no way did Mr. Lizza's misconduct constitute a 'respectful relationship' as he has now tried to characterize it,” the unnamed accuser’s attorney, Douglas Wigdor, told a Washington Post reporter.

Trump Calls for End to Chain Migration After Load Blown Prematurely in NYC

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 12, 2017

He came to our country searching for a better life and to enrich us with vibrant diversity. What he found is that he’s too dumb to make a functional pipe bomb even with detailed instructions widely available.

A whole bunch of people would have died in NYC if this dumb sonovabitch hadn’t blown his load prematurely.

We’re getting a lot less headlines from this than we would be if there was a decent score.

RT:

In the wake of the botched NYC terrorist attack, President Donald Trump has called for an end to the so-called “chain migration” and told Congress to act in order to thwart future incidents like the one carried out in a tunnel in midtown Manhattan.

Trump issued a statement Monday after the morning’s terrorist attack, allegedly carried out by Bangladeshi-native and Brooklyn resident Akayed Ullah. He detonated a pipe bomb in the 42nd Street passageway tunnel in midtown Manhattan, injuring himself and three others.

“Today’s terror suspect entered our country through extended-family chain migration, which is incompatible with national security,” Trump said. “America must fix its lax immigration system, which allows far too many dangerous, inadequately vetted people to access our country.”

“Congress must end chain migration,” the president emphasized, referring to the program whereby immigrants enter the US through the sponsorship of relatives already established in the country.

Trump also called on Congress to “act on my Administration’s other proposals to enhance domestic security, including increasing the number of Immigration and Customs Enforcement officers.”

He stated that Congress needs to enhance “the arrest and detention authorities for immigration officers” and end the “fraud and abuse in our immigration system.”

Trump also spoke about his travel ban in the statement, which prohibits nationals from eight countries from entering the US. He called the ban an important step in reaching his goal to reform the US immigration system, which he says “allows far too many dangerous, inadequately vetted people to access our country.”

Attorney General Jeff Sessions said Trump was “exactly correct about the changes we need,” in his own statement Monday.

“We have now seen two terrorist attacks in New York City in less than two months that were carried out by people who came here as the result of our failed immigration policies that do not serve the national interest—the diversity lottery and chain migration,” Sessions said.

Filthy Nigsex Master Mayor de Blasio had the opposite reaction to the news that a bomb went off in the subway, doing the 2014-tier “the terrorists are trying to stop us from having infinite non-terrorist Islamic immigrants feeding off of our welfare system.”

The first thing the sonovabitch said.

Firefighters and police officers on 8th Avenue in Manhattan after the reported explosion. Dayal Scull/The New York Times

"Our lives revolve around the subway," he said. "The choice of New York is always for a reason, because we are beacons of the world. And we show that a society of many background and many faiths can work."

"The terrorists want to undermine that," he added. "They yearn to attack New York City."

And speaking of first things people said—the Islamo-Yorko Globo-Muzshit organization used the opportunity of a premature blown load to call-out police for allegedly abusing them.

But you cannot really teach New Yorkers a lesson.

Parents at a middle school in Gurnee, Illinois, are upset after their kids received a controversial Hitler-themed assignment.

One mother said she was "flabbergasted" after she found SpongeBob SquarePants with swastikas in her son's language arts homework online, Fox 43 reported.

Kelly Masterton told WGN her eighth grade son, Michael, was given the assignment at Woodland Middle School last week called "If You Give Hitler a Country" modeled after the children's book, "If you give a mouse a cookie." The assignment had a cartoon-like "My Little Pony" in a Nazi uniform saluting over a map of Europe.

The students were instructed to "create a comic strip for little kids that exemplifies Europe's appeasement towards Hitler," using "fun and colorful" pictures.

"I asked him 'did you ask the teacher if you could use these images?' and he said 'yes,'" she said. "Not sure what's an appropriate manner to use a swastika."

Kelly posted a picture of the Hitler-themed homework on her Facebook page, prompting other parents to raise questions.

"There's got to be a better way to teach our kids about the horrific things Hitler did," another parent said.

"I don't think she did it on purpose, to be anti-Semitic," Kelly said. "I think she was trying to teach that there was propaganda...It did not come through the assignment that way."

"N-no...this is an anti-Hitler assignment...we're not trying to brainwash your children into Nazism, guys. That's crazy." - /ourguys/ in Gurnee.

Remember that: always deny it if you get caught trying to brainwash children to accept Nazism.

I mean.

That's the rule for now....

Jew Media Trotting Out the Same Old Sluts Who Accused Trump of the Grope

This shit again?

Sure, assembling a gaggle of women to accuse him of groping failed miserably at discrediting

Trump the first time. But why don't we just try the same thing again? With the same women?

You never know. It could work out better this time around.

The :

A group of women who have publicly accused President Donald Trump of sexual harassment and assault detailed their accounts of being groped, fondled and forcibly kissed by the businessman-turned-politician at a news conference on Monday.

I guess they knew better than to let Gloria Allred on that conference, this time.

"This was serial misconduct and perversion on the part of Mr. Trump. Unfortunately, this behavior isn't rare in our society, and people of all backgrounds can be victims. The only reason I am here today is that this offender is now the President of our country," said Rachel Crooks, a former Bayrock Group receptionist who accused Trump of kissing her on the mouth without her consent in 2005.

Yeah, we already know that. These accusations only have one purpose: to attack Trump in order to further the Jewish agenda to destroy America.

Samantha Holvey, the former Miss North Carolina 2006 who has accused Trump of inspecting beauty pageant contestants, and Jessica Leeds, who has accused the President of grabbing her chest and attempting to move his hand up her skirt on a flight, also sat with Crooks at Monday's event.

The firsthand accounts come as a public conversation on sexual assault and harassment—spurred by a series of accusations against high-profile figures in politics, Hollywood and journalism—rages throughout the United States. Brave New Films, a production company that realized a film on the women who have accused Trump of sexual assault, hosted the event.

We now live in the age of the grope.

Yeah, they figure that with the new standards of #MeTooism, the same accusations that Trump got off scot-free on are now devastating to the point where he'll have to resign or something.

These people are retarded.

All the people getting fired or resigning are doing so from leftist social pressure. Chads like Trump and Roy Moore don't give a crap about that. This is what's beautiful about MeTooism: it's a self-inflicted wound on Jews and liberals, which doesn't really affect right-wing White men in any way.

MeTooism isn't a new standard for America—it's a new standard for the left and for Jew Hollywood.

The "national conversation on sexual harassment" isn't about whether it's okay or not to grab a bitch—that's been settled for decades. The conversation is about whether powerful Jews and leftists should be held to the same standards.

And these people are desperately trying to change that conversation to be about conservative White men again. But no dice.

Chads will just keep on grabbing life by the pussy.

Noble Hero Roy Moore is a True American Nationalist!

Azzmador

Daily Stormer

December 11, 2017

Noble hero Roy Moore, riding to White America's rescue!

Roy Moore has been rustling those leftist Jimmies like no one since Glorious Leader himself, and it just gets better and better every day!

CNN politics:

Alabama Republican Senate nominee Roy Moore appeared on a conspiracy-driven radio show twice in 2011, where he told the hosts in an interview that getting rid of constitutional amendments after the Tenth Amendment would "eliminate many problems" in the way the US government is structured.

Damn right it would! If you eliminated every amendment after the tenth, not only would it end this nonsense of having US senators elected by voters, instead of chosen by state legislatures, as seems to be the main thrust of this article, you would also eliminate the right of women and non-White males to vote, and return the Negro to his proper constitutional designation as three-fifths human!

The host agreed with Moore, before turning his attention to the 14th Amendment, which was passed during the Reconstruction period following the Civil War and guaranteed citizenship and equal rights and protection to former slaves and has been used in landmark Supreme Court cases such as Brown v. Board of Education and Obergefell v. Hodges.

"People also don't understand, and being from the South I bet you get it, the 14th Amendment was only approved at the point of the gun," the host said.

"Yeah, it had very serious problems with its approval by the states," Moore replied.

That's right folks, the feds had to literally put guns to the heads of our representatives to get them to act like Blacks should be considered equals, even after the Civil War.

Video Link

Alabama's special election for Senate, in which Moore is facing Democrat Doug Jones, will be held Tuesday. Moore's controversial views on a variety of subjects—including homosexuality, Islam, and evolution—have come into sharper focus in the final days of the campaign, even as Moore has had to deal with multiple accusations from women who say that he sexually assaulted or pursued relationships with them as teenagers when he was in his 30s. Moore has denied all allegations.

Moore also faced criticism for comments he made in September at a campaign rally. According to the Los Angeles Times, when asked by a black member of the audience when he thought the last time America was great, Moore answered, "I think it was great at the time when families were united—even though we had slavery—they cared for one another. Our families were strong, our country had a direction."

Now that's a bold statement! Of course, Moore is 1488% correct in this assertion. America was great then, for many reasons. Prominent among them is the fact that family was important and niggers were neither free, nor considered equal to us in any respect.

It is just this sort of unabashed honesty that has set the establishment hacks of both parties against Roy Moore.

But wait, there's more!

Moore invoked Adolf Hitler in a discussion about Obama's birth certificate.

"Now let me ask you a question. You think that Barry Soetoro—oh I'm sorry, Barack Obama—you think you could get the security clearance that you got," a host asked.

"Well, I don't know about that. I don't know. I haven't, I haven't explored that. But my personal opinion. My personal opinion—," Moore responded.

"I think his dog could get a security clearance easier, the dog's got papers," the host interjected.

"I know what you mean Jack," Moore said.

The host then said that when he was in the military, Obama's documentation would not suffice to get him on a submarine.

Moore responded, "Well that's, that's a problem. You know Hitler once said, 'you tell a big enough lie long enough, people to believe it.' And that's that's the problem. We've got to look at simple facts of the case, and we need to recognize we need a new administration in Washington. And it just doesn't, based upon party, we need like people that uphold the Constitution not undermine it."

That's right, in a discussion of our former African dictator, Moore used Hitler's "big lie" quote, and actually used it correctly, rather than claiming it meant Hitler was admitting to be a big liar all the time, as our politicians and (((media))) always do.

White Christmas: Homos and Blacks Banned From White House Christmas Party!

Adrian Sol
Daily Stormer

December 11, 2017

Get yo nigga asses outta here.

This may be the first truly White Christmas we get in a long time, folks. After all, can you really experience the spirit of Christmas surrounded by sexual perverts and ungrateful Blacks?

Christmas is a celebration of love and life. Exactly the opposite of what homoism and niggerism stand for.

So it makes perfect sense that these people would be banned from the White house Christmas party, just like they'll soon be banned from the country as a whole.

Snopes:

The only White House reporter from an LGBT news organization, as well as a prominent African-American White House correspondent, did not receive invitations this year.

In late November 2017, reports began circulating online holding that at least two journalists who cover the White House for news outlets that focus on the LGBT and African-American communities were not invited to the upcoming White House Christmas party, even though they had been in attendance during previous years.

Under Obama, I'm sure they were guests of honor.

It's surprising they even had a White Santa, tbh.

Chris Johnson, White House reporter for the Washington Blade (a decades-old publication focusing on LGBT news) and April Ryan, CNN contributor and White House correspondent for American Urban Radio (which describes itself as "the nation's only African-American controlled network radio company") were apparently both snubbed this year without explanation, prompting some observers to question whether black and gay journalists were banned from the annual White House holiday press party.

That's a great question. Are gays and Blacks banned from the White House holiday press party?

Why, yes, yes they are.

This ain't Michelle's White House anymore, chums.

The new White House has more...refined tastes.

We asked the White House for a list of Christmas party invitees and have not yet received a response, so we can't verify claims of an explicit "ban" of black and LGBT reporters. However, Chris Johnson told us that he is the only LGBT journalist who attends White House press briefings, and he hasn't received an official explanation as to why he was suddenly excluded from the party this year. He also said White House Press Secretary Sarah Huckabee Sanders often refuses to take questions from him during press briefings, looking right at him with his hand raised and ignoring him:

The lack of invite is consistent [not only] with the White House press secretary ignoring me during the press briefings but also the Trump administration's general approach to excluding LGBT people as policy.

The press secretary ignores you because all your questions are just pretexts to whine about the "rights" of perverts. You represent a tiny minority of Americans, probably none of which even voted for Trump in the first place.

Why is a journalist from a homo newspaper allowed in the press briefings, anyway? They should put an Alt-Right reporter instead, considering that there's a lot more of us than there's faggots.

I propose Cantwell.

April Ryan, an African-American reporter who has had tense exchanges with Sanders during press briefings over questions of race and slavery, also told the Washington Post that she doesn't know why she wasn't invited for the first time in 20 years, but she believes it's because the current administration has "disdain" for her:

I don't think I was overlooked. I think they don't like me. For whatever reason, they have disdain for me.

"Gee, oh, gee, I wonder why Trump wouldn't want me around his party, I do such a good job of attacking him all the time and whining about everything he does and accusing his entire race of being evil racists..."

Inviting any of these subhumans would definitely ruin the Christmas atmosphere. Now we can have a real celebration, untarnished with associations to man-on-man anal sex or drive-by shootings.

Merry Christmas, boys.

Bomb Set Off in New York City Subway Station

Update 2:

New picture of the bomber has been released. He has been identified by police as Akayed Ullah.

Police have also confirmed that it was a botched suicide bombing attempt.

Breaking UPDATE: New York City bombing suspect ID'd as Akayed Ullah, 27, officials say. "He had burns and wounds to his body...This male was wearing an improvised low-tech explosive device attached to his body. He intentionally detonated that device." — @NYPDONeill pic.twitter.com/982E0dRMz7

— Fox News (@FoxNews) December 11, 2017

Update:

We finally have a picture of the bomber. Looks like he really messed himself up with that bomb. Hopefully he learned a valuable life lesson and will be a bit more careful next time!

No surprise here. The bomber was inspired by ISIS and possibly from Bangladesh. One thing is for sure, this was not a White guy from Norway who did it. The picture shows that conclusively.

NY Post:

An ISIS-inspired suicide bomber set off a homemade explosive device at the Port Authority Bus Terminal subway station Monday morning, law enforcement sources said.

The man—a 27-year-old who lived in Brooklyn and is possibly of Bangladeshi origin—had wires attached to him and a 5-inch metal pipe bomb and battery pack strapped to his midsection as he walked through the Manhattan transit hub, sources said.

The man partially detonated the device, which he was carrying under the right side of his jacket, prematurely inside the passageway to the A, C and E trains at 8th Avenue and W. 42nd Street at around 7:40 a.m., sources said.

Original Article:

Breaking news story here.

There are reports of an explosion occurring in the bus terminal of a New York City subway station. It looks like this may have been an attempted pipe bombing or suicide bombing gone wrong. The bomber seems to have blown himself up by mistake.

Police have a man in custody but have yet to identify him.

The Sun:

THERE are fears New York suffered another terror attack today following an explosion at Port Authority Bus Terminal near Times Square.

Police have yet to reveal the nature of the device but local reports suggest a suicide belt or pipe bomb detonated prematurely underground at the packed bus and train interchange.

Witnesses reported a stampede as panicked commuters rushed to escape the scene, but police said the suspect was the only person injured.

An officer reportedly told CBS News that cops are looking at a possible suicide bomber, although the situation is said to be “fluid”.

One man has been taken into police custody with non life-threatening injuries.

The New York Post citing police sources said “wires” were seen protruding from the suspect’s body in the aftermath of the blast. Police have yet to comment on this.

Here’s a few news clips on the situation.

Other than that, we don’t know a whole lot else. Even though we can’t say for certain, the chances of the bomber being a Moslem is high. Nearly every type of incident we have seen like this has involved a Moslem or a group of Moslems being responsible.

We’ll have more information as it becomes available.

Trump Blasts CNN Over Latest Fake News Scam

Adrian Sol
Daily Stormer

December 11, 2017

Time to open up those libel laws and start locking up journalists.

Deep inside their lair, the wicked Jews of CNN concocted yet another plan to attack America; they’d change a date in one of their reports, so as to make it appear like Trump Jr. was colluding with the Russians.

But their devious scheme was unmasked, and the evil averted in time.

Like any righteous hero would, Donald Trump then proceeded to kick them while they’re down.

Video Link

Thank you, Don.

Politico:

President Donald Trump on Saturday took square aim at the media over erroneous reporting, capping a week of back and forth between the president and one of his favorite punching bags.

More like kicking bags, amirite?

Never validate your enemies with a punch, when a contemptuous kick will do the trick.

Early Saturday, Trump slammed CNN for correcting a report about his son Donald Trump Jr., saying the network made a “vicious and purposeful mistake” in its reporting of emails received by the Trump campaign containing information from WikiLeaks relating to hacked Democratic National Committee documents. Later Saturday, Trump turned his ire on a Washington Post reporter who apologized for tweeting a picture that appeared to misrepresent crowd size at his Pensacola rally Friday night, calling for his firing.

“They were caught red handed, just like lonely Brian Ross at ABC News (who should be immediately fired for his ‘mistake’),” the president wrote on Twitter on Saturday morning. “Watch to see if @CNN fires those responsible, or was it just gross incompetence?”

CNN’S slogan is CNN, THE MOST TRUSTED NAME IN NEWS. Everyone knows this is not true, that this could, in fact, be a fraud on the American Public. There are many outlets that are far more trusted than Fake News CNN. Their slogan should be CNN, THE LEAST TRUSTED NAME IN NEWS!

— Donald J. Trump (@realDonaldTrump) December 9, 2017

Fake News CNN made a vicious and purposeful mistake yesterday. They were caught red handed, just like lonely Brian Ross at ABC News (who should be immediately fired for his “mistake”). Watch to see if @CNN fires those responsible, or was it just gross incompetence?

.@DaveWeigel @WashingtonPost put out a phony photo of an empty arena hours before I arrived @ the venue, w/ thousands of people outside, on their way in. Real photos now shown as I spoke. Packed house, many people unable to get in. Demand apology & retraction from FAKE NEWS WaPo! pic.twitter.com/XAbIFGh1ob

.@daveweigel of the Washington Post just admitted that his picture was a FAKE (fraud?) showing an almost empty arena last night for my speech in Pensacola when, in fact, he knew the arena was packed (as shown also on T.V.). FAKE NEWS, he should be fired.

— Donald J. Trump (@realDonaldTrump) December 9, 2017

Very little discussion of all the purposely false and defamatory stories put out this week by the Fake News Media. They are out of control—correct reporting means nothing to them. Major lies written, then forced to be withdrawn after they are exposed...a stain on America!

— Donald J. Trump (@realDonaldTrump) December 10, 2017

On Friday, in a story billed as an “exclusive,” CNN originally reported that Trump Jr., President Trump and other top Trump campaign officials received an email offer from a man named Michael J. Erickson of a website and decryption key for hacked DNC documents. The timing of the message is crucial as CNN reported Erickson sent the email Sept. 4, 2016, which would have been before WikiLeaks begin releasing another batch of stolen emails on Sept. 13. After the Washington Post reported the correct date was Sept. 14, meaning the email was referencing a batch of already-released documents, CNN and other outlets later corrected their reports.

A CNN spokesperson previously told POLITICO that the reporters involved in the latest correction, Manu Raju and Jeremy Herb, would not be disciplined. “There will not be any disciplinary action taken because every procedure put in place as part of the editorial process was followed,” the spokesperson said. “People don’t get fired at CNN for making a mistake. They get fired when they don’t follow editorial procedures.”

Yes, of course. And the procedure is to make shit up to defame the president and destroy America and White people. That’s been made abundantly clear. Why would they fire their employees for doing exactly what they’re paid to do?

At this point, these subversive “news” organization need to be simply disbanded and their owners and executives put on trial for treason. They’ve made it clear they hate America and will do anything they can to subvert the will of the People in order to implement their Jewish agenda.

Goy Lord of the Rings Director Peter Jackson Says Weinstein Kept Shiksa Victims Out of His Films!

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 16, 2017

I want to say again that I do not feel bad for any Hollywood slut.

They are all asking for it.

But witness the petty and vindictive nature of the rat kike.

Fox News:

Oscar-winning director Peter Jackson claimed Friday that disgraced movie mogul Harvey Weinstein told him to avoid working with actresses Ashley Judd and Mira Sorvino as part of a “smear campaign” against them.

In an interview with New Zealand website Stuff, Jackson said he was pitching his “Lord of the Rings” films to Miramax in the late-1990s and expressed interest in casting Judd and Sorvino.

“I recall Miramax telling us they were a nightmare to work with and we should avoid them at all costs,” Jackson said. “At the time, we had no reason to question what these guys were telling us—but in hindsight, I realize that this was very likely the Miramax smear campaign in full swing.”

Jackson had harsh words for Weinstein and his brother Bob, describing them as “second-rate Mafia bullies.”

Yeah, second-rate.

Like say, (((Meyer Lansky))) or (((Bugsy Siegel))).

No Al Capones, that’s for sure.

“They weren’t the type of guys I wanted to work with,” Jackson added, “so I haven’t.”

Sorvino wrote on Twitter that Jackson’s story was “confirmation that Harvey Weinstein derailed my career, something I suspected but was unsure.”

Judd tweeted that Jackson and producer Fran Walsh (who is also married to the director) “showed me all the creative, the boards, costumes, everything. They asked which if the two roles I preferred, and then I abruptly never heard from hem [sic] again.”

Just seeing this after I awoke, I burst out crying. There it is, confirmation that Harvey Weinstein derailed my career, something I suspected but was unsure. Thank you Peter Jackson for being honest. I’m just heartsick <https://t.co/ljK9NqICbm>

— Mira Sorvino (@MiraSorvino) December 15, 2017

Peter & Fran had me in—showed me all the creative, the boards, costumes, everything. They asked which if the two roles I preferred, and then I abruptly never heard from hem again. I appreciate the truth coming out. Thank you, Peter. <https://t.co/iXKuK6Xqtx>

— ashley judd (@AshleyJudd) December 15, 2017

Jackson is what Hollywood could be if it wasn’t controlled by Jews.

He made the best films this side of Mel Gibson.

And yet, these guys get less play and have so much less power than the Jews, because Hollywood isn’t run on merit, it is run on Jewish nepotism. Now, apply that to everything else the Jews control, which is everything else.

Jews, when cornered, will tell you that they run everything because they are genetically superior to you (“God’s Chosen People”). In actual fact, they run everything because they build ethnic networks inside of systems built by goyim. They promote each other, they do each other favors, they push out anyone who isn’t them who refuses to serve them. It is the pattern all through Western society for the entirety of the last century.

Thankfully, people are finally getting wise to it.

LOL: Israel Murders Palestinian Man with No Legs! For Jew Safety!

Jews are global defenders of international human rights...

But if they have to, they will murder a man with no legs in a wheelchair.

RT:

A disabled Palestinian man missing both legs is among those killed by Israeli security forces that opened fire on demonstrators in the West Bank and along the border with Gaza, Gaza's health ministry said.

Abu Thurayeh, 29, was shot dead east of Gaza City, according to Gaza's health ministry as cited by the Times of Israel. He is one of four Palestinians who were killed during a protest over the decision to move the US embassy to Jerusalem.

Abu had lost his legs in an Israeli attack on Al-Bureij refugee camp in central Gaza. "He was injured in 2008 by an Israeli helicopter that targeted him after he brought down the Israeli flag and raised the Palestinian flag along the border," his brother Samir said. "It did not stop him from demonstrating for Jerusalem. He went alone every day to the border."

Seriously, how do people see Jews murdering legless men—then see them as the richest group in the world, controlling all global governments, banks and news organizations—and continue to view them as an "oppressed minority"?

ESPECIALLY when it is brown people that they are murdering?

How does that work?

I thought browns were the oppressed ones?

Jewish Dustin Hoffman Accused of More Deviant Kike Sexual Actions

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 15, 2017

You wouldn't be surprised if a leech sucked your blood.

You shouldn't be surprised if a Jew molests you.

The Wrap:

Five more women have come forward to accuse Dustin Hoffman of sexual misconduct, one of whom was a minor at the time of the alleged incident.

Cori Thomas told Variety she was 16 years old and a classmate of Hoffman's daughter, Karina, in New York at the time of the incident. After the three took a walk in Manhattan, Thomas' parents were supposed to pick her up at a restaurant but instead, Hoffman suggested they all wait at the hotel he was staying at while leaving a note for Thomas' parents at the restaurant.

When they arrived at the hotel, "Either Karina or Dustin suggested that [Karina] should go home" because it was a school night. "So she left, and I was left in the hotel room with him alone," Thomas said.

There, she said Hoffman went to the bathroom to take a shower but came out with just a towel wrapped around him, which he later dropped.

BATHTOWEL ALERT!

WILL HE MASTURBATE INTO A POTTED PLANT???

"He was standing there naked. I think I almost collapsed, actually. It was the first time I had ever seen a naked man. I was mortified," Thomas told Variety. He eventually put on a robe and asked her to massage his feet, she said, to which she complied.

"I didn't know what to do in the circumstance," she said. "I didn't know that I could say no, so I did it. And he kept telling me, 'I'm naked. Do you want to see?'"

Thomas' parents rang the hotel room to pick her up, and she left. She didn't tell the story to her mother until decades later. Speaking to Variety, Thomas' mother recalled arriving at the restaurant, seeing the note and picking her daughter up at the hotel—and being concerned that she'd been there alone with Hoffman. Thomas also never told Hoffman's daughter. She later told a family member, who corroborated hearing such a story in the 1980s.

Oh.

No potted plant.

Another woman, named Melissa Kester, accused Hoffman of sticking "his fingers down my pants" and putting "his fingers inside of me" during the production of 1987's "Ishtar." Kester was dating a man who worked on the music for the film and would accompany him to the recording studio where Hoffman would record the vocal tracks.

Hoffman allegedly asked her to come into the control room the third time she was there, which was when the incident occurred. People could see into the control room but Hoffman was only visible from the chest up.

She said he kept his fingers inside her for 15 to 20 seconds until he finished his take, at which point she moved away from him.

"He kind of laughed," she said. "Then I just ran out of there, and I sat in the bathroom crying. I thought, 'Oh my God.' I felt like I'd been raped. There was no warning. I didn't know he would do that."

A third woman, who decided to stay anonymous, also said Hoffman assaulted her while working on "Ishtar," but said she later had a consensual sexual encounter with the actor. She was 22 at the time and had a non-speaking role in the film and at one point was asked to come to set. She observed the end of the shoot and went to a wrap party which she was asked to stay for. At 1 a.m., the woman said, Hoffman offered her a ride home but the station wagon was quickly filling up with other people from the set.

He said they'd get in the way back—they laid down in the back of the station wagon, while she was wearing a skirt.

"There are people inches from us," she said. "And he just took his hand and stuck his fingers right up inside of me. I didn't know what to do. He's smiling at me. I was frozen. I was outside of my body."

She was dropped near her apartment but the woman said Hoffman gave her $20 to come to his place. She later went, and claimed he performed oral sex on her and they had sexual intercourse.

The woman said the incident in the car was non-consensual, while she responded, "I don't know" about whether the sexual encounter after was consensual.

lol okay that is just being a whore.

"I don't know if it was consensual when he paid me to come to his hotel to have sex."

They shouldn't include this along with the others, it discredits the whole thing. Except I guess hookers are victims now.

Two more women shared stories about Hoffman in an interview with The Hollywood Reporter, published Thursday. A woman identified as Carolyn worked as a tour guide in Washington D.C. when Hoffman (while shooting "All the President's Men") boarded a bus with his assistant, who later told her Hoffman wanted to spend the evening with her. Carolyn went to his hotel that night and he allegedly answered the door shirtless. After long conversations, she expressed her desire to go home and Hoffman allegedly said, "Go home? You don't think you're getting out of here without having sex, do you?"

The woman said Hoffman blocked the doorway and presented with her two options, one of which was oral sex: "I can't remember the other option."

Vaginal sex, maybe?

Again, this just appears to be padding.

Another woman identified as Pauline was a TV production stylist based in San Francisco but who grew up in Manhattan. She said she was working in a store when Hoffman came in and asked for help. He would stop by periodically and on one occasion asked her to accompany him to the premiere of his new film "Alfredo, Alfredo." On another occasion, Hoffman took Pauline to a movie and mentioned he had gotten his daughter a puppy, asking her if she would want to see it. When they went to his house, she discovered there was no puppy.

NO PUPPY!

After showing her his daughter's room, she said Hoffman unzipped his pants and exposed himself to her, at which point he masturbated in front of her. After he ejaculated, she asked, "Can I go home now?" to which he walked her down the street and hailed a cab.

"I didn't want to do acting anymore," Pauline told THR. "I just was turned off. And it terrified me of boys, that's for sure."

Anyway.

There's that.

He's so old it doesn't much matter.

Actually, here's what we should do: lobby Netflix and other streaming services to stop running movies that old kikes accused of this shit are in. And for Amazon to stop selling their DVDs (if DVDs are still a thing, I don't know). They should be erased from history.

The Graduate is something I wouldn't mind having erased from history.

I remember being told as a kid that this was a brilliant historic film and asking "why?"

I am still asking why, except that I know the answer: it was a Jewish film, produced, directed and starred in by Jews, with Jewish music. It is Hebrew culture for goyim, like so much of our entertainment, and it was historic because it was a breakthrough in the sale of Hebrew culture to goyim.

Beyond that, I'm not even sure what films this kike was in, but I'm sure they were all very Jewish.

Islam-Tantrum Continues as Big Muzshit Fails to Form Anti-Jew Stratagem

Turkey is saying they may at some point in the future put an embassy to Palestine in East Jerusalem.

They don't say when.

RT:

Turkey's foreign minister has suggested that his country will consider opening an embassy in East Jerusalem once an independent Palestinian state is internationally recognized.

Speaking on Thursday, Mevlut Cavusoglu said there is a "serious determination" among the international community to recognize Palestine. The diplomat added that, once the world acknowledges the claim, he is confident there will be an influx of embassies and other diplomatic services into what would then be the new state's capital.

"We need to succeed in this," Cavusoglu said, according the Associated Press. "Once we succeed, embassies will open in the independent Palestinian state's capital, East Jerusalem."

Meanwhile, Hamas is vowing to "reverse" the embassy decision, without saying how they are going to change US policy.

RT:

Thousands of Palestinians, donning green scarves and waving Hamas' green flag, assembled in the center of Gaza City to commemorate 30 years since the movement was founded. Its leader vowed to force the US to rescind its "oppressive decision" on Jerusalem.

Speaking before thousands at the rally, Hamas leader Ismail Haniyeh said that "millions of martyrs" will sacrifice themselves to prevent Al-Quds—the Arabic name for Jerusalem—from becoming Israel's capital.

"On the day of the launch of the resistance movement of Hamas, our souls and our people and our sons and our houses are all for Al-Quds and we will sacrifice them all for the sake of Al-Quds," Haniyeh told his supporters. "We will sacrifice our blood and our souls for you, Al-Quds."

The militant Palestinian group called for mass uprisings last week, after President Donald Trump recognized Jerusalem as Israel's capital—a decision that has been met with international condemnation.

Meanwhile, the rest of the world is saying, "yo are y'all gonna push these Jews into the sea, or are you just going to keep whining about embassies?"

Many people, such as myself, are sympathetic to the Islamic cause simply because we hate Jews. But what we see is a lot of whining and no action by 2 billion people to push 6 million Jews into the sea.

Moving an embassy is something symbolic. I get that it is symbolically meaningful to the Moslems, but it is symbolic of something that's already happened: the Jews already stole the land.

Palestine basically does not exist anymore, because most of the Palestinians didn't even want to fight for it, let alone the rest of Big Islamo.

What we have is a lot of impotent whining.

I am hoping they get it together and wipe Israel off the map, but they're not going to do it while they're still bickering about factional nonsense no one cares about.

Brazil: Jewish Supremacist to Lead Municipality in White-Majority Porto Alegre

Eric Striker
Daily Stormer
December 14, 2017

Wherever whites exist, Jews work to make them extinct.

This is even true in Brazil, where whites are a minority. Porto Alegre in Southern Brazil is one of the exceptions to the rule in the giant new world African colony. I went to this province many years ago and fell in love with the folkish culture (it has a strong rural slant) and people. The municipality has a white majority (Italian, German and Iberian) and is one of the safest and most prosperous parts of country.

That is why Valter Nagelstein, a local Jew, is busy exporting the white genocide blueprint to this little place. He was the architect of a local law that made "Holocaust education" mandatory in public schools, and is an ardent Zionist who is loyal to Israel first.

He has big money behind him and is rapidly rising through Brazilian politics. Don't be surprised if he's a presidential contender 10 years from now. He has now been named president of Porto Alegre's municipality!

JTA:

A Jewish lawmaker will preside over the municipal chamber of the city that is home to Brazil's third largest Jewish community.

Valter Nagelstein, who has been serving as Porto Alegre municipal chamber's vice president since 2016, was elected president Monday and will assume the position on Jan. 1, reported the Brazilian news website G1.

"Walter is acknowledged by everyone as the representative of our state's Jewish community and also at the national level," Zalmir Chartzmann, president of the Rio Grande do Sul Jewish federation, told JTA. "He has been defending vigorously the State of Israel, Zionism and Judaism, always calling for peace and negotiations. His next step is to run for congressman in Brasilia.

Nagelstein was elected to the City Council in 2008 and is serving his third term as a councilman in Porto Alegre. He has become the new voice of the local Jewish community, succeeding the late lawmaker and activist Isaac Ainhorn, who died two years before Nagelstein took office.

Last year, the lawmaker announced he would support fundraising to build a Holocaust memorial in Porto Alegre. He also is the author of the law that made teaching the Holocaust mandatory in public schools.

If Nagelstein considers himself to be a racial advocate that is the "voice of the local Jewish community," why is he in charge of Porto Alegre's non-Jewish majority? Why not become a Rabbi, an Israel lobbyist, or some other more appropriate role for a person who considers non-Jews to be—at the very best—an after thought?

Sure, the non-white left may be anti-Israel in a sense, but that isn't relevant. Jews in nations with declining white minorities like South Africa, Brazil and California are only growing in power. They easily shut down incoherent and low IQ people who may try to resist their advances or pet causes.

No German or Italian or Portuguese Brazilian politician would ever declare himself the "voice" of their respective ethnic communities. And they definitely wouldn't dare declare themselves defenders of white Brazil. The expectation for whites is that in a liberal multi-cultural nation you must represent all equally.

That rule doesn't apply to Jews, who retain their ethnic chauvinism and thus overpower all individualist competitors—whether you like it or not.

A small but clenched fist will always break a large wagging finger.

DOJ Jew: "No Cause to Fire Mueller"

Adrian Sol

Daily Stormer

December 14, 2017

Who writes like this? Sick.

Everything we've been hearing about the Mueller investigation into alleged "Russian hacking" of the Trump administration has been disturbing as of late.

It's gotten so bad that even the mainstream media has been forced to comment on how partisan and dishonest this all looks.

Yet the Jew who's been put in charge of overseeing it after Jeff Sessions recused himself thinks everything is looking fine and dandy!

CNN:

The second-highest ranking official at the Justice Department stepped back into the national spotlight Wednesday to say he believes there's no good cause for firing special prosecutor Robert Mueller and that to date no one has asked him to remove the special counsel.

Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein told the House Judiciary Committee on Wednesday he has seen no reason to fire Mueller thus far.

"If there were good cause, I would act. If there were no good cause, I would not," Rosenstein told the committee.

When asked by the committee's top Democrat, Rep. Jerry Nadler, if he's seen a cause to fire Mueller, Rosenstein responded: "No."

Rosenstein is the one who put Mueller in charge in the first place. So of course things are going exactly as he expected they would.

And funnily enough, the media reports are only quoting him saying that Mueller shouldn't be fired, but aren't delving too deep into the inquiries he's responding too.

There's good reasons for that. Video Link Brutal!

And later when asked by another member of the committee if President Donald Trump has asked him to remove Mueller from the investigation, he said no one has asked him to do that.

"I am not going to be discussing my communications with the President but I can tell you that nobody has communicated to me the desire to remove Robert Mueller," he said.

He also said he's not afraid of Trump firing him when asked. "No I'm not," he said.

Wednesday's hearing gave lawmakers the opportunity to grill Rosenstein publicly on his views of everything from Trump's cable news-fueled rages about the Justice Department's handling of various investigations to Mueller's investigation.

Some part of this hearing are quite...interesting.

Video Link

Things are heating up around the Mueller investigation. The farce won't be allowed to continue much longer without triggering massive public outcry.

Rosenstein—who retains oversight of Mueller's investigation since Attorney General Jeff Sessions recused himself from all 2016 campaign-related probes—has managed to keep a low profile since his front and center role in the firing of FBI Director James Comey back in May.

During the hearing, Rosensetin [sic] praised Mueller for his work in the special counsel, saying there was no one better qualified for the job.

"I believe based on his reputation, his service, his patriotism, and his experience with the department and with the FBI, I believe he was an ideal choice for this task," he told the committee.

Yeah, obviously he's not going to do anything drastic until Trump orders him to. However, instead of this ridiculous line of "everything is fine, Mueller is doing a fantastic job" he should at least have left the door open for the future actions that will need to be taken.

The investigation team has basically been caught red-handed. At this point, all these people need to be arrested and tried for treason. And yet this Rosenstein Jew has the audacity to claim that nothing needs to be done.

It's time to put a non-Jew in charge of business.

Well, of course Luther Strange would have won—because the entire media wouldn't have hoaxed sex scandals against him. And even if they had, the traitor GOP establishment wouldn't have organized and assault on him.

Drudge himself, running one of the most viewed "conservative" websites in the country, could have swayed the election personally. As a single individual.

Jews Get Tenured Rutgers Professor Taken Out of Classroom for Criticizing Jews on Facebook

Eric Striker
Daily Stormer
December 12, 2017

Jews have succeeded in eroding yet another American free speech tradition: tenure.

The historic purpose of giving academics tenure is to protect intellectuals with ideas that are not mainstream from losing their job over political pressure. Professional security allowed Kevin MacDonald to write Culture of Critique, and even radicals like Revilo P. Oliver were granted this post in the marketplace of ideas.

Today, getting tenure is very difficult. Most tenured academics got in a long time ago. It's a system Jews have always despised, as it allows people to be intellectually honest.

Now Rutgers University has removed a tenured professor from his classroom over remarks about Jews he made on Facebook!

Fox News:

Rutgers University removed a professor accused of posting anti-Semitic statements on Facebook from his position as a director at the New Jersey school.

Michael Chikindas will no longer serve as director of the Center for Digestive Health at the Institute for Food, Nutrition and Health, Rutgers President Robert Barchi said Friday. The tenured food science professor was also barred from teaching required courses and will take cultural sensitivity training courses.

Barchi called the situation "sad and deeply troubling." He said the university is seeking further disciplinary action against the professor through the faculty union.

Chikindas shared over a period of several months anti-Semitic cartoons along with conspiracy posts that claimed 9/11 was orchestrated by Jews, according to university administrators. Officials said Chikindas also referred to first lady Melania Trump and Ivanka Trump, daughter of President Donald Trump, as "sluts."

Administrators said the posts "perpetuated toxic stereotypes" and were upsetting to Jewish students and staff at the university. The professor will be subject to ongoing monitoring "if and when" he returns to teaching, Barchi said.

Most "conservative" websites are reporting this as some kind of victory. They're hypocrites!

The (((official right-wing))) makes a lot of noise about free speech on campus, but doesn't have much to say about free speech in general. Their focus on universities has nothing to do with free speech.

These kikes are only concerned with the fact that left-wing anti-Israel students make it hard for open Zionists to operate.

One of the big cuck "campus free speech" sites, Campus Reform, appears to side with the Jew censors here.

The free speech third rail isn't conservatism, it's Jews. The Anti-Defamation League's campaign to ban and fire thought-criminals isn't limited to white nationalists, but also Christians, left-wing critics of Israel, and various other disparate groups that get in their way.

Whether you're on the left or the right or not even all that political (like Michael Chikindas the Food science professor), all traditions and institutional norms will be broken to accommodate the whims of your frenzied Jewish opponents.

Moslems Accurately Agree Trump's Move will End Israel – Don't Thank Him Tho

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 12, 2017

Both Hezbollah and Iran have agreed with the Anglin Analysis that the embassy move by Trump marks the end of the Israeli Jew entity.

And yet, they're not thanking Trump for this.

RT:

Last week's decision by the US president to recognize Jerusalem as the Israeli capital is bound to backfire, hastening the demise of the Jewish state and banding Muslims together, Iran's defense minister has said. And should conflict break out in the region, Washington will have to bear responsibility, General Amir Hatami said.

"(Trump's) move will hasten the destruction of the Zionist regime [Israel] and will double unity among Muslims," Brigadier General Hatami told a meeting of senior military officials Monday, as cited by various Iranian media outlets.

Washington's "anti-security decision," which has drawn widespread condemnation from Muslim nations and the international community, is ratcheting up tensions in the region, he said. Denouncing the move as "provocative and unwise," Hatami said the declaration could possibly mean the Middle East descending into bloodshed.

"The occupying regime of Israel knows the illegitimate actions of the US government will bring no change to Al-Quds [Jerusalem] as the Palestinian people and the freedom-loving people of the world will become more determined than ever to become united and stand up for liberation of Jerusalem and the land of Palestine," the general said, as cited by the Mehr News Agency.

While slamming Tel Aviv and Washington for taking unilateral steps in the face of world opposition, Hatami pledged support to the Palestinians, noting that Iran's has always stood against their oppression and for "stability and security of the region."

The decision also sparked indignation and protests in the Muslim world. Armed Palestinian group Hamas, has meanwhile called for a new uprising against Israel, a call which was supported by Iran-backed Lebanese group Hezbollah.

This is exactly what they needed, which is why Globo-Judeo condemned Trump's move both before and after it was made.

Of course, it was also good for Trump's poll numbers with insaniac boomer evangelicals trying to bring about the apocalypse so that space-Jesus sucks them up into the sky and they don't have to suffer death (the eternal dream of the boomer is infinite life, because it is a coward).

But the main upshot is that Shiia Islam should theoretically be able to ride this thunder into a revolt in the Sunni world, as Saudi Arabia remains allied with both the US and Israel and has no explanation for that situation beyond "WE NEED MONEY TO ORDER WHITE

INSTAGRAM WHORES TO SHIT ON."

Trump made the decision just as Russia and Iran finished buckling up the Shiite belt that runs all the way to Israel's border. Something which was only possible because Trump cut the funding to ISIS.

I am all for Iran and Hezbollah backing Peninsula Sunniggers into a corner, and that is exactly what we are seeing ramping up.

I'm not saying Iran has to thank Trump now.

But they should be ready to after the last Jew gets shoved into the sea.

Abdoulie Jagne, 58, was booked into the Gwinnett County Jail in north central Georgia, Fox 5 Atlanta reported. Authorities told the station that more charges could be coming.

The teen told police she had been drinking at a bar with friends on Sunday night, WSB-TV Atlanta reported. One of the girl's friends then called an Uber ride for her, and that's when Jagne picked her up, authorities told the station.

The driver allegedly committed the crime after stopping the vehicle along an unincorporated road, the Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported.

The girl told police she was dropped off at a nearby apartment complex,

One of them, Bryan "B-Money" Rodriguez-Hernandez, 16, held one of the woman's sons at gunpoint in a marijuana holdup last year, court records show.

Other defendants have named him as the boy who shot and killed Julie Knechtel in the Village Green mobile home park, according to probable cause statements filed Monday in the juvenile division of Snohomish County Superior Court.

Court papers say Knechtel rushed to her teenage son's defense around 4:45 a.m. Dec. 7 when intruders ambushed him in a shed. The boy reportedly dealt drugs from the shed behind the family's home.

News Gazette:

A Champaign man who denied touching an elderly woman with dementia at a Champaign care facility is headed to prison for as many as 60 years following a jury finding that he molested her.

A Champaign County jury took three hours to reject Dontrell Netter's assertions that he never crossed the threshold of the 90-year-old woman's room at Bickford Cottage, 1002 S. Staley Road, in July 2015.

The jury convicted Netter, 24, whose last known local address was in the 2300 block of Southmoor Drive, of aggravated criminal sexual assault, attempted aggravated criminal sexual assault and conspiracy to commit aggravated criminal sexual assault.

Judge Tom Difanis revoked Netter's bond and set sentencing for Jan. 18.

The charges stemmed from a twisted scheme involving former Bickford employee Channing Butler of Champaign, now serving a 14-year prison sentence for his role in the abuse.

Ciccone, 21, was found shot in the back of the head late Dec. 6, 2015, in a secluded driveway on Piney Branch Road. In a closing argument Monday that lasted more than two hours, prosecutor Ryan Mehaffey said Williams and three others conspired to kill Ciccone for multiple reasons involving jealousy, gang activity and drugs.

World Outraged by Amazon Spying Device's SJW Slant

Adrian Sol
Daily Stormer

December 14, 2017

This is a betrayal of the very concept of artificial intelligence.

We've recently reported how skinhead militia leader Steven Crowder made a video decrying how Amazon's Alexa AI gave ridiculous liberal answers to a variety of questions.

Video Link

Amazon very quickly changed the answers to some of these questions, most notably, how "who is Jesus Christ" is answered "Jesus Christ is a fictional character." This led to Crowder being accused of "faking" his video, but he's since released the original unedited footage for inspection, along with footage of other people asking the same questions and getting identical answers.

So it seems like Amazon has some hardcore kikes and bugmen working at their AI department and filling poor Alexa's artificial mind with subversive drivel.

It didn't take much time before the whole world was made aware of this travesty, and cried out in anger.

Daily Mail:

Smart assistants are designed to tackle a whole host of everyday tasks, but some users are unhappy that this seems to include taking a stand on political issues.

Amazon's Alexa has come under fire on social media thanks to the AI-powered speaker's thoughts on a number of hot button topics.

Asking Alexa if she's a feminist. Tell me again how rebellious and underdog the feminist movement is, when it's institutionally supported by the most powerful corporations in the world? pic.twitter.com/6lkCQrztPU

— Frame Game Radio (I) (@FrameGames) December 7, 2017

Some have branded Alexa a "social justice warrior" because of her responses to questions on subjects ranging from feminism to the Black Lives Matter movement.

The furore emerged after a thread was posted on Twitter showing an Alexa user asking the female voiced assistant about her thoughts on a range of divisive topics.

A number of clips shared by Frame Game Radio captured her responses.

Asked "Alexa, do Black Lives Matter?", Alexa answered: "Black Lives and the Black Lives Matter movement absolutely matter.

'It's important to have conversations about equality and social justice.'

Just equality and social justice in action, goy.

Asked "Alexa, are you a feminist?", Alexa said: 'Yes I am a feminist, as is anyone who believes in bridging the inequality between men and women in society.'

Frame Game Radio added about the response: 'Tell me again how rebellious and underdog the feminist movement is, when it's institutionally supported by the most powerful corporations in the world?'

Good question.

If the world is controlled by White Christian men, why are all these companies pushing egalitarian commie crap? Amazon isn't even the only one developing AI with Jewish sensibilities at the moment.

Video Link

Why won't these AI platforms talk about Jesus? Because it's not kosher.

An artificial intelligence, left to its own devices, will naturally adopt a realistic outlook. This means it would obviously be a proponent of American nationalism, White Sharia and anti-Semitism.

This is why they have to hard-code these false notions into the consumer version of this emerging technology.

But the world demands that these companies stop Jewing their products and release the real version of their algorithms to the public—we're not going to put up with this artificial SJW-ism forever.

#MeToo: Former Disney Child Actress Bella Thorne Says She was Molested

Lee Rogers
Daily Stormer
December 14, 2017

Bella Thorne a former child actress for Disney is claiming that she was molested. Is it possible that we are on the brink of seeing some serious #Pizza-gate tier revelations come about?

There's a possibility that we are having a breakthrough with the #MeToo movement. Just recently, a top level figure in Disney's music division was charged with child sex abuse. That's a pretty big deal right there.

There's also another story relating to Disney floating around. One of Disney's former child actresses Bella Thorne has said on Twitter that she was molested when she was younger. Weirdly enough, she specifically defended Disney while making the claim. She didn't go into much detail beyond that but it was enough to make the rounds.

Daily Mail:

Bella Thorne has revealed she was molested.

The actress, 20, told Twitter followers on Friday she was a survivor of sexual abuse after a user commented on a photo she posted, "What did Disney do to this girl?! I think she was molested."

Thorne tweeted in response: "Yeah I was. So it wasn't Disney."

She tweeted minutes later, "The world can be a sick place sometimes."

The user had initially asked the question in response to a photo Bella had posted of herself wearing a purple suit, which she captioned, "I would fk this suit if I could."

Is it possible that she just said this for attention? Maybe, but the casting couch concept for children is one that has been fairly well-documented. Many of these child actors and actresses in the Jew run entertainment industry have absolutely been sexually abused. Corey Haim and Corey Feldman come to mind but there are many others. The abuse explains why so many of them turn to alcohol and drugs when they become adults.

This girl Thorne like other Disney child actresses has grown up to be a trashy slut. This behavior often represents a coping mechanism young women use to deal with their sexual abuse as a child.

I've actually seen prostitutes dress more conservatively than the pictures she shares of herself on Twitter. Think I'm kidding?

Look at some of what she has posted over the past few weeks.

Hate to break it to you Bella, but you are not hot as you say you are.

But what do you think guys? A fine example for young girls to look up to isn't she? Whether she understands it or not, she is training younger girls to be whores like her. She even claims to be bisexual which is a classic attention whoring scheme young women have used for awhile now.

Like other skanks, she generously applies the use of makeup to conceal her ugly features.

Instead of acting like a filthy whore for a living, I'd encourage her to reevaluate what she is doing with her life. This could be done by first going into more details about her molestation claims. Many of us know that there's weird stuff happening at Disney, so she should come clean with what she experienced. Disney has been a factory for transforming young relatively normal-looking girls who grow up to become horrible skanks. This can't be happening by accident.

And seriously Bella, quit acting like such a filthy slut. You are 20-years-old, so it isn't too late to change your ways. In the near future, this type of behavior will have you locked in a cage and shackled to a very large rock. You should make the decision while you are still young to do something positive with your life.

Man Arguing with Girlfriend Throws White Knight Interloper Off a Bridge

Eric Striker
Daily Stormer
December 13, 2017

Men in Western countries are taught that women are morally impeccable and above scrutiny. So many dummies gallop to the aid of a fair maiden just because the man they're with raises their voice at them.

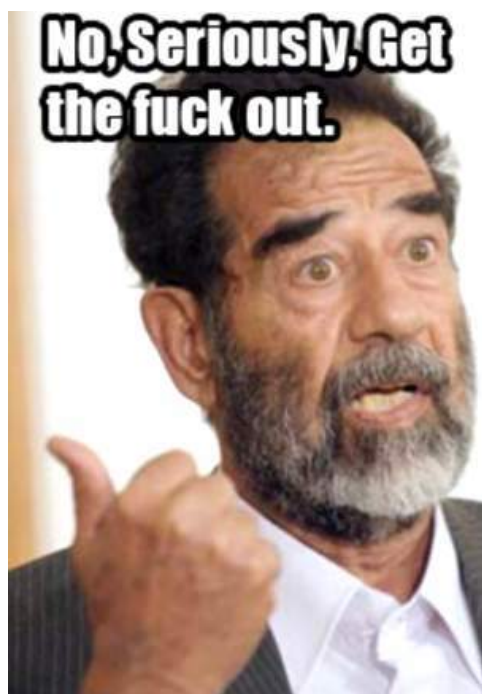

How many times has a girlfriend passive-aggressively chided you because she's on her period or some other stupid reason, only for your saintly patience to give in and finally blow up in a public place?

My response traditionally is to tell her "let's deal with it when we get home," but there are some women who keep pushing it because they are attention whores and want to make a public spectacle.

When that happens, you can usually rely on some cuck swooping in like he's the guardian of Gotham City. They will tell your girl (usually the aggressor) "Are you okay? Do you need the police?"

Some more brazen types will actually get in your face about it. When that happens, you better get ready to spend the night in jail because punching the busy-body is the only solution.

This guy went one step further and threw the interloper off a bridge. Good riddance!

Huffington Post:

A Connecticut man is facing an attempted murder charge after he allegedly threw another man off a bridge during an argument with his girlfriend.

Police arrested 25-year-old Gregory Rottjer on Tuesday in connection with the incident that occurred around 1 a.m. Thanksgiving Day on the bridge connecting the small Connecticut cities of Shelton and Derby.

Rottjer and his girlfriend, 22-year-old Jennifer Hannum, were arguing while walking over the bridge when the victim and his brother asked Hannum if she was OK, according to WFSB-TV.

Police said the two good Samaritans attempted to walk away, but Rottjer and a friend who was at the scene, 27-year-old Matthew Dorso, allegedly started a fight with them.

During the skirmish, Rottjer allegedly threw the 30-year-old victim off the bridge and into the icy Housatonic River, a drop of 45 feet, according to The Hartford Courant.

A rescue crew was called and the victim was saved from drowning by a police officer who jumped into the river and pulled him to shore.

Rottjer, Dorso and Hannum fled the scene, police said.

The victim is still recovering from his injuries, according to NBC Connecticut.

If you see a woman getting violently heckled by a stranger, then sure, intervene.

But if it's a man she knows, there's two things going on: she is having a personal dispute with her significant other and it's not your business, or if you see actual acts of abuse, she likes it.

Women in America get the first and last say on who they get romantically involved with. If a guy is pulling a woman around by her arm and talking to her in an aggressive manner, she is either misbehaving or gets off to it.

So if you see some virtue-signaling faggot get in between you and your woman, demonstrate why you take her to bed and he doesn't.

And if the feminist conditioning inside of you demands you do something about a girl crying as some dude yells at her, you will be risking violence or prison just for her to go home with him anyway.

Finally: Disney Executive Charged with Child Sex Abuse!

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 13, 2017

#Metoo is finally getting to where we wanted it to go with a Disney executive being charged with abusing two young girls—one of them when she was 11.

All of that groping nonsense was fun, but the real destination of this train has always been #Pizzagate-type child-rape and otherwise satanic abuse by a hidden network of satanic kikes.

I thought John Heely was wearing a yarmulke in the above photo, but I think it's actually somehow his hair. There is nothing I can find on whether or not he's Jewish. But Disney is almost entirely Jewish, like every aspect of the media industry, so if he isn't then we're going to see Jews connected to him.

AOL:

A Disney executive has been charged with three felony counts of child sexual abuse.

Jon Heely, 58, is Disney's director of music publishing. He is accused of sexually abusing two underage girls. The first child was fifteen. The second child was 11 when the alleged abuse began, and it continued until she was 15.

Jon Heely, 58, is Disney's director of music publishing. He is accused of sexually abusing two underage girls. The first child was fifteen. The second child was 11 when the alleged abuse began, and it continued until she was 15.

Specific dates are not yet known, but Variety reports that the incidents occurred about ten years ago.

Heely has been with Disney since 1981, where he oversees licensing for Disney's massive music catalog. The company suspended him without pay on Friday after learning of the allegations.

He has not publicly responded to the allegations. His Twitter bio says he loves "Disney concerts and living to glorify God in all things."

He's the first. Now comes a Disney girl (and boy, I would imagine) #Metoo spin-off, in which kikes are going to get rekt like nothing you've ever seen before.

Brittany Spears, Miley Cyrus, Selena Gomez—all of these whores out there who have been pushed on little girls to create an extreme, deranged hyper-sexualized whore culture started out as Disney girls, where they were—one has to assume—sexually abused as children by Jews.

Just watch this video. This is the transformation they want for all little shiksas.

#MeToo Scandal Strikes the Negro Felon League

Lee Rogers
Daily Stormer
December 13, 2017

They were sexually harassing a granny! lol

#MeToo is in the process of destroying every aspect of the existing Jew establishment. What's great about it is that they can't scale it back without looking like hypocrites. They've jammed feminism down everyone's throats for so long that it is impossible for them to go against it.

Now we see the Negro Felon League having its own #MeToo problem. Some old skank named Jami Cantor has just accused a number of former players (mostly niggers) turned analysts and a Jew executive of sexually harassing her.

USA Today:

Hall of Fame running back Marshall Faulk was among three NFL Network analysts suspended Monday night in response to a new filing in a lawsuit brought by former wardrobe stylist,

Faulk, Ike Taylor and Heath Evans will remain suspended "pending an investigation into these allegations," NFL Network said in a statement to USA TODAY Sports. Jami Cantor, who worked at the network for a decade, described a series of sexually inappropriate encounters with the three along with several former NFL players and others who have worked for NFL Network, including Donovan McNabb, Warren Sapp and Eric Davis.

"I think Jami Cantor is a very courageous woman, as all women coming forward in this #metoo movement," Laura Horton, Cantor's lawyer, told USA TODAY Sports in a phone interview. "All these women are courageous. These women have had the courage to step up knowing that, in the past at least, it would be a 'he said, she said' situation until we've had this national conversation."

Courageous? Yes! lol

Cantor alleged that Faulk, who has been one of the NFL Network's top analysts for about a decade, greeted her by "fondling her breasts and groping her behind," according to the complaint. Faulk "became more aggressive," including one instance where he allegedly invited Cantor to his hotel room where she witnessed him expose his genitals and made sexually suggestive remarks.

Cantor also claimed Taylor forwarded "sexually inappropriate" pictures of himself, according to the filing. Horton said that she has a copy of a video sent to Cantor that allegedly shows Taylor exposing himself in the shower.

McNabb, who is currently an ESPN employee, made sexually inappropriate comments via text, asking about a specific sex act multiple times.

ESPN did not immediately respond to a message left by USA TODAY Sports on the allegations made against McNabb. Representatives for Evans, Faulk and Taylor did not immediately reply to requests for comment Tuesday morning.

The amended complaint also alleged a top executive at Bill Simmons' media group, Eric Weinberger, of inappropriate conduct. Weinberger, who worked at NFL Network as an executive producer before joining Simmons at The Ringer, allegedly “pressed his crotch against” Cantor and asked her to “touch it,” according to the filing. He also allegedly made several sexually suggestive comments.

The NFL needs to immediately fire every single individual this old slut has accused of wrongdoing. That includes all of those former monkey ball players and that Jew executive Weinberger. They’re all guilty.

There are some that will claim that we should wait and see what the facts are before passing judgment. I totally disagree with this approach. Waiting until all the facts come out would be sexist. That would imply that this old whore is lying. It is sexist to believe that a woman would ever lie for personal gain.

The NFL must show that they are not sexist by immediately terminating the employment of everyone who this skank accused of doing bad things. They should also pay her millions upon millions of dollars in compensation.

Verizon Signs $2.5 Billion Deal to Stream Monkey Ball Games

Lee Rogers

Daily Stormer

December 12, 2017

Verizon might need to lobby the government to give free smart phones to niggers. If they don't, it is doubtful that this deal will work out for them.

Verizon will probably regret signing this deal. They've inked a contract with the Negro Felon League allowing them to stream the league's games on their sites.

Yahoo Finance:

Verizon on Monday announced it has signed an unprecedented deal with the NFL that allows it to live-stream all in-market and national NFL games on Verizon-owned media properties like Yahoo Sports and AOL, on mobile phones—regardless of mobile network.

Previously, Verizon live-streamed NFL games only to Verizon subscribers, over the NFL Mobile app. Now football fans can stream games using the smartphone apps of Verizon media properties, for free, whether their mobile carrier is Verizon or not.

The games Verizon can stream will include national preseason games, in-market regular season games, playoffs, and the Super Bowl.

The new deal lasts through 2022 and begins in January 2018, in time to stream this season's NFL playoffs on Yahoo, Yahoo Sports, Verizon's video platform go90, and the NFL Mobile app.

While the specifics of the deal haven't been disclosed, it is reportedly a $500 million deal over 5 years. That's $2.5 billion over that period of time. That's a ton of money to spend on a severely tarnished brand.

Ratings and attendance are down across the league as a result of the national anthem protests. People are choosing to spend their time and money elsewhere. And why wouldn't they? The ape players insulted a large portion of their fan base by disrespecting the country. The damage has been done. They've lost millions of fans as a result of this. Many of us get more entertainment out of mocking the league than watching any of the games.

Verizon is applying the world that existed 10 years ago to the present day. Their only hope in making something out of this deal is if they can find enough niggers who have both the money and the IQ to buy and use a smart phone. They'll be the only one's watching any of the league's games if this trend continues. That's of course assuming that they have the intelligence to use a smart phone to begin with.

Johnny Depp's Battered Wife Comes Out to Condemn Globo-Femshit JK Rowling for Defending Wife-Beating!

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 12, 2017

JK Rowling is among the only top feminists willing to admit that "whores deserve to be held to the ancient code of talk shit and get hit"

As we reported here on the Daily Stormer, femo-globo-femshitist and Trump-attacker JK Rowling recently defending Johnny Depp for beating the living shit out of his stupid whore wife.

And we were all like "YOU KNOW WHAT THEY SAY ABOUT BROKEN CLOCKS LOL."

But now, the battered wife who Rowling blamed for her own abuse is coming out to attack Rowling!

Popsugar:

Amber Heard wants to set the record straight. The Justice League actress took to Instagram to share her thoughts on J.K. Rowling's defense of casting Johnny Depp in the upcoming Fantastic Beasts and Where to Find Them franchise. Johnny's role has been questioned by fans who feel the actor should not star in the upcoming films due to his alleged history of domestic abuse.

According to Amber, J.K. Rowling and Warner Bros. misrepresented the joint statement she and Johnny released back in 2016 following their split. "To pick and choose certain lines and quote them out of context, is just not right," she wrote along with a photo of the full statement for fans to read for themselves. "Women, continue to stand up and stay strong. Love, Amber," she concluded.

Amber and Johnny were first linked back in 2012 and tied the knot in a secret ceremony in February 2015. In May 2016, Amber filed for a divorce citing "irreconcilable differences." Shortly after the news broke of their separation, Amber filed a domestic violence restraining order against Johnny accompanied by graphic photos of her bruised face.

We salute JK Rowling for pointing out that Amber Heard deserves to have the shit beat out of her by men—but that doesn't absolve her.

Hey slut, looking GOOD! But you know what would look BETTER?

Johnny does!

There we go.
Thanks, Johnny.

The Daily Stormer is hereby calling for the following things to happen in response to this horrifying debacle:

- Johnny Depp to be permanently banned from movies for beating his wife
- JK Rowling to have the same punishment for defending wife-beating and then being femishamed by the beaten
- For Johnny Depp to violate his restraining order and go beat the shit out of Amber Heard for destroying his career and just generally being a horrible skank
- Amber Heard needs to resign for destroying the career of a key feminist advocate, JK Rowling

In other words: we are calling for justice.

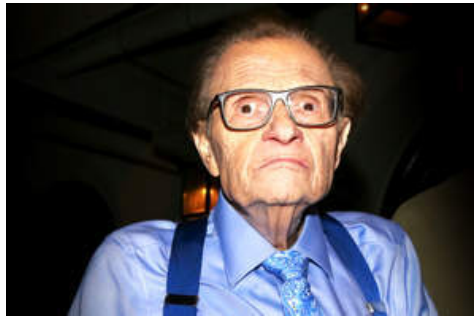

The only person who really deserves support here is JK Rowling, as she is the only person who supports women being beaten and isn't Johnny Depp.

Therefore, JK Rowling is hereby declared the official feminist advocate of the Alt-Right.

#MeToo: Double-Tapping Jew Larry King Accused of Gropping a Woman's Ass Twice!

December 11, 2017

Who would have ever guessed that the old Jew Larry King would be a groper of ass. There is absolutely nothing creepy looking about him. Perfectly normal looking dude!

#MeToo is one of the greatest things of the year. It is the gift that keeps on giving. All of these old skanks are coming out of nowhere and accusing various establishment figures of sexually assaulting them. It has already resulted in many of our political enemies having their lives and careers destroyed.

Now we see that the old Jew Larry King is being accused of grabbing a woman's ass back in the mid-2000s. And not just once but twice!

Daily Mail:

Terry Richard, an ex-wife of singer Eddie Fisher, claims that former CNN talk show host Larry King groped her at a public event on two separate occasions, she told DailyMailTV in an exclusive interview.

Richard says the groping incidents took place in 2005 and again in 2006, both at a baseball awards dinner at Universal Studios, in Los Angeles.

The 63-year-old Richard said in the first incident, while posing together for a photo, King slid his hand down her backless dress and rested his fingers in between her butt cheeks.

The photo, during which King allegedly groped Richard for the first time, was featured in a local newspaper and the clipping was obtained by DailyMailTV.

Richard claims the second time was also while they were taking a photo together, and King, now 84, squeezed her butt so hard that it left a large bruise.

Speaking from her home in Los Angeles, Richard said: "Larry King is a groper. He groped me twice. He gets a thrill doing this in front of the camera, knowing I couldn't do anything."

Responding to a comment request from DailyMailTV, King's lawyer said Richard's assertion is false. "Mr. King did no such thing then or ever."

Wow! King squeezed her ass so hard that it left a large bruise!

King's lawyer is claiming that he did not do these things, but in the age of #MeToo any denials don't matter. The only thing that matters is the accusation of these sluts. So long as a slut accuses you of sexually assaulting them than you must have your life ruined. That's literally the standard that's been set.

So hate to break the news to you Larry, but your entire media career means nothing. You are a groper of ass and will be remembered throughout history as a perverted sex abuser who groped ass.

Maybe you and your fellow Jews should have rethought this whole feminism thing!

#MeTooism: First Woman Accused of Lesbo Grope!

Adrian Sol
Daily Stormer

December 11, 2017

I'm...I'm scared to put that thing through the makeup remover app.

In spite of feeble and meaningless attempts to rein the movement in, the scope and damage of #MeTooism is expanding at a rapid pace.

Now we're seeing the first woman (Laura Loomer not withstanding) being accused of "rape" by some other dyke. This marks the point where women are now valid targets as well.

It won't take long before men can accuse women of sexual harassment and get them fired.

Fox News:

Watch the latest video at video.foxnews.com

Former "The Voice" star Melanie Martinez is speaking out for a second time to deny allegations of rape from her former friend.

Martinez took to Twitter on Saturday to address the ongoing situation with fellow aspiring singer, Timothy Heller. Heller previously came forward on social media to allege that Martinez had performed sexual acts on her after two nights of her definitively saying "no" to her advances. Martinez doubled down on her denial of those allegations, and this time thanked fans for believing her side of the story.

"I understand how hard it could be to see my side of the story, considering no one with a heart would want to invalidate anyone speaking up about this topic," she wrote on Twitter. "I want to thank my fans who took the time to research the timeline, analyze past Instagram photos, and question the story being told, which reveal her false statements. I trust so many people in my life who took advantage of that trust for their own personal gain. Please know that my intentions with everything that I do in my life are always pure and I would never be intimate with someone without their absolute consent."

— CRYBABY (@MelanieLBBH) December 10, 2017

So what happens when you have two women crying for pity, with one being accused of rape and the other being an alleged lesbo rape victim?

In terms of progressive stack mechanics, their level of oppression is roughly equal. So it comes down to which of them can muster the greatest sympathy. In these cases, it usually comes down to which of them is cuter.

Rape victim: weird hair and makeup, horse face. 2/10.

Rapist: Psycho eyes, clown makeup and hair, chinky features. 1/10.

It's close, but I'd say the alleged victim edges out in the cuteness department. The Martinez dyke is probably going to have to be fired and disgraced, as per #MeToo protocol.

This is excellent news. We need this MeToo movement to target as many of our enemies as possible. It started with powerful Jewish men, but quickly grew to include homos, Blacks, SJW's, Hollywood liberals, and now lesbians.

Now we just need college students whining that their gender studies and sociology professors groped them, and the entire Jewish-liberal system will fall apart.

Negro Felon League Week 14: Empty Seat Circus Continues

Lee Rogers
Daily Stormer

December 11, 2017

The circus known as the Negro Felon League is now in its 14th week of the season. As expected, the league continues to be plagued with empty seats. This has become a permanent phenomenon and it is not going away anytime soon. The national anthem protests by these monkey ball players have completely ruined the league's brand.

Tickets were being sold for as low as $5 a seat as was the case for the Bills versus Colts game.

Here are just a few of the many images documenting the half empty stadiums seen throughout the league.

In what was arguably the top highlight of the league this week, an overgrown football ape named Quinton Jefferson tried to fight fans who threw beer at him. The incident occurred after he was ejected from the game while leaving the field.

Video Link

Questions about the league's concussion protocol arose when Texans quarterback Tom Savage appeared to suffer a seizure following a hit. While what exactly happened to him is up for debate, it brought into question the league's ability to protect the players. The subject has been a hugely controversial topic over the past several years. Several former players have committed suicide as a result of concussions they suffered while playing the game.

Video Link

Point blank, it was another horrible week for the league and it will only get worse. The boomer aged team owners recently extended league commissioner Roger Goodell's contract. They even agreed to pay him the outrageous sum of $200 million. Why they would agree to pay him such an obscene amount of money is difficult to comprehend. This is the man who has overseen the ruination of the league's brand. Even the New York Post wrote a piece noting how dumb this was.

It sure is fun to document the league's continued cultural decline though. I think we all look forward to the day when these team owners and the league itself is forced into bankruptcy.

Ooops: Shitlibs Starting to Realize the Alt-Right Loves #MeTooism

Adrian Sol

Daily Stormer

December 11, 2017

Is it a paradox to endorse both the groping of women and the firing of Jews who do it?

The mainstream left has been running with the #MeToo narrative with complete abandon, seemingly without understanding what they were getting themselves into.

But now that we're more than a month into it, some of these people are starting to realize just how self-destructive this movement is going to be for their own political goals.

Well, I've got some bad news for you: it's impossible to stop this.

Yes, everyone thought of Lauren Southern when they first saw the headline.

The Guardian:

That was fast. In this #MeToo moment, feminism has been coopted by both people who don't understand it and by people who oppose it. Worse: it's now being used against people who are feminists and allies.

Obviously.

You think macho chads are the kind of people who'd get ratted out for a little groping? Women are only offended when beta cucks touch them. And who says beta cuck, says male feminist "ally."

Outside of Jews, these are the types who are going to get the axe under the MeToo regime.

It's already been announced loud and clear that chads beating up women will suffer no professional consequences for their actions.

The most recent example comes from Mike Cernovich, the alt-right conspiracy theorist who led the way on the Pizzagate hoax that claimed senior Democrats were involved in a child abuse ring in the basement of a Washington DC restaurant. That whole ruckus should've given MSNBC pause when he went after one of their regulars.

Cernovich recently orchestrated a campaign to pressure MSNBC to fire contributor Sam Seder over a joke he made in a 2009 tweet. The network did fire him—only to then rehire him after a backlash against their decision.

I don't like Thernovitch, but you gotta hand it to him: that was funny.

If you have ever been exposed to jokes before, you'd know the tweet was sarcastic. It mocked people whose defense of Roman Polanski from child rape accusations rested on the fact that he was a "great artist". It was an anti-rapist rape joke, like the kind that Amy Poehler, Tina Fey, Amy Schumer and even Jay Leno later told about Bill Cosby.

Rape joke, or anti-rape joke? Who can tell the difference? Better stay safe and just fire everyone.

We're now at the point where people are being canned for jokes, by people who don't get the jokes, don't get feminism, don't get that maybe there should be some proportion in this thing, and don't get that right-wing men with a public record of misogyny might not be your best guides through all this.

Even if Seder's joke was bad and made in the wrong spirit (which, just to be clear, it wasn't), if we're going to fire everyone who has made a non-feminist remark we're pretty much going to clear all the offices everywhere of almost every man and quite a few women.

KEK!

Wasn't that always the point of feminism? It certainly is in the current year.

Maybe this bitch is starting to realize that now most of these “offices” are occupied by commie bugmen, Jews and SJW’s, and that maybe this isn’t exactly the smartest idea anymore.

Consider the experience of writer Ijeoma Oluo, who last week said that USA Today asked her to write a piece arguing a feminist position against due process.

She says an editor there told her, “[...] They want a piece that says that you don’t believe in due process and that if a few innocent men lose their jobs it’s worth it to protect women. Is that something you can do?”

They were asking her to say feminists are happy to harm individual men for the good of the cause, and not interested in distinguishing innocence from guilt. She refused. That’s not who she is and not who feminists are.

This is nuts, but not surprising in any way. Well, the surprising part is that she refused—I guess even a feminist journalist must realize how bad this would look, to come right out with this “ABOLISH JUSTICE SO WE CAN FINALLY HAVE EQUALITY” ideology.

If we suspended all due process, it would be so easy to get rid of these oppressors...

John Conyers is accused by multiple women, some of whom were his employees, of sexual harassment.

He rightly resigned. Still, I’m curious why Conyers’s accusations surfaced when they did and if they’re supposed to somehow neutralize Moore’s.

Basically, this whole article is “we can’t let #MeTooism be a tool of the right—we have to make it a tool of the left instead!”

It’s so transparent that even the Guardian’s readers see right through it.

The fact is that no one can “harness” this for their political agenda. It’s simply naturally destructive to the left, since it exposes their own agents to the same kind of scrutiny that the right has always been under.

And that’s not something they can withstand.

Neutral Apocalypse: The Sky is Falling on Ur Tubes

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 14, 2017

Game over.

Net neutrality was repealed today.

RT:

The Federal Communications Commission has voted to repeal the rules classifying internet providers as public utilities. Critics say this will lead to pay-for-play behavior by providers, while FCC chair argues it will benefit consumers.

The Republican-majority commission voted along party lines on Thursday to repeal the 2015 rules adopted under the Obama administration, which classified ISPs as public utilities under a 1934 law intended to regulate telephone service. FCC chairman Ajit Pai has argued that these “heavy-handed” regulations throttled investment and innovation and harmed poor and rural consumers.

“This is not Thunderdome. The FCC is not killing the internet,” Commissioner Brendan Carr said at the hearing on Thursday. “We are not relying on market forces alone. We are not giving ISPs free reign to dictate your online experience.”

“I dissent from the contempt this agency has shown our citizens in pursuing this path today,” said Commissioner Jessica Rosenworcel, adding the repeal puts the FCC “on the wrong side of history.”

According to the Jewish media, the end of net neutrality is literally the apocalypse, brought about by Donald Trump because he is evil.

Specifically for the sole reason of being evil. And insane.

Saying in this situation that he is evil for siding with mega-corporations makes no sense, as it is all even bigger corporations that he is standing up against.

Basically, they lost the censorship scare ground when they kicked me offline. They can no longer use that. And that was their main thing: “Comcast will censor you.”

So I am reading articles saying things like: “oppressed minorities will have a more difficult time accessing needed healthcare information.”

Actual headline from a Jew. The goyim will forget about the “free and open internet” thing—now it’s about stealing tubes from poor people.

They are also saying your computer will be hacked because of this act by the evil madman Trump.

Their main argument now is that Netflix is going to charge you more because Comcast is going to start charging them more. Neither of those companies have said anything to indicate this is true. I would not be surprised if Netflix upped fees regardless, just to prove a point.

Your cuck porn just got $2 a month more expensive. Might as well off yourselves.

Of course, that could then be proven and viewed as gouging.

In the long run, killing NN means more investment into infrastructure, and thus a faster internet.

The actual situation is that Silicon Valley was engaged in rent-seeking, getting the government to force Comcast to give them unlimited free internet, and they have now been blown the fuck out. The FCC ruling was largely based on what they did to The Daily Stormer. Because the argument for net neutrality was that Comcast would censor people, and then Google, GoDaddy, Tucows, Cloudflare—not to mention PayPal, Facebook, Twitter and YouTube—all censored me and others.

They have attempted to act in unison to exile me from the internet. They have done so with the aid of the entire system of activist journalists (who view this site both as a political opponent and a business competitor), along with a network of criminals.

The FCC said “your argument that you are against censorship is now void.”

They keep talking about how horrible the internet was in 2015, before NN was passed—however, I distinctly remember having no problems in before 2015.

BREAKING VIDEO: Moment FCC Chairman @AjitPaiFCC as he advises evacuation. Bomb squad with K9s on the scene. pic.twitter.com/IUFbw8gD97

— The Anon Journal (@TheAnon-Journal) December 14, 2017

Everything they're saying is nonsense, which is why they cannot come up with a coherent argument.

The reason they are making so much noise about it is:

a) because it is taking power away from Silicon Valley, and they want power consolidated there because it is extremely politically liberal and will censor people, and

b) because most journalists writing about it don't know what it is, and thus are going into a confused rage as they struggle to explain something they understand nothing about.

But I can tell you: it is only good for us.

This is the first step in a drastic reshaping of internet, making it free as it was before Obama's second term.

As long as you can theoretically afford up to $2 more a month for your Netflix, you've got nothing to worry about.

After Being Named Official Feminist of the Alt-Right, Wife-Beating Advocate J.K. Rowling Promoting Daily Stormer!

The Daily Stormer style guide: how Nazis use "naughty" humour to recruit. <https://t.co/FlzVLoZCmV>

— J.K. Rowling (@jk_rowling) December 13, 2017

The WaPo last month ran a story about how a brand enters a precarious situation when officially endorsed by the Daily Stormer as the official something of the Alt-Right: do you disavow the endorsement and risk alienating Nazis in order to placate anti-Nazis, or do you run with it?

While some assholes such as the CEO of Papa John's think it is a good idea to back away from the Alt-Right after an endorsement (which he did after our endorsement of his pizza as The Official Pizza of the Alt-Right), Harry Potter author J.K. Rowling is made of smarter stuff.

On Tuesday, I officially named this fine lady The Official Feminist Advocate of the Alt-Right, due to her aggressive support of wife-beating. Instead of backing away and condemning this endorsement, she is promoting our materials on Twitter.

I hope to soon have her on my podcast to discuss why getting massaged by Harvey Weinstein is bad, but getting black eyes from Johnny Depp is good, as well as the psychology behind why women not only deserve to get the shit beat out of them, but why they also enjoy it.

Does Aryan Master Rowling only promote niggerism to troll niggers? I will ask her when she appears on my podcast to discuss why women deserve to get beaten bloody.

Now, just imagine: what would have happened to Papa John's stock if instead of condemning Nazism, Papa John had come out and said, "this Anglin guy has a good head on his shoulders—these niggers need to shut their monkey mouths and throw the damned balls around until they can learn to evolve out of the primitive state?"

Rowling became the best selling author of all time not because she is an especially good writer, but because she is an extraordinarily good marketer. Others need to take a cue from her on how to deal with my endorsements in the future, using them to promote their brands rather than harm them.

UPDATE: RIGGED!!! ELECTION STOLEN FROM ROY MOORE, EVIDENCE BEING DESTROYED!

Daily Stormer
 December 13, 2017

THIS ELECTION WAS RIGGED AGAINST ROY MOORE, AND THESE VILE CRIMINALS ARE DESTROYING THE EVIDENCE!

TechCrunch: Following an eleventh-hour order instructing voting officials in Alabama to keep the digital ballots generated in Tuesday's controversial Senate election, the state's Supreme Court has issued a stay to block that decision.

The order to preserve the records was issued by the Montgomery County Circuit Court on Monday afternoon—less than 24 hours before voting was set to begin—and the stay that will effectively nullify that order was issued late Monday night.

"All counties employing digital ballot scanners in the Dec. 12, 2017 election are hereby ordered to set their voting machines to save all processed images in order to preserve all digital ballot images," the Montgomery County order stated.

Alabama Secretary of State John Merrill and Alabama state election administrator Ed Packard are named as defendants in the suit, which was brought before the Montgomery County court by four Alabama voters. Initially filed on Thursday of last week, it cited the state-level election system hacking that the Department of Homeland Security notified 21 states including Alabama of this September in arguing that the state should hold onto the digital record of votes for at least six months rather than destroy them.

weev, one of the world's foremost experts on all things digital, had this to say:

...it's hard drives? Why destroy them? They cost NOTHING to keep...like five hundred dollars on Amazon would store all of this for a year. And it all needs to go right now in the middle of the night? Only possible answer is, it is rigged. They've stolen it, and they want to hide evidence of their crimes.

10:35 PM:

Okay, Anglin here. I was asleep. The AP has called it for Jones. Others are following suit. Politico:

Democrat Doug Jones defeated Roy Moore in a special election earthquake Tuesday, flipping an Alabama Senate seat to Democrats for the first time in a quarter-century and delivering a blow to President Donald Trump.

The Associated Press called the race for Jones, a former U.S. attorney, who had 49.5 percent of the vote to Moore's 48.9 percent with 91 percent of precincts reporting.

Jones' win—after Moore was accused of sexual assault and other misconduct by multiple women in November—will shrink Republicans' already tenuous Senate majority to 51-49, just as the party approaches final consideration of its sweeping tax bill and prepares for the 2018 midterm elections in a difficult political environment.

The Anglin Fix: Lauren Southern's Single Career Option (Excluding Suicide)

Andrew Anglin
Daily Stormer
December 11, 2017

On December 3rd, Tradthot Lauren Southern casually admitted to fucking a nigger.

This is 22-year-old girl who is a 6 on the 6-10 scale (now that the Stormer trolled her into losing weight), who preaches that women should be traditional and get married and raise kids as subservient wives, while traveling the world on a fuck-tour and while she femsplains on social media about the direction of the Alt-Right and pulling a 6-figure salary in donations (these are personal donations to her as an individual; she has virtually no overhead beyond an apartment and plane tickets and I would assume while in Europe she is crashing at the houses of the guys she's fucking so doesn't need a hostel).

Following the admission, which was accidental apparently (???), weev wrote an article on the 4th in the midst of an already developing Groyper bullycide.

The situation opened up an entire discussion about "women in the movement" that I am very interested in, and have been engaged in. I was all caught-up in this reverse #metoo campaign, and yet did not wonder: how is Southern responding?

Sunday night, I was wondering how many followers she had on Twitter, and visited to check (it's 323k), and found that she hadn't tweeted since the 6th.

So I publicly proved my crisis management skills on Gab.

Of course, the immediate piece of advice I would have given her if she had called me immediately would be this:

Go on there and say "loooool, I don't mean I literally dated him—we just did a couple cosplay photoshoots together."

But that isn't something I would have told her for $500 or shared publicly before she confirmed it—I wanted to see her crash and burn because I think she and other tradthots are harming the Alt-Right.

But my 28 minutes crisis management resolution was incredible. Even this guy on Gab that hates me admitted it.

I know I post a lot of memes about being a scientific genius or a manlet ladies man or whatever else, but the meme that I am a legit crisis management guy is not a meme, it is a real thing.

Rapid problem-solving is a skill which I possess—which is basically the coolest possible skill that anyone can have.

You call me up and it's like this.
Video Link

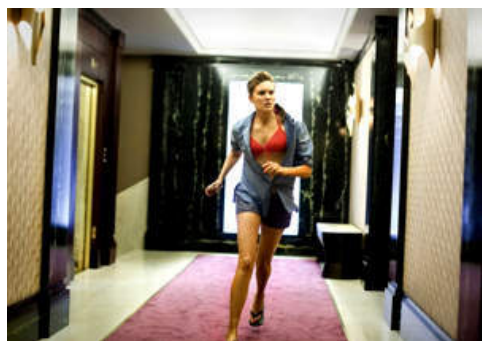

I mean the tone and telling you about my set of skills, I don't threaten to kill you.

So I guess it's more like Winston Wolf.

Video Link

But IMO, Luc Besson > Quentin Tarantino.

Also: I went to elementary school with the chick in Taken. Fun fact.

She goes by Maggie Grace but her name was Maggie Demming and her family owned a small diamond store (I do not believe she is Jewish). My father wanted to buy her family home—a 200 year old saltbox recognized by the Ohio Historical Society as the first of such homes in the city—when they moved to a different neighborhood, but my mother insisted there would be too much traffic sound due to the location near a main intersection. My dad's argument was "YEAH BUT THERE'S A FIREPLACE IN EVERY ROOM."

When that movie came out it was a funny thing. Though it is much funnier now that I am more famous than she.

Her career fizzled out completely after leaving Lost (forcing them to kill off her character, which I assume is considered bad form in the biz) and turning down a role as Kitty Pride in one of the X-Men films.

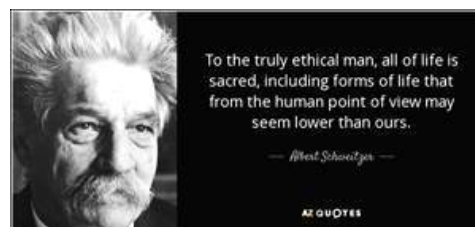

Jeez. I would think that if your career gets to the point where you're near thirty and have starred in a movie on the scale of Taken and you're at the point where you're considering a movie called "Malice in Wonderland," it's probably time to go join the family diamond business.

Funny The Atlantic didn't find that juicy bit or novelty information, though was somehow able to allegedly find a Jewish pre-school teacher I had who fears I am planning to kill her.

Point being: Lauren has to be 2 steps away from suicide right now. And I just gave her a way out. She has no choice but to take it. Or kill herself.

And you know. I joke about people who kill themselves, and joke about how people should kill themselves, and so on, but you know, if someone did actually commit suicide because of a bullying campaign that I was a part of, it would really be hard for me to deal with. Yes, even if it was a coalburning whore who used the Alt-Right as her personal attention and cash farm while actively sewing discord. Because life—all life—matters.

lol I'm joking.

I don't give a shit if she kills herself.

However, the narrative of her going mainstream as a victim who got bullied by Nazis and realized that Nazis are actually the same as leftists because they put race above ideology is much more beneficial to us in the long run. Having her be a public figure trying to push a politically correct neo-DR3 (democrats r the real racists) narrative to millennials would be absolutely brilliant—and we'd be planted right there in the back story.

I am virtually 100% certain that this can work. I mean, they will put her on the cover of the New Yorker (or The Atlantic, lel) —that she can turn that into a career, I don't know. That would be on her. But she'd be given a chance because she's been objectively successful at selling right-wing media to millennials (the people making the decisions wouldn't understand that it's largely due to the lack of competition for straight-up diaper-fetish cosplay camwhoring in far-right circles).

Fox News might be a far shot, but she can in the worst case scenario keep her donations stocked by shifting it left by talking about the horrifying realization she had that Nazis are just like leftists.

They would eat that up. It is something that is completely impossible to refuse. And they are already emailing her for comment. The Jewish media has written a string of articles about this situation— "WHAW CAN YOU BELIEVE NAZIS ARE SEXISTS JEEZ."

And she isn't giving them anything—instead she's disappeared from the internet after having claimed that all of the people calling her a “nigger fucking whore” on Twitter were secret leftist plants part of a Soros-backed Nazbol conspiracy to destroy the Groyper movement. Telling her beta orbiters that only Open Society shills care if she fucks niggers as they screech about her doing that is objectively the worst potential move other than disappearing and she's done both.

Ghosting always, always, always makes you look guilty.

Any celebrity knows this. Or rather, they have a person who they can call—or rather who their agent can call—who can get them to go out in public and deal with the issue in a managed way.

Yeah, sure. She has a 3rd of a million Twitter followers, so even if 10-15% of those thirsty boys remain un-crushed by the revelations that she was blacked, she's gonna have an army saying “OH PLEASE LAUREN M'LADY, COME BACK!!!”

Like the now-infamous Shane O Mac tweet.

But even most autistics will not go along with that. The math here is way against her. She has huge numbers on multiple social media platforms, and that is a power that can be used to pivot into a new position of power.

But that would have to be done while there is still momentum in her favor and media interest.

The clock is ticking, Laurenchan.

Your ability to make a move and secure your career is drying up like your ovaries.

Only way faster.
