Interesting images, and while this may be some Google anomaly in the Jacksonville street view if you go further up South street the anomaly is still visible.

In several of the images telephone lines appear to cross in front of the object. I have tried to capture this on site at:

These are merely light refractions on the camera dome mounted to the roof of the car. They are very common on Google Street View images.

Interesting. Did you see some explanation somewhere or reach that conclusion through information you had at hand? It would also be interesting to really know how "common" this was.

The resemblance to the Adamski UFO image of the 50's makes me wonder if these were inserted, and it would also note that this image was a featured story on CNN's web site all day Sunday.

There was no mention of this being seen before, and I would think that Google would have explanations at the ready just for the publicity.

Hi Joe,

I'm almost 100% positive this is a lens flare. Note the visibility of the Sun and identical cameras are probably used around the country.

Best,

Viktor

I recommend the following individual, Edgar Fouche, as a solid source for information relating to native triangular aircraft technology.

Ed is legitimately credentialed, explicitly so, and has never varied in the slightest with respect to what he states. You can also view his video lecture presentation, as well as download his book Alien Rapture, both at this same link for free:

>I'm almost 100% positive this is a lens flare. Note the visibility of the

I believe these are lens flares. Since some appear to be a classic UFO/saucer - I guess one can say they are an example of Pareidolia - see:

<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Pareidolia> discussed here in past UFO UpDates.

[See: <http://tinyurl.com/9pk2jqw> -- ebk]

During 2010, one of my group's investigators and I checked out a whole bunch of GoogleEarth Streetview images and found many similar saucers and domes.

They're always light-colored though the color did vary, and could usually be correlated with the position of the sun.

I've seen that color shown in the photo. I saw some from my own home street in several nearby shots but, crucially, with the views facing slightly different directions, so that an actual object being responsible was extremely unlikely, since the shots appear to be taken in sequence just seconds - or at most tens of seconds - apart.

My understanding is they are caused by the camera dome through which a roof-mounted camera is shooting, as Steven Kaeser wrote earlier.

Naturally, our investigator first found these things when looking for a useful ground-level view of a spot where a UFO sighting had occurred!

NASA's Deep-Space Outpost Submission

From: Don Ledger <dledger.nul>
Date: Tue, 2 Oct 2012 15:22:29 -0300
Archived: Tue, 02 Oct 2012 17:54:12 -0400
Subject: NASA's Deep-Space Outpost Submission

Considering LEO and the ISS is bracketed in a band about 150 to 300NM above the Earth this would be major step toward deep-space. Not holding my breath, though.

Don Ledger

From: Aero News Network
NASA Planning Deep-Space Outpost

<http://www.aero-news.net/index.cfm>

Would Orbit Earth At 277,000 Miles

NASA has a plan on the drawing board that would establish an outpost some 277,000 miles from the Earth, according to documents obtained by a Florida newspaper. The space station would maintain an orbit beyond that of the moon, and be a "staging area" for potential Lunar and Martian missions.

According to an enterprise report in the Orlando Sentinel, the agency thinks that the outpost could be built at least in part with leftover parts from the ISS about 38,000 miles beyond the moon. The orbit was chosen because it represents an "equilibrium" point that would allow the station to stay in orbit with minimal power. The orbit is called the "Earth-Moon Lagrange Point 2."

NASA administrator Charles Bolden reportedly briefed the White House on the plan earlier this month. There is no indication of the level of support that may be coming from the Obama administration.

The outpost would be built in a series of missions using the SLS and Orion spacecraft currently in development. Such a program would give the Orion, designed as a follow-on to the space shuttle, a more immediate purpose.

But of course, cost is always the issue with NASA. Such a program would likely cost billions of dollars, and even congressional proponents of the agency say the money is "going to get tighter". Astronaut safety is also a major consideration. At that distance, anyone on board the station would be subjected to high levels of solar and other radiation, and it would be a long way to get home should something go wrong.

The Other Side Of Truth Book Release

From: Paul Kimball <paulkimball.nul>
Date: Fri, 5 Oct 2012 09:14:27 -0300
Archived: Fri, 05 Oct 2012 19:11:15 -0400
Subject: The Other Side Of Truth Book Release

Listers,

In the "scratch something else off my bucket list" file, my book The Other Side of Truth has been published and is now available for purchase should anyone feel so inclined.

Here's the blurb:

"In The Other Side of Truth, filmmaker Paul Kimball crosses the Rubicon of the imagination to explore the idea that what we call the 'paranormal' is actually a form of artistic expression created by an advanced non-human intelligence to inspire us to think about who we are, where we have been, and where we are going. Using his own journey of discovery as the starting point, Kimball presents the 'other side of truth' - the world not as we have been told it is, but as we are being encouraged to imagine that it could become."

Or, as I wrote, with tongue firmly planted in cheek on my Facebook page, "I'm thinking of billing the book as follows: 'A self-proclaimed agnostic dilettante filmmaker with pretensions to be a socialist revolutionary writes a book about God under the aegis of discussing the paranormal, and without ever really mentioning God.'"

My more evangelical relatives were most amused.

Anyway, it will be appearing at the main Amazon sites in 5 to 7 days, but it's already at their CreateSpace store:

<https://www.createspace.com/3970567>

(Un)reasonably priced at USD $15.95. In 2013, e-book versions will be available through Redstar's UK partners, and you'll also be able to find it sometime before the end of the year at bricks & mortar bookstores, or at least order it from them.

Thanks to Errol, by the way, who was kind enough to have a look at an advance copy and offer the following:

"=93It=92s a clich=E9, but Paul Kimball=92s The Other Side Of Truth is a =91must read=92 for the choir, the seekers and the doubters. His honest curiosity and skepticism -- demonstrated over the years on my e-mail list and radio program -- combine, presenting his findings in an intriguing and easy read.=94

California Couple Records Video Of Daylight Boomerang UFO
By Roger Marsh

[Photographs]

Two California witnesses at Burbank report watching and photographing a boomerang-shaped object that crossed the sky about 4:55 p.m. on October 5, 2012, according to testimony from the Mutual UFO Network (MUFON) witness reporting database.

The couple was on a rooftop area that faces toward the mountains north of Burbank when the object was first seen.

"I saw this white object in the sky," the reporting witness stated. "It was very apparent. At first I thought maybe an airplane, but it didn't appear to be moving so I called my wife. We grabbed our cameras and began to take video and photos of the object."

A group of images was submitted in a single file; and one video was submitted with the MUFON report, which was filed on October 6, 2012.

Diamond-Shaped UFO Reported At 500 Feet Over Missouri Town
Roger Marsh

A Missouri couple at Richmond reported watching a diamond-shaped object hovering with a single light about 500 feet off of the ground about 10:19 p.m. on October 5, 2012, according to testimony from the Mutual UFO Network (MUFON) witness reporting database.

The couple was about three miles outside of Richmond on 210 Highway when the object first appeared as an "extremely bright, low light."

"At first it appeared to be hovering," the reporting witness stated. "As we got closer it started to slowly move southwest. The object was only 500 feet off of the ground. It had four lights in the shape of a diamond and had a bright light on the nose."

As the object moved overhead, the couple pulled over for a better look.

UFO Activity At Nuclear Weapons Sites:
An Overview
By Robert Hastings
www.ufohastings.com

Robert Hastings says: "I am now a regular contributor for the MUFON UFO Journal with a column titled 'UFOs and Nukes'. The organization's management has given me permission to post past articles here at The UFO Chronicles, in the spirit of 'spreading the word' about the UFO phenomenon's well-documented link to nuclear weapons. Here is my September 2012 offering."

As noted in last month's column, over the past 39 years I have interviewed more than 130 former or retired U.S. military personnel regarding their involvement in one or more UFO incidents at nuclear weapons facilities. My September 27, 2010 press conference in Washington D.C.=97during which seven U.S. Air Force veterans discussed UFO incursions at various ICBM sites and one Weapons Storage Area=97was streamed live by CNN=96see below:

<http://tinyurl.com/3ffchjg>

I plan to include this link in future columns so as to provide the widest possible exposure for the very important witness testimony presented in it. If World War III had erupted during the perilous Cold War era, some of the individuals appearing at the press conference would have launched nuclear missiles, under presidential order, to set that tragic catastrophe in motion. Significantly, these same persons are now divulging a dramatic and important fact: UFOs have monitored our ICBMs on an ongoing basis and have, on occasion, disrupted their functionality, at least temporarily.

If this were not enough, Soviet Army veterans and now-available government documents from the former U.S.S.R. confirm that such incidents also occurred in that country during the same dangerous period in human history. In other words, as dubious as this claim may seem to some, it appears that outside observers, possessing vastly superior technology, have kept a close eye on international affairs during the Nuclear Age and have taken, for whatever reason, actions apparently designed to get the attention of the powers-that-be in both the U.S. and Russia. Moreover, fragmentary reports suggest that other nuclear powers, including Great Britain and France, have experienced UFO activity at their nuclear test sites as well.

Declassified At Last: Air Force's Supersonic Flying Saucer Schematics

Officially, aliens have never existed but flying saucers very nearly did. The National Archives has recently published never-before-seen schematics and details of a 1950s military venture, called Project 1794, which aimed to build a supersonic flying saucer.

The newly declassified materials show the U.S. Air Force had a contract with a now-defunct Canadian company to build an aircraft unlike anything seen before. Project 1794 got as far as the initial rounds of product development and into prototype design. In a memo dating from 1956 the results from pre-prototype testing are summarized and reveal exactly what the developers had hoped to create.

The saucer was supposed to reach a top speed of "between Mach 3 and Mach 4, a ceiling of over 100,000 ft. and a maximum range with allowances of about 1,000 nautical miles," according to the document.

Derrick Pitts, Astronomer, Wants UFOs Studied With Science
Lee Spiegel

Nothing kills a career faster than being branded a kook, and in many circles, that's what you are when you admit you've seen a UFO.

The stakes are raised, of course, if we're talking about academic communities, and even more so among astronomers -- people who study the skies.

Many astronomers say there's nothing of any scientific merit that could result in the study of UFOs.

With the career suicide stakes for astronomers so high, some UFO researchers believe many of them are hesitant to step forward. Certainly, the Air Force's Project Bluebook -- the last officially announced government study of unidentified flying objects -- concluded that five percent of the cases investigated could not be immediately explained away.

Nevertheless, one nationally renowned astronomer, Derrick Pitts, tells The Huffington Post that it might be time for a thorough study of unexplained aerial phenomena.

Never did tough did it? In fact the initial design requirements asked for these specs. The engineering indicated differently.

Nothing new here. These 'just released' drawings have been around for years. Never built therefore never flown. Highly unstable anyway. See the video of the Avro Canada 'Flying Saucer' (Avro Car-under USAF contract) that never got more than 4 feet off the ground at Malton outside of Toronto.

We have to re-hash this same stuff about every 5 or 6 years.

Cue the Nazi Flying saucer and the Horton glider.

Ancient Aliens Debunked

I know the flaws in Von Daniken's works have been exposed years ago - all that stuff about UFO landing strips (since when have saucers needed runways?) and models of ancient planes which are obviously stylised birds.

But I've fondly clung to the unsolveable mysteries of gigantic stone monuments that couldn't be moved without some lost technology.

So when I settled down to watch this debunk of Ancient Aliens I expected it to be the usual narrow minded cherry picking from the sceptical crowd who can't think out of the box.

I haven't watched all three hours yet but I found myself agreeing with just about all I viewed.

I'm still not totally convinced that 800 ton blocks could have been moved just by brute force and cut to such precision with primitive tools - but who knows?

I certainly don't anymore.....

I do know it doesn't need aliens to make complex crop formations so maybe the good old human race can rustle up a pyramid or two with enough slaves to do the work.....

For once I consider a sceptical piece provides a very valid 'balance' to a controversial TV series.

But I'm interested whether others think so too.

Like I'd said on this list before, the Pyramids were built by very, very, very, smart Africans in Egypt.

This documentary is awesome. It explains a lot that had been tossed at the public without proper scientific analysis.

There are some things that I would question but the producers even cover that they can't explain everything.

Good job of doing what real investigation should be.

One thing that they missed is what about Gazoo the friendly space alien that helped out Fred Flintstone whenever he was in a jam? :)

Best,

There are some puzzles that remain for me, Dave.

The gold airplane found in Central America proved to be over a thousand years old. The wooden model found in an Egyptian Tomb.

http://www.world-mysteries.com/sar_7.htm

Each is of course is said to be copies of birds or perhaps butterflies; ignoring the fact that not one bug or bird on the planet has a vertical stabilizer, with horizontal stabilizers as well.

One culprit might fit the bill, a certain species of the flying fish:

<http://animals.nationalgeographic.com/animals/fish/flying-fish/>

The gold trinket is a delta winged artefact and has a cockpit and a windshield right where it should be.

Paintings and wood cuttings from hundreds and thousands of years ago remain to haunt us with depictions of objects flying through the skies without the usual angel appearance.

Archaeology is constantly coming up with evidence of human occupation of the Americas long before the ancestors of the Indians showed up.

3,000 year old Egyptian mummies with cocaine in their remains as well as tobacco. Where did the banana come from? Who dug the tributaries on the Amazon River? Once thought to be natural even though they are straight, they now find that many were dug and are not natural.

From space one can see huge tracts of the Brazilian jungle was once cultivated and irrigated. Estimated population of that area; 99 million several thousands of years ago.

Lots of mysteries. Few answers.

>>So let's go,

Hi Don, Everyone!

From the November, 2000 'Popular Science' cover story about the USAF's secret nuclear powered manned orbiting flying saucer that closely resembles the secret supersonic VTOL Project Y designed and built 60 years ago by Avro Canada, as well as testimony from inside sources/expert witnesses and leaked or declassified primary documents now available to researchers and the public, this flying saucer project was NOT dropped but continued to be developed and be test flown in secret, initially in the sky over Toronto. The disk shaped AvroCar "hovercraft" served well as a cover for Project Y which was built at a separate hanger in Malton, a suburb of Toronto, that was protected by armed guards and was out-of-bounds to all, including other Avro engineers except for people like U.S. Army's General Arthur Trudeau

General Trudeau not only initially funded Avro's John Carver Frost's flying saucer projects (I have an actual photo of them taken during one such visit to Avro Canada) and who headed the first U.S. plans to establish a manned base on the Moon (Project Horizon, well before President Kennedy kick started Apollo) but who also is alleged to have provided Frost, and Canadian scientists and engineers in Ottawa, with alien hardware recovered from crashed flying saucers, including one that was shot down just outside Washington, D.C. in the summer of 1952 when fighter planes were sent up many times over several days to intercept these UFOs flying over the U.S. Capital...

The fact that the public is not any wiser today and is still ignorant about these man-made flying saucers spacecraft but which were paid for out of the pockets of American taxpayers (recall that 2.3 trillion dollars could not be accounted for by Pentagon accountants after 'Popular Science' broke the story) is because of the great success of this ongoing cover-up and disinformation campaign to deflect attention from the truth.

Nazi flying saucer technology, and even Canadians with help from the "Boys Topside" - who could freely land and take-off from the secret CFB Suffield, Alberta spaceport built in 1954 - also had much input in the success of the USAF's supersonic flying saucer that evolved to the nuclear powered manned orbiting spacecraft which 'Popular Science' (and others, such as physicist and UFO researcher Bruce Maccabee) wrote about.

Perhaps you haven't had time to view the complete documentary yet Don.

But gold 'plane' artifact controversy is covered fully here - scroll through to the 1 hour 21 min mark.

I think the narrator does a reasonable job of debunking it as an aircraft but you might disagree.

Generally though I do agree Don that there are still plenty of mysteries yet to be solved which I guess is what one would expect in a infinitely complex universe.

But this TV series in my view seems over simplified in its explanations - not so different from the religious lobby who say 'God did it'.

This crowd say 'aliens did it'

I finally got around to watching the video. On the whole, it was good and I think it should be watched by anyone who has seen the Ancient Aliens series. Some reasonable alternatives to alien origins were presented. But I think some of its conclusions are also unlikely given information not discussed by either source.

Llyod Pye makes the point that given the three Great Pyramids were constructed in about 100 years, it would have required fitting a stone every 8.5 minutes, 24/7, with no down time. The stones are from 10 tons up to 50 tons. Could the proposed internal ramp have handled such a rate? Assuming the man-power was available, laying one stone of that size every 8.5 minutes for 100 years is hard to imagine without the use of some additional sophisticated technology.

<http://www.lloydpye.com/flash/12-megaliths.swf>

Pye also discusses the stonework at Sacsayhuaman, Peru. The following is largely quoted from his page at

<http://tinyurl.com/8dwjpos>

Archaeologists say that hard rock hammered the stones into shape and polished them. When granite is polished, the softer elements in the rock wear down first, leaving microscopic and near microscopic quartz crystals protruding. When a "wedging" technique is used (when a wedge is fed into a crack or groove in the stone and used as leverage to fracture it), the direction of the fracture can't be controlled.

Dr. Ivan Watkins, a Professor of Geology at St. Cloud University in Minnesota says that pounding, hammering, grinding, polishing with abrasives, and wedging, just don't match up with what he sees under the microscope. The stone is smooth, microscopically slick and even. The explanation given by Watkins is that heat can melt quartz fragments into a glaze that fills in the irregularities, like a ceramic glaze. The exact same sort of "melting" effect is produced by modern "thermal disaggregation" technology, essentially the focused heat found in lasers, which can be used to cut stone. So who did it, ancient aliens or humans?

Switching topics, I thought if his argument about UFOs in art had been taken as far as it could have been, it might have supported the Ancient Aliens interpretation. He argues that medieval art is nothing but religious art, i.e., a circle of angels was drawn to look like a disc. But where did the idea of a circle of angels come from? One could argue that an actual disc object inspired the circle of angels, since the latter was something more familiar to religious artists. So who inspired the drawings, aliens in craft or religious imagery.

Switching topics again, with respect to the Mitchell-Hedges crystal skull, he talks of the deceit surrounding the skull's acquisition and movements, but fails to mention a physical analysis by Hewlet-Packard which found it was made out of a single block of natural quartz crystal. There were no tool marks under high magnification, so it was not a modern creation. The conclusion was it had been made by hand over a period of several generations. Also, the jaw was a separate piece that had been cut from the same crystal - apparently almost impossible to do. One scientist concluded that for technical reasons, the skull should not exist. Any errors would have required starting over. Who had the expertise to grind and polish a single block that size - ancient aliens or multiple humans over generations?

I wasn't convinced of the Catfish similarity. Cat fish have their fins at mid body (called mid-wing on airplanes) not on the bottom. The vertical 'fin' is too oversized to account for fish similarity, artistic license aside.

Asking why the wings were curved for the flying model is like asking why a kid's toy is not aerodynamic. Necessary for a slow model, not for a jet. A 3/4 inch, 4x8 sheet of plywood will fly at 30 miles an hour from the short runway of a 69 Meteor car roof I learned this 40 years ago.

The curls in front might depict turbulence ahead of the leading edge but I doubt it. The vertical 'stabilizer' intrigues me more than anything. Do the lines denote stiffeners. Where's the dorsal fin if this is supposed to depict a fish. They all have dorsal fins.

A lot of the explanations offered were good. Not this one. Also the chisel explanation was glossed over. They added this metal and that to make their chisels, the same metal used the same as tie-clips to hold stone blocks together.

I watched a documentary once where these same ties were discussed because metallurgical engineers wondered how these people managed to come up with this alloy which modern metal making didn't invent at Bethel Steel until 1939.

This place on the ancient shore of Titicaca was dated at 17,000 years in this doc.

I don't know if this accurate. But if so how did metal workers back then come up with chisels hard enough to work stone without chisel marks?

Just more to confuse things.

Hi Dave, EBK, List,

I agree. I found it extremely informative, factual, and eye-opening. My main problem with the "Ancient Aliens" series (before I watched the debunking) has been their insistence that only aliens from other solar systems, dimensions, etc, could be responsible for the perceived anomalies that the series has studied and discussed.

There was certainly never any consideration given to the possibility of an ancient homegrown civilization, perhaps sixty million years older than our own. I know that's not as much a problem for most of the List as it is for me.

"Ancient Aliens Debunked" is important evidence that those who have taken the time to watch the "Ancient Aliens" series should study.

Visitors From Elsewhen: Time Travelers Among Us
By Scott Corrales (c) 2012

Time travel is a subject that has fascinated all manner of authors and given rise to a galaxy of speculation. Whether it=92s the romantic, non-technical treatment of Somewhere in Time (1980), the high-tech action adventure of the Time Tunnel (1968) or contemporary projects like Looper (2012), the thought of going back to visit our collective historic past =96 or the subjective personal past =96 remains a gripping concept, and one that is surely to remain with us for generations to come. The ability to go back in time and change situations (the rise of fascism) or view historic events (the fall of Rome) has also fueled a number of plots that have become legendary in the realm of science fiction, which has explored the paradoxes of such endeavors.

But what does science have to say about this elusive, seductive subject?

The Truth Is Out There... UFO Expert Nick Pope Talks About Aliens
By Nick Pope

I've been involved with the subject of UFOs since 1991, but unlike most people with this interest, this didn't result from my having a sighting and it wasn't a hobby - it was my government job! I worked for the Ministry of Defence for 21 years, from 1985 to 2006. I had a varied and enjoyable career, but by far my most bizarre MoD job was one that I did from 1991 to 1994, when my responsibilities included researching and investigating UFOs.

The MoD's UFO project dates back to the Fifties and the wonderfully-named Flying Saucer Working Party. This had been set up in 1950 by MoD's Chief Scientific Adviser, the great radar pioneer Sir Henry Tizard, who said that UFO sightings should not be dismissed without first carrying out some sort of proper scientific investigation.

In fact, the Working Party's conclusions were sceptical. Their final report - issued in 1951 - concluded that UFO sightings were misidentifications, hoaxes or delusions and they recommended that no further investigations be carried out. But in 1952 the MoD was reluctantly dragged back into the subject after a wave of sightings during a large NATO exercise, where UFOs were seen by numerous RAF pilots, and tracked on radar, performing extraordinary speeds and manoeuvres.

2012 Brazilian Crop Circle Season Starts Early

From: A. J. Gevaerd - Revista UFO <aj.nul>
Date: Sun, 14 Oct 2012 11:00:24 -0300
Archived: Sun, 14 Oct 2012 20:27:34 -0400
Subject: 2012 Brazilian Crop Circle Season Starts Early

Dear Listers:

About two weeks earlier than expected, a surprising and immense crop circle was found yesterday in the State of Santa Catarina, in the south of Brazil. Again, for the fourth year since 2008, the formation was found in the small city of Ipuacu, some 320 miles west of Florianopolis, the state's capital. Strangely, the phenomena has never been registered in Brazil prior to 2008, and since then the crop circle season in the country starts every year in the last days of October and first few days of November. The place of their manifestation is always Ipuacu and its surroundings.

The first formation of this year was confirmed by residents of the city and is a beautiful and exotic pattern. It has an immensely more complex shape and is significantly bigger than the formations of the previous years. The figure was found in a fresh green wheat field and is a perfect geometric composition. The agraglyph is composed of a larger circle of about 130 feet in diameter of folded plants in one extremity, circled by nothing less than 30 smaller circles disposed as satellites with plants in their interiors alternately folded clockwise and counter-clockwise.

This set is connected by a 'corridor' of folded plants toward another set of two concentric rings and another circle inside. No aerial photos have yet been taken, nor any analysis of the plants on the ground have been made. Also, no ufologists have been able to assess the formation until the present moment -- which is something that the Brazilian UFO Magazine Team is preparing to do in the next few hours by visiting the location.

With this first agraglyph of 2012 it becomes evident that this year's season will be intense. Very curious is the fact that the mystery has a constant address to manifest, precisely around the city of Ipuacu, nowhere else in the country. All of the agroglyphs registered in Brazil are situated some 20 miles radius from that town, making it clear that the manifestations have something related to that specific location.

Watch the agro glyph video:

I find it sad that people are still discussing the alien autopsy hoax. I've seen better effects in cheap slasher films.

Dr. Leir is trained as a doctor, not a special effects technician. That's why magicians are important when studying alleged psychics=97just because you are trained in a branch of Obama Surpressing UFO Files That Could Help Americans?

by Sharon Katz

In 2009 Britain's Prime Minister, David Cameron, promised to confirm the existence of UFOs and extraterrestrial life. He vowed to publish any secret files that may exist on alien life forms once he became prime minister.

Mr. Cameron is not the only political leader that seems to know about alien life. According to the Huffington Post United Kingdom, several members of President Obama's administration want to be open and honest with the public about similar alien life files. But President Obama has not released any information that former government whistle blowers say have denied Americans superior medical and clean energy technologies of extraterrestrial origin.

In 2009, Dr. Edgar Mitchell, the sixth man to walk on the moon, said that the American government has had contact with extraterrestrials on multiple occasions and that these were ongoing.

Why 'Disclosure' Probably Won't Happen

From: Ray Dickenson <r.dickenson.nul>

Archived: Tue, 16 Oct 2012 07:57:17 -0400
Subject: Why 'Disclosure' Probably Won't Happen

Hello List,

A recent news article is on "The Best Way to Find Aliens: Look for Their Solar Power Plants" at:

<http://tinyurl.com/995tzzd> and it mentions the Kardashev Scale of civilizations. See:

www.perceptions.couk.com/uef/define.html

Which in turn reminded me that although "this classification ignores any predictions concerning the detailed nature of future civilizations (which are bound to be wrong) and instead focuses on aspects that can be reasonably understood by the laws of physics, such as energy supply" - there's a probable trait of all successful inter-species/inter-stellar civilizations which is bound to impinge on the central claim made by the Disclosure Project. I.e. that our civilization is 'ready' for disclosure and wouldn't be affected by it.

Wrong! IMHO If, as expected, interspecies civilizations are forced to value literal truth and abandon fiction/lies/deceptions of all kinds in order to prevent lethal interspecies misunderstandings - then the people most affected on Earth will be those presently holding most power. That is, the politicians, lawyers, priests, corporate advertizers etc, whose trades depend on fictions of all kinds.

And, if you pursue the logic of that imperative, even police and military forces would be verboten: see:

www.perceptions.couk.com/advanced.html

So maybe don't expect 'Disclosure' anytime soon, seems we have a lot of growing-up to do first.

Cheers

Ray D

UK Blocks 'UFO-hacker' McKinnon Extradition To US

Home Secretary Theresa May has announced that Gary McKinnon, who was accused of hacking into the Pentagon's computer network, will not be extradited to the US. The move is due to the risk of McKinnon ending his own life.

The home secretary said that there is no doubt McKinnon is seriously ill, that she carefully examined the medical evidence and took legal advice, concluding that his extradition would pose such a high risk that he would end his life, which restricts his human rights.

McKinnon, 46, suffers from Asperger's syndrome. If convicted in the US, he could face up to 60 years in jail.

The case of McKinnon has become the first time the British government has refused to extradite someone across the Atlantic since the existing UK-USA extradition treaty came into force in January 2004, The Independent reports.

What needs to happen to us as a civilization is nicely described in Enrique Barrios' book "Ami - Child of the Stars".

<http://www.ebarrios.com/indexEn.htm>

It is said to be an account of a real contactee experience disguised as fiction. A young boy meets an ET on a beach, befriends him, and is taken to visit another world so he can see a more ideal society in action.

He is told that we lack 'solidarity', defined as "the energy of love, affection and kindness. If a world's level of solidarity is low, there is unhappiness, hate, violence, division and war.
If, at the same time, there is a high level of the capacity for destruction...

If a civilisation hasn't developed 'solidarity', wisdom or kindness while developing a high level of scientific knowledge, it will end up using that knowledge against itself. That happens long before a civilisation could travel to other worlds. The Universe doesn't 'commit suicide,' it doesn't permit anything to last very long that goes against the highest purpose of the Universe, life itself."

It was an enjoyable story and, whether fiction or not, it's lesson feels like truth.

Hi William,

Good story. However I should make it clear that 'non-fiction interspecies civilization' was an expectation arrived at by some long-term evolutionary analysis - using the 'real evolution' of Wallace, not Darwin.

As you probably know there's always at least three credible evolutionary forecasts - short, medium and long-term. I.e you can attain short-term 'success' by going carnivorous and gaining in size and speed, but predators tend to go extinct at every 'horizon' (drastic change in conditions as seen by archeology) while their prey usually survive and adapt, so adaptability and intelligence are called for in the medium term.

What the long-term demands is a matter for conjecture but if it involves getting along with more advanced - and technically powerful - beings of (probably) entirely different evolutionary backgrounds then it seems that tolerance, tact and complete sincerity will be necessary. I.e. we wouldn't be well placed if caught out in deception - even once.

So evolutionary theory tells us that humans like our present politicos, media, lawyers etc will die out - or else they'll get us all killed.

BTW - have read a few attempts at this, mostly unconvincing: As an exercise try to imagine a conference between a carnivore, a herbivore, a hive-entity, a vegetable being and a plasma intelligence. See any common ground there?

Cheers

Circles In Brazil Become Police Matter

Crop Circles In West Santa Catarina State [Brazil] Turn Into Police Matter

Owner of wheat field in Ipuacu, where some "agroglyphs" appeared, wants compensation
By Darci Debona - Diario Catarinense

<http://tinyurl.com/cu28571>

The appearance of circles on wheat crop fields from West for the fifth year in a row ended up becoming a police matter. The owner of the area where the so-called agroglyphs were found, Liana Faccio, made an incident report at the Ipuacu police station. According to her what damaged her wheat had nothing to do with Aliens and was made by Earthlings, from whom she will demand compensation.

She even hired a watchman to stop curious people from causing even further damage to her wheat field. Vilson Cunico is earning from U$25 to U$30 a day to watch the field. Sometimes he needs the assistance of Dercilio Bernardes, who works for the Faccio family. Bernardes stopped being a farmer to become a watchman.

Regarding the 30 circles which occupy an area around the same size as half of a soccer field, Cunico is emphatic:

- It's no big deal, it's just stomped wheat.

On Monday the deputy from Abelardo Luz county, Joao Luiz Miotto, along with investigator, Renan Gatti, were in the place. And despite the fear from a few people who even thought of Aliens the policemen have no doubt.

- It's a prank - stated Miotto.

- The people who did this have nothing better to do - completed Gatti.

They claim those responsible for the damage to the crop will be identified and punished. At the site they saw evidence that at the center of the circles there's a difference in texture, showing that the point was used as an axis point to stomp the wheat, probably with a rope and a plank.

Besides the due compensation, those responsible - who may be wanting to create an air of mystery among the community - may also answer for the crime of damage to property, with a sentence ranging from six months up to a year in prison.

Other circles appeared in Ouro Verde, Bom Jesus and Xanxere

The president of the Astronomy Study Group from the Federal University of Santa Catarina (UFSC), Adolfo Stotz Neto, said the agroglyphs found on the West are just a prank, just as happened on the 1970s in Europe. He joked that these signs always show up in wheat crops and leave no mark beyond the stomped plants.

There is no evidence of something burnt by the action of any energy, and there are no records in other crops. He claimed the Universe may be inhabited, but this remains an unconfirmed question.

Other crop circles have also been made in Ouro Verde, Bom Jesus and Xanxere, neighbor cities to Ipuacu. In all cases they are made in wheat crops, where the formations are better seen. Besides that, the vandal acts are promoted on weekends and holidays, when the families who work day by day, the whole week, take their time to rest and go on vacation. [Friday, October 12th, was a National Holiday in Brazil] That is, these Aliens are from the West indeed.

Interview: "This is an act of vandalism", claims Liana Faccio, owner of the field

The owner of the crop field where the circle appeared, Liana Faccio, spent the weekend trying to stop curious people from damaging her crop even further. She is adamant that everything is just the making of human beings and wants compensation for it.

Diario Catarinense (DC) - How did you came to know about the circles?

Liana Faccio - Someone saw them and told a worker of mine, who told me.

DC - What is your evaluation of what happened?

Liana - This is an act of vandalism. Someone trying to make the headlines. It's a waste of time. It's no joking matter, they are damaging other people's property. This weekend I made over 50 people who wanted to visite the site go back they way they came. Even a car eneter the cropfield. Don't they know that is private property?

DC - What measures did you take?

Liana - I made an incident report [at the polie station], put a watchman and sprayed a product to make the crop dry faster to harvest it earlier. I won't leave this here until the weekend, or it will become a circus. People from Concordia, Galvao, came just to see the circles.

DC - What has been your loss?

Liana - It must be over U$500, as I have lost around 30 bags, worth around U$15 each, as this was a wheat that would be used as seed.

DC - Will you ask for compensation?

Liana - I will ask for everything I have the right for.

Alpha Centauri B Has An Earth-Mass Planet!

From: Nick Balaskas <nikolaos.nul>
Date: Wed, 17 Oct 2012 00:22:11 -0400
Archived: Wed, 17 Oct 2012 11:17:40 -0400
Subject: Alpha Centauri B Has An Earth-Mass Planet!

Good News Everyone!

This announcement of an Earth-size planet orbiting a Sun-like star so very close to us is just the news the world needs to inspire and motivate mankind in its next goal for space exploration - to build a "starship" and boldly set out with a crew to establish the first human settlement on this New Earth.

According to Ben Rich who headed the Skunk Works (which built the Pentagon's secret aircraft such as the Steath Fighter and other advance aerospace vehicles), "We also know how to travel to the stars." and "If you've seen it in Star Trek or Star Wars, we've been there and done that." If this is true, we do not need a 100 year feasibility study or wait until after we discover some new propulsion technology since this generation is ready to travel to the stars now!

The generally accepted view that a Earth-size rocky planet must not be too close or too far from its "sun" so that water could exist on its surface in liquid form and thus be an ideal world for Earth-like life (the so-called "Habitable Zone") is not really a valid one. For example, our Moon (a rocky world a little smaller than the Earth is also within the same region of the Habitable Zone as our world but has no liquid water on its surface. Also, just because the newly discovered Earth-like planet is much closer to Alpha Centauri B than Mercury is to our Sun is not necessarily "much too hot for life as we know it". If only one side of this planet always faces Alpha Centauri B (just like only one side of the Moon always faces the Earth), then it is possible that this planet may have a range of temperatures from extremely hot on the side facing its sun and extremely cold on the side facing away from its sun.

Alpha Centauri B Has An Earth-Mass Planet
By Keith Cowing
Posted October 16, 2012 6:00 PM

European astronomers have discovered a planet with about the mass of the Earth orbiting a star in the Alpha Centauri system - the nearest to Earth. It is also the lightest exoplanet ever discovered around a star like the Sun. The planet was detected using the HARPS instrument on the 3.6-meter telescope at ESO's La Silla Observatory in Chile. The results will appear online in the journal Nature on 17 October 2012.

Alpha Centauri is one of the brightest stars in the southern skies and is the nearest stellar system to our solar system -- only 4.3 light-years away. It is actually a triple star -- a system consisting of two stars similar to the Sun orbiting close to each other, designated Alpha Centauri A and B, and a more distant and faint red component known as Proxima Centauri [1]. Since the nineteenth century astronomers have speculated about planets orbiting these bodies, the closest possible abodes for life beyond the solar system, but searches of increasing precision had revealed nothing. Until now.

"Our observations extended over more than four years using the HARPS instrument and have revealed a tiny, but real, signal from a planet orbiting Alpha Centauri B every 3.2 days," says Xavier Dumusque (Geneva Observatory, Switzerland, and Centro de Astrofisica da Universidade do Porto, Portugal), lead author of the paper. "It's an extraordinary discovery and it has pushed our technique to the limit!"

The European team detected the planet by picking up the tiny wobbles in the motion of the star Alpha Centauri B created by the gravitational pull of the orbiting planet [2]. The effect is minute -- it causes the star to move back and forth by no more than 51 centimeters per second (1.8 km/hour), about the speed of a baby crawling. This is the highest precision ever achieved using this method.

Alpha Centauri B is very similar to the Sun but slightly smaller and less bright. The newly discovered planet, with a mass of a little more than that of the Earth [3], is orbiting about six million kilometers away from the star, much closer than Mercury is to the Sun in the solar system. The orbit of the other bright component of the double star, Alpha Centauri A, keeps it hundreds of times further away, but it would still be a very brilliant object in the planet's skies.

The first exoplanet around a Sun-like star was found by the same team back in 1995 and since then there have been more than 800 confirmed discoveries, but most are much bigger than the Earth, and many are as big as Jupiter [4]. The challenge astronomers now face is to detect and characterize a planet of mass comparable to the Earth that is orbiting in the habitable zone [5] around another star. The first step has now been taken [6].

"This is the first planet with a mass similar to Earth ever found around a star like the Sun. Its orbit is very close to its star and it must be much too hot for life as we know it," adds Stephane Udry (Geneva Observatory), a co-author of the paper and member of the team, "but it may well be just one planet in a system of several. Our other HARPS results, and new findings from Kepler, both show clearly that the majority of low-mass planets are found in such systems."

"This result represents a major step towards the detection of a twin Earth in the immediate vicinity of the Sun. We live in exciting times!" concludes Xavier Dumusque.

ESO will hold an online press conference offering journalists the opportunity to discuss the result and its impact with the scientists:

Well over 100 pages in this file are U.S. Government memoranda, electronic messages (teletypes), and other documents that deal with reports of UFOs. Some pages are very hard to read. The years run from 1947 to 1990. I recognize a few old chestnuts such as the 1976 UFO reports from Tehran, Iran and the 1980 UFO reports in Peru.

Hi Ray,

Your proposed exercise sets no bounds on species because we don't know where to set them yet. But in the "Ami" story, civilizations that had enough "solidarity" (i.e., love, affection and kindness) needed to become interstellar travelers are repelled by the idea of carnivores. We are told that a carnivore species would either destroy itself before becoming interstellar travelers, or evolve in solidarity.

The "Ami" story is said to have been written after an experience the author had in 1985. It was supposedly presented as a fictional tale because the author didn't want to be labeled a nutcase. In the story, he went to another planet where he saw people originally from earth as well as some other off-planet species. "Some of them looked very similar to us but others were very different. They had beautiful, strange expressions; large eyes, tiny mouths and noses that were sometimes mere dimples and faces that were olive coloured, rosy, black, dead white, yellow, and so on."

The shape of the faces described seems a lot like the familiar stereotypical face of the grey alien. We're just not used to hearing about the different colours. However, I have learned from an ET being speaking via a respected medium, that sub-species of this race have these colours, and that the race as a whole numbers in the trillions in our galaxy. The being says that his race prefers friendship in its relationships with others. Friendship was defined as "respect for another being, as one would respect self, but never interfering in the learning of another". This is compatible with the definition of solidarity in the story. (Incidentally, "never interfering in the learning of another" explains why we don't have disclosure forced upon us by the ETs.)

If we give credence to this kind of information, we can set some probable bounds on the physical ET species we are likely to encounter. These would likely be vegetarian humanoids who have evolved to get along with, maybe even have affection for, others. Our often instinctive suspicion that they will be a threat to humanity is due to our nature as carnivores.

William

><http://tinyurl.com/cu28571>

Dear Listers:

It is very unfortunate that a great opportunity is being lost here in so many ways.

First, there are only very few real UFO investigators devoting their free time to go to Ipuacu and check out the agroglyph by themselves. Yes, it is indeed a long way to Ipuacu from anywhere, but I've did that several times and it was worth all of them. Also, despite the fact that the phenomena is so intellectually provoking, it is strange that most of the investigators just decided not to pay attention to it.

However, it is even worst that the press is giving to the last formation found in Brazil a very negative image, due because both of the inaccuracy in the information collected by their newsmen and for making the mistake of not consulting people who have been engaged in the actual investigation of the phenomena. Instead of that, the press prints rumors.

Well, I spent 45 minutes this morning talking to the people at Diario Catarinense, the newspaper from Santa Catarina which article was posted here, located in the same state where the agroglyphs have been found. And to my complete amazement, I found out that none of the reporters I spoke with had a single clue about the phenomena. None! They simply know nothing about it, have never looked into it, and yet they publish a very mistaken piece about the phenomena. I had to go into details with them, giving them info about the crop circles that they never even dreamed about. They were all fully surprised.

As for the owner of the field where the formation was found, I discovered that the reason for her being totally upset with what happened is because she is strongly religious and simply denies even the smallest possibility that the formation in her land could be anything but "work of men, not something from God". Besides, as her father passed away tragically in an accident just last year, she became seriously superstitious and a closed person. Did Diario Catarinense checked that out? No.

Another example of the problems with this piece is that the policemen that gave their opinion about the formation just found last Saturday haven't even investigated it to speak about. They've done nothing. And, of course, none of them knows anything about the crop circle phenomena at all. Did Diario Catarinense checked that out? No again.

Also, the mentioned president of the Astronomy Study Group from the Federal University of Santa Catarina (UFSC), Adolfo Stotz Neto, who said the agroglyphs found in his own state "are just pranks", can't be taken seriously. His claim is nothing but hilarious and for several reasons.

Adolfo Stotz Neto is an astronomer who has absolutely no knowledge whatsoever about the crop circle phenomena. Actually, he expressed the most uniformed and unscientific opinion possible, because he didn't even care to leave his room at the university to go to the location where the agroglyph was found to check it out with his own eyes - and mind. This is the fifth year in a row that he denies going to the field to investigate the formations, and the fifth year in a row that he condemns the phenomena. Did Diario Catarinense checked that out? No again.

Besides, what kind of scientist gives an opinion about a strange phenomena, of any kind, without examining it? Further, his mention that "the agroglyphs are just pranks, such as what happened on the 70s in Europe" is itself a reason to make him look like a fool. So is anybody who doesn't have the necessary knowledge of the phenomena to condemn it fraud. I have defied Adolfo Stotz Neto to a debate and he never accepted. Why?

About it all, it is very sad that a great moment is being ruined here. A phenomena that is genuinely appearing all over the world, and as such is being investigated by serious people, has finally started appearing in Brazil and those in place to make it be properly investigated and then, if confirmed, make their investigations known to the public, are the ones trying to ruin the image of a very serious thing.

More Believe In Space Aliens Than In God According To U.K. Survey
Lee Speigel

More than 33 million U.K. citizens believe in extraterrestrial life, compared to just over 27 million -- less than half the country -- who believe in God.

That's the result of an online survey of 1,359 adults who were asked a variety of questions ranging from belief in alien visits to Earth, suspicions of UFO cover-ups, belief in extraterrestrials vs. belief in God, and whether or not men actually landed on the moon.

The survey, conducted by Opinion Matters, revealed the following statistics among those surveyed:

Dear Colleagues,

After three week of intensive production I am happy to announce a special radio event to be broadcast on October 19, 2012 (Friday) over Croatian State Radio 2 from 09:30 to 11:30 h (07:30 to 09:30 UTC Time).

Radio Station: Croatian State Radio 2

Streaming Link: <http://www.hrt.hr/streamf/PROGRAM2>

[In Croatian Language]

Title: Close Encounters Between Pilots and UFOs

Show: Hungry Ears

Subject: Program will present compilation of interviews with high ranking Air Force officers and officials of civilian aviation that were collected during the last 16 years.

New exclusive interviews will be aired.

The program will focus on military operations that monitored UFOs events over former Yugoslavia. Cases of aerial anomalies, pilot sightings, scrambled airplanes, aerial dogfights and radar-visual cases will be discussed. All the cases happened during 1970s and 1980s within the borders of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, the country that was dissolved in 1992

Special guests: journalist Giuliano Marinkovic and Mr. Sc. Josip Milosevic (master of aeronautics)

New exclusive interviews with some archived statements:

Colonel Milan Macek, ret. - a founder of the Croatian Air Force & former chief of Croatian Air Force

Lt. Col. Dragutin Prepust, ret. (Air Force)

Lt. Col. Trifko Radeta, ret. (Air Force)

Aldo Matic, former platoon commander of Radar station Kacarevo

Zlatko Veres, former chief of Air Traffic Control of former Yugoslavia

Dobroslav Dzeba, former civilian Pan-Adria Pilot

Damir Bokunic, former anti-aircraft 20/3 mm gun marksman at Airport Batajnica, Belgrade

Bell's, Books, And Candles
Michael Swords

The blog has been MIA for over three weeks [a long stretch for me], but with the burnout at the end of each Wheeling "session", the transition to Kalamazoo, and hosting seven UFO knuckleheads all last weekend, I'm not too apologetic. The blast effect of having those guys over has lessened [the kitchen sink is still a mess], and I'll try to start up a bit with the "meeting" as a beginning. If you recognize Kalamazoo's famous Bell's Beer in the photo above, you are not only a beer connoisseur but are having intuitions that certain UFOlogists can be bribed to be more congenial and talkative by the effects of good tasting alcoholic beverages.

The "illuminati" in secret discussion: Closest to camera Will Matthews, my local UFO friend; going around the table then: Robert Powell [book project administrator and MUFON Director of research], Richard Thieme [former MUFON and CUFOS associate and world traveling lecturer on subjects too esoteric to mention], Jan Aldrich [Mr. Sergeant Major of FOIAs], Don Schmitt [The only person who knows more about Roswell than the government], Jerry Clark [Of Whom there is no Whomer], and The Maestro of Abductions Scholarship, the esteemed Dr. Eddie Bullard. Note that no beer is on the table at the moment, so they were still making some sort of sense.

Kidding aside, the weekend was an intellectual and anomalistic blast.

Because it was at least interesting to me, I'll say a little about what we discussed in our saner moments.

Greer Reports On 'Possible ET Body'

October 19, 2012

Dr. Greer reports on research on possible ET body.

After many weeks of travel, we are back to report that amazing results have been obtained from our study of the small possible ET body which was discussed in an earlier blog post.

Dr. Bravo, Emery Smith and I traveled to the country that is now home to this small possible ET body and were able to successfully obtain extensive X-Ray and CT Scans of the entire body. We were also able to obtain DNA samples under sterile, surgical conditions. These DNA samples are now being studied by one of the world's top geneticists.

The X-Ray and CT scan show an intact, actual biological humanoid organism, without question. Astonishing 3-D images were able to be constructed of the body from the detailed CT scan, and we were able to see internal organs such as lungs and what I am fairly sure is a heart structure.

These images have just been examined by the world's foremost authority on skeletal abnormalities, dysplasias and fetal skeletal syndromes and he has stated that this being is unlike any known skeletal structure found in humans. We also know that it is not an ancient hominid, and while humanoid, not apparently human.

Both this expert as well as the radiologist who is head of the imaging center where all X-rays and CTs were done have stated that the bone density precludes the body being that of a 20-22 week aborted human fetus. There is just too much calcium in the bone for this being to have been the result of a fetus of that age. Both doctors feel that the being was post-natal at the time of death (that is had lived for some time outside the womb, if indeed a womb is involved...).

The procedures for the DNA studies are complex and time-consuming. Literally the state-of-the-art technology available on earth will be brought to bear on this study, and the team of experts are without a doubt the most advanced and professional team that could possibly be assembled. The DNA studies will take around 2 months, and possibly longer.

We hope to provide some of these results, and the detailed CT and X-ray images, in the film Sirius. (See Sirius.Neverendinglight.com)

The STAR team has provided film footage of our trip including the examination and surgical procedures performed on the small being, as well as the CT scan and X-rays to the A. Kaleka and the Neverendinglight team to use in the film Sirius.

We have also completed the Sirius Lecture Event in Santa Monica CA which was a great success and standing room only. A big thank you to all of you who came out to make that event a wonderful and historic event!

We have transferred to Neverendinglight hundred of UFO photos, video tapes, dozens of top-secret witness testimony and top-secret government documents as well as other materials for the film. At this point there is enough evidence in hand for a 20 part series! We hope the film Sirius will be completed in December, 2012 and I will be further interviewed by NEL in November prior to our Contact expedition to the CA desert Nov. 10-17.

I would like to thank all of you for the enthusiastic support you have provided to this historic film project Sirius. Without you, none of this would be possible!

Well this is a surprise to have US News discuss UFOs.

<http://tinyurl.com/9uogvhc>

In addition, yesterday, October 19, 2012 was quite a day for UFO news items that hit the wires like I've never seen before. It was an across the board peppering of very interesting stories without the ridicule and nonsense normally associated with the subject.

Methinks something is going on with government and media lightening up and realizing they were on the wrong side or neglected their responsibilities regarding UFOlogists, witnesses, and experiencers.

We'll see if something shakes from this tree.

[>FYI - Not For Discussion --ebk]

If no discussion of a rather provocative post will be forthcoming, how about some predictions?

I anticipate we will find -

The world authorities working on the project will never be identified. If they are, the definition of world authority may have to be 're-calibrated' to be more inclusive.

No one will offer a cogent explanation as to why the respected scientific and medical experts contributing to this effort seem so intent to forego their claims to Nobel prizes as well as the fame and fortune that would be the rightful due of anyone making such a once-in-a-lifetime discovery.

If investigators produced X-ray and CT images they did so without IRB authorization or the knowledge of institutional authorities because anyone working with an unknown potential extraterrestrial entity under conditions of less than full biological containment is a damn fool or an utter ignoramus. We have enough problems with pathogenic microbes in medical facilities already without deliberately risking bringing in new ones. So, who wants to get their CT scan after ET was in there? More to the point, a dead ET? See why the institution administrators might view such research as a potential public relations nightmare and be reticent to approve such work?

But, maybe one of the investigators just happens to have a CT unit in his basement so they don't need IRB approvals or have to reimburse anyone for use of the equipment/facilities, costs for technical personnel to operate the machine, and creation/interpretation of the images. Hope they don't live near me. And if an IRB did approve such work, I sure won't be going to that facility.

None of the work will be independently verified or ever be published in a reputable scientific journal. No, all the world authorities want to help Dr. Greer make a few bucks by producing a documentary.

The world will not come to an end on 21 December 2012. The documentary won't be finished by that date.

Let's see how I do.

Tyler

They never have anything about actual UFOs (though the local paper usually prints an article about the 1987 sightings), but some List members might be interested in it anyway as a cultural reflection of the UFO phenomenon - even if they can participate only from a distance.

In 2010, the local post office had a special postmark for the event, which I know a few ufologists were interested in. Alas, there was no such postmark last year. I have not been able to learn if one is planned for 2012 (or I would have sent this out sooner), but if there is one, I will let you all know.

RIP, Keepers Of The Faith
Billy Cox

In a thunderclap of synchronicity, two titans of the Skeptical world, the likes of whom we may never see again, passed away on the same day last weekend. Paul Kurtz, 86, and Leon Jaroff, 85 - co-founders of the Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal - crossed into the sweet hereafter together on Saturday from 367 miles apart in New York. Perhaps no two public figures have done more to stigmatize UFOs in the contemporary mind than these champions of secular humanism.

"Abracadabra! Hocus-pocus! Shazam!" Paul Kurtz and Leon Jaroff strived for decades to make UFOs disappear from the national radar screen/CREEDIT: mi9.com

Founded in 1976, CSICOP, known now simply as the Committee for Skeptical Inquiry, never met a UFO that wasn't Venus, swamp gas, a hoax, or induced by psilocybin. Every bit as doctrinaire as the religious fundamentalism it rightfully hammered, CSICOP was founded on the belief that nothing outside the five known senses can exist. Indiscriminate in its assault on The Great Taboo, CSI today continues to ignore radar data and pilot testimony, and dumps UFOs into the same laundry basket as tarot cards, creationism and phrenology. It's an enduring stench that holds powerful sway.

"We are", philosophy professor Kurtz once immodestly proclaimed, "the heroic defenders of science and reason. Our kind of saints are magicians and comedians. They show by sleight of hand how you can deceive."

Sci-Fi Writers Help Scientists Bridge Gap Between Fantasy
And Reality

By Eoghan Macguire, for CNN

Arizona State University recently launched the Center for Science and Imagination which will bring scientists, acclaimed sci-fi writers and artists together to work on "moon shot" ideas.

New research body at Arizona State University aims to bridge gap between the lab and sci-fi inventions

Center for Science and the Imagination (CSI) brings creative thinkers into collaboration with scientists

Academic, private corporations and non-profit stakeholders involved in the project

"Science fiction has a proven ability to inspire scientists and start technological innovation," sci-fi author says

(CNN) -- The transition of science-fiction gadgets into scientific reality is seldom a simple process.

More than 20 years on from the Back to the Future trilogy and a breakthrough in hoverboard technology is still eagerly anticipated -- not to mention anything close to "Doc" Brown's time-traveling DeLorean car.

But a new research body at Arizona State University is aiming to bridge the gap between the lab and the most evocative inventions of the sci-fi genre.

The Center for Science and the Imagination (CSI), which opened last month, will bring sci-fi writers into collaboration with inventors, engineers and technologists.

The goal is to create a network hub for so-called "moon shot" ideas, where scientists and artists can meet, converse and potentially put their ideas into practice. "We want to create conversations that cut across all these different boundaries and get people thinking in a more expansive way Ed Finn, CSI

Corporations, including computer-tech behemoth, Intel, and publisher, HarperCollins are already involved with the group's early endeavors.

"It's an unusual thing for a university to do because it brings together a variety of different people who wouldn't usually work together," says CSI director, Ed Finn.

"We want to create conversations that cut across all these different boundaries and get people thinking in a more expansive way about their own work."

One of the center's first projects has pitched acclaimed sci-fi writer, Neal Stephenson, with ASU professor and structural engineer, Keith Hjelmstad.

Stephenson is a chief proponent of the dark sci-fi genre, Cyberpunk, and has spoken publicly and passionately about arresting the malaise he believes has stunted the imagination of American science and science fiction.

The pair have so far probed the viability of a 20-kilometer tall steel tower that could launch vehicles into space more efficiently.

While this may not be a project that can instantly deliver practical results, the hope is it will encourage scientists and sci-fi writers to think big and pose each other challenging questions.

"This is really what the whole Center for Science and the Imagination is all about," says Hjelmstad.

"The writers of science fiction or any writers for that matter are very different from the usual crowd that I hang with."

"People from outside engineering will toss in very basic questions that specialists will often forget to ask, in this case 'how high is the tallest structure you can build?'"

"It was incredibly interesting for me to consider the open question: 'what can you do with structures?' which I hadn't really done before." "Science fiction has a proven ability to inspire scientists and start technological innovation Kathryn Cramer, Hieroglyph

As it turns out, Hjelmstad's concludes that a 20-kilometer tall tower is possible but would likely never be built due to the resources required (some 55 million tons of steel, he says) and financial costs involved.

For companies such as Intel however, solutions that can be immediately put into practice are not as important as the dialogues and ideas these inter-disciplinary interactions encourage -- for now at least.

The technology giant is working with the CSI to create the Tomorrow Project USA, a new website designed to engender expert conversation on the future of subjects such as sustainability, energy and education.

"In science fiction writing and the conversations, you can explore how the technology can impact in both positive and negatives ... showing us the kinds of future we want and [just] as importantly the kind we don't want," says Steve Brown, Intel's mystically titled technology evangelist.

"It also allows [us to play] with the moral and ethical consequences for the technologies as well," Brown adds.

Other projects in the pipeline at the center include a plan to design the ideal city of the future, drawing contributions from writers, engineers and urban designers.

In the coming years meanwhile, the talents of other artists including musicians, painters, actors, dancers and those in the performance arts will be harnessed, predicts Finn.

But as scientists, engineers and tech corporations benefit from opening their disciplines to exciting new ways of thinking, what's in it for the writers and artists?

According to Kathryn Cramer, a sci-fi author and editor of Hieroglyph -- an anthology project that will compile conversations of scientists and authors at ASU for publication by HarperCollins -- the center will help inform a more realistic and artistically rich genre of sci-fi.

"For authors, having the contact with [scientists] allows for further refinement of their ideas into something that is potentially more workable," says Cramer.

Some writers may already undertake such processes by themselves but by formalizing this relationship, Cramer believes a more fluent and rewarding conversation between science and sci-fi will arise.

Like Hjelmstad, Brown and Finn before her however, Cramer tempers expectations by stating that the practical implementation of these ideas will likely have to wait.

"I don't think you can guarantee that the project will come up with ideas that can be put towards venture capitalists and off we go tomorrow. But science fiction has a proven ability to inspire scientists and start technological innovation," Cramer explains.

"It's worth doing but one should bear in mind that, in the past, where there have been ideas that have worked there has also been a sea of ideas that didn't work."

Hello List

Just seen a New Scientist article

<http://tinyurl.com/bo2e3pb>

"Move Over DNA: Six New Molecules Can Carry Genes"!

which describes how the MRC Lab, Cambridge UK has worked on how "six XNAs (xeno-nucleic acids). DNA and RNA are made of a sugar, a phosphate and a base. The XNAs had different sugars, and in some of them the sugars are replaced with completely different molecules."

They've succeeded in finding enzymes that will work so "they were able to store information in each of the XNAs, copy it to DNA, and copy it back into a new XNA. In effect, the first XNA passed its information on to the new one - albeit in a roundabout way."

They now say "The cycle we have is a bit like a retrovirus, which cycles between RNA and DNA, ...The immediate question is whether these XNAs can be introduced into cells," says Farren Isaacs of Yale University in New Haven, Connecticut. Once the XNAs were installed, they could replicate and evolve on their own. "That would be remarkable."

And further: "This suggests XNAs might form the basis of life on other planets, where different environments led to different chemistry. "I would be surprised if we find truly extraterrestrial life that was based on DNA and RNA," Holliger says. "There might have been an XNA-world on a different planet."

Endeavour's Last Flight

On Friday, NASA's space shuttle Endeavour landed in Los Angeles, California, after completing its final flight, a cross-country farewell journey with flyovers and stops in Texas, Arizona, and several locations in California. Endeavour completed its last space voyage in June of 2011, and has since been undergoing a decommissioning process in Florida, preparing to be delivered to the California Science Center. Now that the shuttle is in Los Angeles, it will undergo a few weeks of preparation before being carefully towed through city streets to its new home. Collected here are a few snapshots of Endeavour's farewell flight. (Bonus: The last four images are 3D anaglyph images, for those with a pair of red/cyan glasses handy.) [38 photos + 4]

Former Nuke Missile Commander, Colonel Frederick Meiwald (Ret)
Passes Away at 70

Editor's Note =96 Colonel Frederick Meiwald (Ret) succumbed to cancer on Wednesday, Aug. 8, 2012. Amongst his many accolades was a 28-year career in the Air Force, in part as a Missile Combat Crew Commander (MCCC), serving with Bob Salas. We salute his service to our country as well as his courage in corroborating the incident where 10 nuclear missiles under his charge (Oscar Flight, Malmstrom Air Force Base, Montana) became inoperative during reported UFO activity over the launch control center (LCC) in March of 1967. -=96FW

In Memory Of Col. Frederick Meiwald
By Bob Salas
www.spiralgalaxy.org

Col. Fred Meiwald passed away in early August, 2012 after a battle with cancer. I knew Fred only during brief periods of his life but he is someone I won't soon forget. This remembrance is to honor a good friend and a man of character.

I first met Fred in 1966. We became linked up as a Minuteman I missile crew in October of that year, passing our evaluation with high scores. In fact, Fred and I were one of the top rated crews in the 341st Strategic Missile Wing, Malmstrom AFB, Montana.

=46From our first meeting, it was clear to me that he was a highly intelligent and dedicated officer. He had already served on missile crew duty with the Atlas I missile; working closely with him for nearly a year, I can attest to the fact that he was a consummate professional when it came to our duties as a missile crew.

Fred was with me at Oscar flight during our 1967 encounter with a UFO that disabled all ten of our missiles. I have documented that event in Faded Giant. Later that year, I became a crew commander and Fred was bumped =91upstairs=92 to the Wing Command Post and we sort of lost track of each other.

Hello List

An interesting report (or two) from Mexican TV News - and I recall Jaime Maussan screening some footage taken several years ago at the same site by an official web-cam positioned so as to watch the Popocat=3=A9petl Volcano for signs of eruption. On that occasion the UFO was a large circular one uidentical to the (miles-wide) UFOs filmed by NASA shuttle crews well above the atmosphere.

The length of the image is probably not representative of its true length.

The length of the image is more likely a result of the motion of the bright light and the exposure time of the camera: the light moved while the "shutter" was open (i.e., during the exposure time of a single frame of the video) creating an elongated image of the object+motion.

It could have been as long as it is wide, like a sphere (or square) and make an image such as shown.

If we knew the exposure time and the time between frames (generally very short), focal length, pixel size, distance to the top of the volcano, etc. we could get a size estimate... if its on the level!

Extraterrestrial UMMO Document NR 15 11/06/2003:

"Nine of our brothers and came to join the small expeditionary group that is currently on this planet. Their main task is the study of geological phenomena, prediction of earthquakes and volcanic eruptions. This was also my first mission on OYAGAA and I was selected by the Scientific Council of OUMMO for my work INNOYAGOOU (stratigraphic geology) and my theoretical contributions to improve the predictive model of volcano eruptions our OUDIO OEY which ejects regular columns of incandescent gas at heights sometimes exceeding 2000 meters.

We consistently monitor the craters of Etna and Panarea Italy from Colima and Popocatepetl in Mexico, and Bezimianny Chikurachki in Kamchatka, the Guagua Pichincha and Tungurahua in Ecuador, Kilauea Hawaii, Nyamuragira in Congo from Pago in New Guinea and the Piton de la Fournaise on Reunion Island. We try to regulate the eruptive phases of these volcanoes and put in place mechanisms for restraining crustal deformation in geological faults. Since 1972, a system of compensation tectonics has been gradually implemented successfully along the San Andreas fault peaceful to reduce the effects of seismic activity in the region. An imminent explosion of Mount Etna was also avoided by us in 1967 by creating an artificial cavity in the rock allowed to evacuate the excess pressure. This cavity, collapsing, was the origin of a new mouth of the volcano. Your brothers and Tazieff Tonani had been warned of this phenomenon by mail in April 1967. I myself have explored Etna, Stromboli and Panarea in November and December 2002 in order to place measuring instruments underground. We monitor more intensely disturbing Popocatepetl whose activity threatens the populations of major cities of Puebla and Mexico City DF We are not the only ones to do it."
